AS the WIND BLOWS

OUT of Hollywood come inklings that what we sometimes style the "production community" is thinking very long thoughts indeed as the reports of the "Wind" progress pile up, as they view more and more the trend to fewer and bigger and longer, especially longer, runs.

As was not so delicately forecast on this page some months ago, it is to be considered certain, come-what-so-ever, that Hollywood is to be set entirely agog by the success of "Gone with the Wind".

Evolution in the art has produced a big adventure. The motion picture is, to be sure, continuously under evolutionary processes. It is to be observed, however, that evolution, neither in the arts nor elsewhere, is assurance of progress; rather it is an assurance of change.

Mr. George Skouras remarked the other day that what might be good for a picture might not be good for the industry.

That will have to be tried by time and experience.

Hollywood, however, is made up of persons who are more concerned about pictures than the industry. Their part is inevitably more important, to them, than the whole. Nothing will be done about that. Probably nothing should be done.

Surely, though, the motion picture business, whether for better or for worse, is going to be considerably different.

THE screen, as the first of the mechanized arts, has had to move over and make room for competition that technology has brought, including such items as radio, impending television, the electric phonograph, just now reviving the record business beyond all old time highs, and such competitive entertainment as the cheap motor car has made so very available at every crossroad.

The motion picture, per picture and per seat, has been growing more and more costly, while the competition has been getting less and less expensive. The motion picture habit has been invaded, well near destroyed. Longer runs mean inevitably fewer attendances per customer per house. The motion picture tends ever to the place in the pattern once occupied by the roadshow which the screen well near extinguished years ago.

Less and less can there be selling of policies and the institutionality of the theatre with longer runs and roadshow type engagements. More and more the exhibitor will be finding himself to be becoming a landlord rather than showman.

The motion picture appears in many communities to be trending toward abandonment of the lower bracket entertainment market. This is the more remarkable in that, because of the repetitive nature of the film printing process, the lower and lower cost of the film stock and automatic machine processing, everything but the negative costs less today than ever before in the history of the industry.

Nothing, now that the "Wind" gross promises upwards of twenty millions, is to stay hectic Hollywood's determination to plunge into an era of the super-stupendous. The projects in the blueprint stage today, to be the announcements of a near tomorrow, will make the mere million dollar budgets of the old "A" picture period just a reminiscence.

This will be excitement, surely, adventure, surely, progress, maybe.

THE human eye can distinguish differences between some 2,000,000 colors and shades, according to the Inter-Society Color Council's findings. So far 7,044 colors and their shades have been listed and recorded—but it is alleged that a search of the standard dictionaries has found only 3,400 words for colors and hues. There is nothing amazing about that, in our opinion, because so many are positively unspeakable.

A TELEVISION HOPE

MUCH of current discussion of television, and apparently considerable of its planning for a bigger tomorrow, are based on presumptions that "sponsors," the radio euphemism for advertisers, will rush to enrich the new medium with their patronage.

Those rosy hopes may be realized, but they are merely hopes today.

No one knows whether or not television will actually prove to be an important advertising medium. In the period of its wider introduction while novelty appeal remains, the consumer probably will stand for most anything sprayed on the screen, just as once there were audiences for any picture which moved. But that novelty era will be while the audience is a-building and before mass circulation values are available to lure the advertiser.

But one can considerably doubt that the television consumer will ever stand for such "commercials" on the broadcast screen as he does with the radio. The deciding difference is likely to be found in the differing degrees of attention involved.

Radio gets, and requires, as much or as little attention as the listener cares to give, by ear.

But television demands attention by eye, which is either continuous absolute attention, or none. It also demands a relatively fixed position in one room. If attention strays the story is lost.

That demanding fixed attention will automatically make the recipient manyfold more conscious of the fact that he is being addressed by a salesman. It is possible he will not enjoy

Trade Practices

A questionnaire, this being a census year, sent out by the Independent Theatre Owners organization of Ohio asking major distributors to list those provisions of the defunct trade practice code which they have incorporated in their sales policies, brought the Association's convention national attention when the distributors answered, in detail. Particulars were given, as detailed on pages 12 and 13, of their stand on cancellation, short subject forcing and score charges.

Speakers at the convention, in Columbus on Wednesday and Thursday, included Henderson M. Richey, RKO exhibitor contact, who by a little application of arithmetic arrived at the conclusion that destructive criticism is costing exhibitors $15,000,000 a year, minimum, and Abram S. Myers, National Allied general counsel, who urged continuance of the fight for regulation by legislation and reported on the progress of the drive for passage of the Neely bill.

A TELEVISION HOPE

that. If he does not, television sponsorship will be a failure.

The answer is likely to be offered that television will evolve a technique of new super-subtlety. If it does, the customers will miss the selling point anyway.

RANKING high among the current technological curses of television is the diathermy machine. The diathermy device generates a flood of short wave impulses, theoretically just between terminals applied to the patient under treatment. The short wave heats up his interior, presumably with healing consequences if the interior requires heat. Also, however, for at least a long New York city block in radius, the short waves leak and flutter about to the utter confusion of any television receiver within reach.

The doctors have been experimenting with diathermy for about fifteen years, but in the last two it has been developing like a wave, until today it is estimated that there are no less than 40,000 machines in use in the United States. Most of them are concentrated precisely in the dense metropolitan areas where television must make its first stand.

Something can be done about it, but it is trouble no end.

Rights in the ether and elbowroom in an electrical and electrified world produce new problems, all undreamed in that happy long ago of the horse and buggy age.

Balaban's Outlook

BARNEY BALABAN, president of Paramount, on his return to New York from a meeting of Paramount theatre partners in Florida, discussed the outlook for his company and for the industry. He said that "the industry faces a very uncertain time." Mr. Balaban spoke on the effect of the war on the business, the threat of the Neely bill and the Government suit, and Paramount production plans for next season.

Of U. S. foreign losses, which he estimated between 25 and 35 per cent, Mr. Balaban said, "There is no practical way to recoup these losses. Talk of pressing the rest of the world market will accomplish nothing. It is contracting all the time. The day may come when 90 per cent of the revenue will have to come from the North American continent and pictures will have to be made accordingly."

The exhibition interests seem to be more concerned about the Neely bill than the distributors are, Mr. Balaban reported. He said this was perhaps due to the fact that the distributors are doing very little about it. He pointed out that Paramount theatre partners are making contact with important men in their territories and showing them what is wrong with the Neely bill.

"Paramount will produce next season 30 top pictures, the same number being made this year and the same number made last year," he said. "Improved operations, which have cut the overhead one-third, will enable the company to spend more money on the 30 big or per-cent films than was spent this year. The balance of the money available will go into as many B pictures as can be produced."

Mr. Balaban, speaking of television, said that Paramount held about a half interest in DuMont Laboratories but was merely watching television. "No one knows what form it will finally take."

At a meeting on Wednesday of the Paramount Pictures board of directors in New York there was declared a regular quarterly dividend of $1.50 a share on first preferred stock and 15 cents a share on second preferred stock. They are payable on April 1st to stockholders of record March 15th.

Singles in Chicago

BY FAR the most significant double-bill development in exhibition in five years was the unexpected appearance of singles this week in Chicago, long the country's "hotbed" of dual-feature controversy and probably the biggest market for doubles anywhere in the U. S.

With the city's exhibition power pretty evenly divided, numerically, between a strongly knit independent exhibitor structure and the Balaban and Katz Circuit, sporadic attempts by the independents to break the dual policy deadlock have been made for years, all unsuccessfully. Last weekend, out of a clear sky, B. & K. opened its Berwyn, La Grange and Central Park theatres on the westside with the single "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" at each. Eleven independents followed suit.

Honor Goldsmith, et al

FOR THEIR CONTRIBUTIONS to technology, 101 "Modern Pioneers" were honored by the National Association of Manufacturers, at a banquet, Tuesday night, in New York's Waldorf-Astoria. Among those who received scrolls were several who have had a hand in developing photography and radio: Dr. Alfred Norton Goldsmith, consulting engineer for sound films and radio; O. B. Hanson, chief engineer of National Broadcasting Company; Dr. Lee de Forest, inventor of the audion tube; Edwin H. Armstrong, inventor of the superheterodyne circuit and developer of the frequency modulation system; Leo Hendrick Baekeland, inventor of plastics; Vladimir Kosma Zworykin, developer of the photoelectric cell and inventor of television devices.

Radio Corporation of America men who were mentioned for experimental work in television were Harley Iams, Humboldt Leverentz, and Richard Orth.

Dr. Goldsmith, formerly vice-president of RCA Photophone and a vice-president and chief engineer for RCA, past president of the Institute of Radio Engineers and of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, and also formerly director of research for Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America, was cited by the association for his work, thus:

"His work in electrical engineering has provided new radio and motion picture equipment, increased employment, and low-cost entertainment to the public."

The dinner was the 14th of a series in February, held in key cities, in which scientists from local territories were cited. The Tuesday night dinner honored those from New York and New Jersey.

Fight Films

TWO WEEKS of circulation in the United States finds prints of the Negro Joe Louis-Chilean Arturo Godoy February 15th heavyweight fight films in the hands of as many individual distributors as there are states in the Union, not a single major or other distributor regularly engaged in interstate commerce being among them, a usual situation since July 31, 1912, when, as a result of the "mixed-race" fight film of Negro Jack Johnson's knockout of the public favorite Jim Jeffries, Congress passed the Sims law, making interstate transportation of all fight films illegal.

The majors find themselves in the position of being forbidden to distribute the pictures in the U. S. by the laws of the land, yet that same law evidently has been unable, for 28 years, to control "itinerants" and a few established states right distributors from getting prints across their state borders, although they frequently do pay fines of $1,000 when caught transporting them, but they go about the business of distributing them. The majors can handle fight films any other place in the world, as witness Universal's acquisition, on a percentage, of the Louis-Godoy films for all foreign countries (except U. S. possessions).

Although the gross income from all distribution will not reach anything like the $300,000 accruing to the promoters of the Johnson-Jeffries fight films, the promoters of the Louis-Godoy prints are expected to receive more than the usual income on a fight film from South America, the promoters cutting in on a percentage of Universal's grosses.

The Louis-Godoy fight film promoters were Jack Dietz' Sports Attractions, New York, which specializes in the filming of such events. Dietz buys filming rights from the promoter, who, in this case, was Mike Jacobs. Mr. Jacobs presumably gave the fighters some sort of a "piece."

Congress now has pending the perennial proposal to repeal the federal law prohibiting the state transportation of fight films.

Quigley Awards

DAVID OLIVER SELZNICK, it was announced Monday, will be toastmaster at the annual Quigley Grand Awards luncheon and presentation, in honor of Ray Bell, of Washington, Silver winner, and Lige Brien, of Ambrose, Pa., winner of the Bronze. The event will take place at Tuesday noon, March 12th, at Hollywood's Victor Hugo Restaurant. There, Hollywood will meet the nation's two outstanding theatre merchandisers for 1939, so adjudged January 30th, by 35 leaders from distribution and exhibition in the east who were judges for the Awards.

Disney Dollars

WALTER ELIAS DISNEY is about to become "big business," turning from his 17 years of self and private financing of the motion picture cartoons which he has been creating since his first, for Pictorial Clubs, Inc., in 1923, to public financing to the tune of some $3,800,000 of, probably, a six per cent preferred stock convertible into common stock on a share-to-share basis.

The investment bankers are on the way in at this very minute, Roy Disney, Walt's brother, currently discussing this first piece of public Disney underwriting with them in New York.

The transition of Disney Productions, Inc., is from "a little business" like "Three Little Pigs," little Mickey Mouse, cute Donald Duck, et al) "to a big business" (like the $2,000,000-budget, $8,000,000-gross 'Snow White' of two years ago, and his "Pinocchio," of today).

"Big business" also comes with the new $3,000,000 cartoon production studio now going up in Burbank, Cal.

The holding company for Walt Disney Productions is Consolidated Corporation, formed in 1938, with an authorized capital stock of $2,000,000, in the form of 200,000 shares of $10 par value certificates. (He's only 38 years old, and has been a commercial artist since he was 17.)

Bitzer in Peril

"BILLY" BITZER, the famed cameraman of the golden age of Biograph and the photographer of "The Birth of a Nation," was at midweek taken to New York's St. Luke's hospital in collapse from an undiagnosed malady.

Mr. Bitzer was removed there from a city hospital at the instance of Mary Pickford who discovered his plight. His condition was said to be extremely serious. Mr. Bitzer is now 67 years old. He succumbed while at work on a minor photographic assignment in a Second Avenue studio.

Recently Mr. Bitzer has been editing old film classics for the Film Library of the Museum of Modern Art.

Dies' Red-Hunting

BACKING UP the many publicly voiced threats of a "big probe" of "Communistic infiltrations" into Hollywood, given frequently of late to the press, by their chairman, Martin Dies, of Texas, the Dies Congressional Committee to Investigate Un-Americanism stated, formally and officially in Washington, on Tuesday, for the first time, that inquiries would be begun soon "into Communist and Nazi" activities in the film industry.

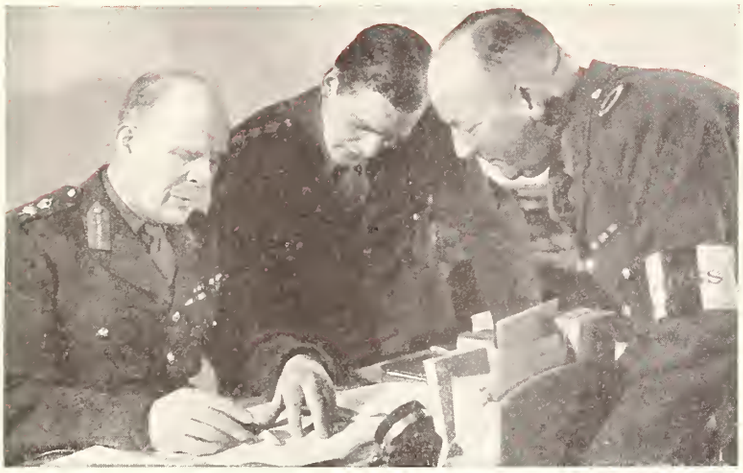
Meanwhile, the first exhibitor attack on Dies' Hollywood "red-hunting" came Wednesday, at the convention of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, in Columbus, from Martin G. Smith, president, who said: "I consider it a very gross injustice to point the finger at the picture industry. There are no more un-American people in this industry than in any other.

The "Hollywood League for Democratic Action" staged an anti-Dies demonstration at the Philharmonic Auditorium under the leadership of Dorothy Parker, Donald Ogden Stewart and Herb Sorrell.

The directors of the Screen Writers Guild on Monday night denied Mr. Dies' implication that Hollywood has "reds,"

James Roosevelt, head of Globe Productions, referring to the Dies' charges, said at a B'Nai B'rith dinner in Philadelphia last week that "they are all good citizens out in Hollywood."

Honoring "Andy"



BECAUSE Andrew R. Kelley has these last fifteen years been considered by the film folks of Washington so consistent and constructive a friend of the industry, in his just concluded employment as dramatic editor of the Washington Times, the Variety club there is sponsoring a dinner in his honor, Friday, March 8 at the Willard Hotel. Uncommon zeal is going into the promotion of the event. The vice chairmen —that means the committee which does the work, include Carter Barron, R. B. Keech, Sidney B. Lust, Hardie Meakin, John J. Payette, Edmund Plohn, and Elwood Seal.

SCORE CHARGES, FORCING OF SHORTS ARE OUT, MAJORS TELL EXHIBITORS

Convention Hears Report on Sales Policies; Richey Says Industry Attacks Cost Box Office Fifteen Millions Annually

With major distributors this week disclosing to Ohio exhibitors, on request, their attitudes toward certain selling policies which had long been the subjects of distributor-exhibitor controversies, the annual convention of the Ohio Independent Theatre Owners, to which statements of the policies were submitted, took on national import.

"Pete" Wood and Martin G. Smith had sounded the "war call" this week for the members of the Ohio Independent Theatre Owners Association, which they head, to assemble at the old Neil House, in Columbus, Wednesday and Thursday, to exchange ideas and learn what the other fellow is doing at his theatre to keep the intake ahead of the outgo.

On the agenda as the exhibitors convened early Wednesday morning were: Preferred playing time; cancellations; non-forcing of shorts and newsreels; advertising accessories; "Gone with the Wind"; Neely bill; non-theatrical competition; television; film tax suit; Bingo "and other rackets"; admission prices.

Policies Disclosed

From the standpoint of product and product policy, probably the most important piece of convention business was the report on the questionnaire sent to the eight majors in which they were asked to set forth their policies on the following matters: Cancellation privileges; whether features can be purchased without short subjects and without newsreels; whether all score charges have been eliminated.

Paramount, Warners, Universal and MGM disclosed that they have cancellation privileges ranging from 10 to 20 per cent, depending on the number and price-brackets of pictures purchased; RKO reported a ten per cent cancellation clause; United Artists said it had none because "the product of each producer is sold individually"; Columbia and Twentieth Century-Fox gave no specific figures.

All eight said that score charges, as such, have been eliminated. All said they sell features without shorts, and without newsreels in the cases of the five companies distributing newsreels.

The exhibitors, remembering the promises of most of the distributors, last year, during the ill-fated trade practice program conversations, set out to determine at this time whether they had adhered to the few concessions granted, of the many sought by the owners through a code for self-regulating distribution-exhibition. The "code" was declared illegal by Thurman Arnold, of the Department of Justice.

How the majors stand on the policies of cancellations, score charges, forcing of shorts and newsreels, is detailed, company-by-company, question-by-question, in the box in the adjoining columns.

Myers Gives Allied's Views

Abram F. Myers, chairman of the board and general counsel of Allied States, Wednesday told the convention that he deplores "the asininity of those in charge of the public relations of the producers-distributors who, in order to gain a temporary advantage as to only one of the industry's problems, have gone in for mass insult," in their anti-Neely bill campaign.

Regarding the pending Government anti-trust suits, Mr. Myers declared: "Don't forget that the curbing of chain buying power is the paramount effort behind all the Government's efforts. It is the main purpose of all the pending prosecutions." He predicted that the prosecutions "will be successful in a very substantial degree."

"I feel confident that the 'Big Eight' today would gladly submit to any curb on chain buying power, which admittedly has been abused, if they could be permitted to retain their theatres," Mr. Myers continued.

The earnings of the industry as a whole do not warrant increases in current film rentals, said Mr. Myers.

He reiterated that Allied is ready to renew negotiations on arbitration of trade disputes but that all grievances must be included and not only a few. He expressed the hope that the distributors would be willing to discuss such problems with Allied.

"Unreasonable clearance, arbitrary allocation of pictures, overbuying, oppressive exercise of chain buying power, withholding of product—all these call for amicable adjustment within the industry, now," Mr. Myers asserted. "The larger issues may not be finally settled for a number of years. In the meantime, Rome is burning."

$15,000,000 a Year

Not identified on the exhibitors' agenda was one of the most significant disclosures of the meeting, made by Henderson M. Richey, exhibitor field contact and "trouble-shooter" for RKO Radio, who said, "Destructive criticism is costing the motion picture industry $15,-

Majors' Stand on Score Charge, Cancellations, Forcing Shorts

The Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, headed by Martin G. Smith and P. J. Wood, called upon each of the eight large companies to cite its selling policies on cancellations, the forcing of shorts or newsreels with features, and on score charges. The majors' answers were disclosed this week to ITO members attending their annual convention at the Neil House, Columbus, O., as follows, in the order of the ITO's official announcement:

THE QUESTIONS:

1—What are the exact cancellation privileges?
2—Can features be purchased without short subjects?
3—Can features be purchased without newsreels?
4—Have all score charges been eliminated?

THE ANSWERS:

RKO Radio Pictures, Inc. (By NED E. DEPINET, Vice-President):

1—Our exhibition contract carries a 10% cancellation privilege.
2—Our features can be leased without short subjects.
3—Our features can be leased without news reels.
4—Score charges have been abandoned.

Paramount Pictures, Inc. (By J. J. UNGER, Division Manager):

1—On accounts that buy our entire feature output, our cancellation privileges are 20% for those accounts whose average price is less than $100; 15% for those whose average is $100 to $250; and 10% for those whose average is over $250.
2—Features may be purchased without short subjects.
3—Features may be purchased without newsreels.
4—Score charges, as such, have been eliminated.

United Artists Corp. (By HARRY L. GOLD, Vice-President):

1—We sell the product of each producer individually.
2—Because of our policy of selling each producer's product individually, our short subjects are sold individually.
3—We do not handle newsreels.
4—Score charges discontinued several years ago.

Vitagraph, Inc. (By CARL LESERMAN, Assistant to the General Sales Manager)

Mr. Leserman sent the ITO officers a copy of its printed "Merchandising Policy" which states:

1—An exhibitor who licenses all feature motion pictures offered shall have the right, if he be not in default, to eliminate proportionately among the several brackets, 20% of the total number of features licensed, if the average of the license fees for all features shall not exceed $100, and 10% if such average is in excess of $100.

NEELY BILL AIRED AT CONVENTION

000,000 a year, minimum." Mr. Richey said he had arrived at this unheard of figure—unheard of in this connection—by calculating that "it is entirely possible for every one of the more than 15,000 theatres of the U. S. to increase their gross business $3 or more a day", if the trade "pannings" cease, "if we stopped continuously reflecting to the public that everything is all wrong with the business."

"That figure of $15,000,000 wasn't picked out of the air," Mr. Richey told the exhibitors, emphasizing that, though much criticism of the industry might be justified, it should be kept "under cover."

"There isn't a man in this room who can't shout that much of the criticism of the business is justified," Mr. Richey admitted. "Granted. So what? Is it good business, in our effort to correct things that we feel are wrong, continuously to reflect to the public that everything is all wrong—and, if we do, should we be surprised if they join in with us, to take a few belts at the business themselves?"

The motion picture business is "a glamour business", Mr. Richey reminded the exhibitors, with success dependent upon the customer's conviction that the picture is good. Criticism, he added, "might be fun", but it is expensive.

Notes Neely Fight

"The next few weeks, with hearings coming on the Neely Bill, with the prosecution of the Government suit getting under way, and injured exhibitors falling all over themselves to file suits against those who they feel have unfairly injured them, is just as good a time as any, to start another line of endeavor," he said, "and that is to tell the public that, even though we have our internal differences . . . the great motion picture business is going ahead."

Mr. Richey said that, after examining product delivered in the last five years, he believed that exhibitors would agree with him that "a higher average of good product has been delivered since the 1939-40 season came on the market, than at any time for many years."

Theatres, too, are better than before, he said, with many remodeled in the last two years, and all having more to offer the public.

Double billing was attacked by RKO's director of exhibition relations. He said he wondered "how" the public appetite for more pictures could be whetted with such a policy.

"Nothing will go further toward re-cementing the public's confidence in our ability to entertain them," he said, "than a little confidence in ourselves, that we have good product, good theatres, and that we are willing to go out and shout from the housetops, 'It's a great show tonight'."

Percentages and Sundays

Martin G. Smith, ITO president, who called the convention to order, said the organization had figures to prove that its members played "more percentage pictures on Sunday than those of any other state." He placed in work other convention subjects, including the Neely Bill, with member exhibitors answering whether the bill would be harmful to the independent exhibitor; 16 mm. competition, which "has gained a strong foothold in Ohio"; television, to which "serious consideration should be given"; the state's film tax suit, "involving approximately $2,000,000, and touching the pocketbook of every motion picture theatre owner in the state"; Bingo—"rackets operated in many cities under the guise of 'charitable affairs' while, at the same time, police officials prohibit the operation of 'Bank Nite' and the giving away of premiums in theatres"; admission prices, Mr. Smith asking, "Does the experience with 'Gone With the Wind' mean that there should be an entire overhauling of the scale of admission prices," and saying that "it is certainly food for thought when, in Columbus, in three weeks, over 100,000 people pay an average of 82 cents to see a picture."

The toastmaster was Arthur H. Day, supreme court justice.

Connecticut Meeting

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut discussed complaints of small town exhibitors concerning the prohibition of placing weekly theatre programs in home mail boxes, at a luncheon-meeting last week. Arthur H. Lockwood presided. Herman M. Levy, executive secretary, reported on a federal law which makes it a crime to deposit circulars of any kind in home mail boxes without postage. Letter carriers have been authorized by a Post Office regulation to remove these circulars when found in boxes. The Bingo and budget committees also reported. A new meeting was scheduled for March 19th at Ceriani's.

The new legislative committee of the Allied Theatres of Connecticut met with president A. M. Schuman last week and made their report Tuesday. Allied has also circularized all independents in the territory on the new grievance committee, headed by Joseph F. Reed, which extends its services to members and non-members alike.

E. Thornton Kelly has become field representative of Allied of Eastern Pennsylvania in a membership drive.

Milwaukee area exhibitors will request protection on clearance over the new $30,000 drive-in theatre being erected in the town of Brookfield, according to reports following a zone meeting of the Independent Theatre Protective Association of Wisconsin at the Hotel Hilton in Beloit this week.

The seventh annual "movie ball" of the ITOA will be held in New York March 23rd at the Hotel Astor.

Companies' Replies on Issues Raised by Ohio Independents

2—No exhibitor will be required to license short subjects, trailers or reissues as a condition of licensing features.
3—No newsreels.
4—No recording charge will be made in connection with the licensing of any of our feature pictures.

Columbia Pictures Corp. (By ABE MONTAGUE, General Sales Manager)

1—As the large majority of our accounts do not buy 100% of our product, we have not found it necessary to make a general announcement regarding cancellation. Our sales force has been informed that they are to deal with each account, where we sell 100% of our product, so that the individual theatre will be thoroughly satisfied with the privileges granted him.
2—The answer is definitely yes. We, as you know, have never forced "shorts".
3—No newsreels.
4—We make no separate charge for score charges.

Universal Film Exchanges, Inc. (By W. A. SCULLY, General Sales Manager)

1—To the exhibitors who purchase our product 100% we will be pleased to extend a 10, 15 or 20% cancellation privilege, scaled according to film rentals.
2—Our Feature Contract can be purchased without short subjects.
3—Our Features can also be purchased without newsreels.
4—We have no score charge.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures (By W. F. RODGERS, General Sales Manager)

1—To those customers who lease all product offered, and are not in material default, 20% elimination where the average rental is $100 or less; 15% where the average rental is in excess of $100 and not more than $250, and 10% where the average rental is in excess of $250.
2 and 3—Will not insist upon short subjects, newsreels or trailer representation as a condition of licensing its feature products.
4—No score charges.

Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp. (By HERMAN WOBBER, General Manager of Distribution)

"We have been selling our contracts in line with the general practice of the major companies. We are not insisting upon the sale of our Short Subjects and we know of no instances where they were forced upon any Exhibitors—and that also applies to our newsreel. Naturally, we are anxious to sell them to all accounts. Score charges have been eliminated. If any exhibitor, when contracting with us, desires it, he may have the cancellation privileges as set forth in the proposed Trade Practice Code of last spring."

ITALIANS ARRIVE TO NEGOTIATE FOR REOPENING OF U. S. PRODUCT SUPPLY

Agents of Leoni Films in New York To Set Up American Company to Pay in Dollars for Pictures to Ship

Italy's new aproach to its problem of obtaining an adequate supply of motion pictures, occasioned by the withdrawal of the American companies in January, 1939, as a protest against the government film monopoly, is the sending of representatives of "independent" Italian distributors to New York to negotiate directly with American film companies for cash purchases here. The first "independents" arrived from Italy last week.

Regulations Relaxed

Early this year regulations of the Italian Monopoly, ENIC, (Ente Nazionale Italiano Cinematografico) were relaxed to allow Italian distributors to negotiate for films instead of being required to get all motion pictures through the Monopoly. Distributors will be given licenses to exchange from 10,000,000 to 15,000,000 lira ($500,000 to $750,000) for the purchase of foreign motion pictures, according to the new plan.

The large American film companies refused to sell any films to the Monopoly last year.

Italy is able to produce, even with German and French units working there, only about half the 250 pictures required this year. With the war shutting off the French, German and other foreign sources of supply which had, to a measure, supplanted American films in Italy, a new crisis arose. Giving the Italian distributors the right to seek film and offer them a license to get the necessary exchange is the "face saving" device which the Italian government monopoly is trying out.

Leoni Representatives Here

In the first attempt to work out the new plan, representatives of Leoni Films, identified as the largest of the Italian distributors, are in New York to set up an American company which would deal with the film distributors and pay dollars in New York for the pictures purchased. Then the American company would send the pictures to the distributor in Italy. The Monopoly would continue to supervise operations but under the new method leave the actual negotiations for pictures with Italian "independents."

The group representing Leoni Films, which already has begun negotiations with American companies and found American independents "very receptive," is headed by Enea Malaguti, who arrived last week from Italy. Also participating in the arrangements are Riccardo San Venero of the San Venero insurance company and Dr. Ronato Senise, who was connected with the Mussolini-Hal Roach deal in 1937. One of the reasons reported for canceling that deal was Dr. Senise's $30,000 damage suit against Roach. He claimed that he had introduced Mr. Roach to the Italian situation and entered into a contract with him.

Mr. San Venero, acting as spokesman for the group, said that the new body was "free from the Monopoly." Leoni Films, he said, was the largest Italian distributor before the Monopoly and owner of 50 of the principal theatres in Italy which were sold to the government about two years ago.

"We are here to build good will and we feel this is an appropriate time," Mr. San Venero continued. Some high-rank films have already been shown to the group by independent exhibitors. They have not approached the large companies yet, feeling they are still "unsympathetic." It was emphasized that only good films will be purchased, because with the 50,000 ($2,500) lira importing tax; 20,000 lira ($1,000) for the censor and dubbing fees of about $15,000 the imported film must be a strong attraction even to pay expenses. The group is interested in acquiring as many good pictures as possible.

Calls Quality Improving

Mr. San Venero and Mr. Malaguti said that the quality of the Italian produced films is improving all the time. Production is also increasing.

"Independent companies expressed satisfaction and willingness to cooperate with the new group," Mr. San Venero said. "We have not yet approached the majors. We are told the major companies are interested. They should approach the problem with sympathy and cooperate." He said Italy is willing to pay back the money the major companies have in that country but she is unable to do so at the present time.

Dr. Senise said that he will be the buyer for the new company.

Sees Business Growing

The group explained that business was quiet in Italy but that indications pointed to improved conditions if the country is not forced into the war. The Italian Colonies, it was said, are an additional market for films now. Already one theatre has been constructed in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, and several more are planned, Mr. San Venero said. He added that construction is going on for the Italian World's Fair, scheduled for 1942.

To the announcement that Monty Banks had become associated with Vittorio Mussolini in an Italian film company, Mr. San Venero said that he knew nothing about production or theatre plans but "Monty Banks has no authority to buy or sell films."

Monty Banks, director for Twentieth Century-Fox in England, was reported to have said on his arrival in America two weeks ago that RKO, Universal, Columbia and United Artists had sold pictures to the modified Italian film body. The reports were denied by Phil Reisman, vice-president in charge of foreign distribution for RKO; Joseph H. Seidelman, vice-president and export manager of Universal, and Joseph A. McConville, Columbia general foreign sales manager. United Artists was said to be merely supplying old pictures to Italy according to a contract and not breaking the majors' "united front" in dealing with the Italian situation.

Universal's "Three Smart Girls Grow Up" opened to strong business in Rome last weekend. Mr. Seidelman said the film was not sold to the Italian monopoly but was one of the last pictures delivered to fulfill a contract with the company's former Italian agent.

Printed reports this week that progress was being made towards the return of American distributors into the Italian market were denied by a spokesman for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association.

New Italian Decree On Film Production

The Italian Official Gazette printed on Dec. 15, 1939, new regulations governing the undertaking of motion picture production in Italy, according to a report from the office of the American Commercial Attache in Rome to the Motion Picture Division of the Department of Commerce.

The first requirement is that an authorization must be obtained from the National Entertainment Federation. The Workers Federation and the Confederation of Professions and Artists will be checked to see that social legislation and collective labor contracts will be maintained. At least 20 days before the work begins the Federation must be provided with the title of the film and approximate dates of the beginning and end of the work, a statement from the Ministry of Popular Culture that the subject of the film has been approved, a detailed financial plan, technical and artistic plans and bank references.

The authors and film producers also have signed a collective agreement. Under the agreement authors retain all but the motion picture rights, but if the work is an original it can not be published until the film has played in the principal key cities. The producer can publish the plot in advertising material. The agreement also covers other matters that arise between writers and producers. One provision is that if the film is not completed in five years all rights revert to the writer.

College in Rome For Film Arts

In keeping with the expansion of the Italian film industry the government has set up an Experimental Center of Cinematography where the film arts will be taught. The college is opened to both men and women, the latter will study acting, costuming and interior decorating. The young men will study those subjects and all the sciences that go into motion picture production. The course is of two years, the first, in which the basic subject will be taught, is free and students who show promise will be allowed to take the second half of the course and will be required to pay only a small fee.

"Friendship" Opens

New Italian film, "Friendship," starring Elsa Melini, Nino Besozzi and Enrico Viarisio, had its American premiere Thursday at the Cinecitta theatre in New York City. The picture was produced by A. Besozzi-Aurora Films and was directed by Oreste Biancoli.

PLAN JUBILEE SHOW AT WORLD'S FAIR

Overcoming "fundamental defects" in the amusement area of the first New York World's Fair, that of the second, starting on May 11th, will have a huge, patriotic "American Jubilee" show, in a 7,000 seat stadium, Harvey D. Gibson, chairman of the board of the fair corporation, announced in New York last week. Stage, radio, and screen stars will be featured, and leading set and show creators will be employed.

Another "patriotic" show at the second Fair will be the motion picture industry's "Cavalcade of America," to be shown at the Federal Building.

THEATRES' ATTEMPTS TO COUNTER "POT O' GOLD" AIR AWARDS HIT SNAG

St. Louis Theatres Are Ordered to Drop Project on Ruling It's Lottery; Theatre in Wisconsin Under Fire

The "Pot o' Gold" is boiling over, again. Radio's $1,000 "Gold" giveaway, which reputedly has a Tuesday night listening audience of 15,000,000 at a cost of $1,000,000 to box offices, say exhibitors, returned this week to the headlines, in a manner controversial.

Exhibitors and their organizations are finding their efforts blocked, or otherwise unsuccessful, in putting over "insurance" schemes for which they had hoped to circumvent the Tums "Pot o' Gold."

Counter Plans Blocked

The radio winner must be in his home to receive the telephone call from the sponsor announcing his selection by a broadcast studio "Wheel of Fortune," out of U. S. telephone books. This "stay-at-home" inducement, say exhibitors, is unfair competition. Headed by such groups and individuals as Cooperative Theatres of Michigan, R. R. Livingston and a group of Nebraska owners, and P. J. Wood and Ohio operators, exhibitors petitions Congressmen at Washington, who appealed to the Federal Communications Commission, which, in turn, gave the case to the Department of Justice, where it now awaits action.

Theatres in St. Louis County, Missouri, have been ordered to discontinue their counter-offer of $1,000 to patrons to offset Tums' award.

Michigan Allied feels that theatres are pointing up too much to the "Pot o' Gold" competition, adding that owners should ignore it.

Ohio owners have dropped their insurance counter offer, because of lack of theatre support for the plan, nor have Nebraska owners had much luck with the insurance counter.

Lottery, Says Williams

Meanwhile, F. E. Williams, attorney in St. Louis, has advised Michigan Cooperative Theatres, headquarters in Detroit, that the "Pot o' Gold" scheme is a lottery beyond all question. Two weeks ago the National Broadcasting Company engaged Merlin Hall Aylesworth, former radio-film-newspaper executive, to watch its interest in the matter.

"Remaining at home and holding oneself in readiness to answer the telephone at a certain half-hour," says Mr. Williams, "is only another form of non-monetary consideration, and when the number of persons in the United States eligible to furnish such consideration is thought of, the volume of consideration takes on tremendous proportions. . . . To constitute the element of consideration in a lottery it is not necessary for those who participate to risk any money or property. . . . The 'Pot o' Gold' bargains for registration and presence with the expectation that many of the acceptors will buy what the offerer has to sell—Tums."

"Pot o' Gold," which since September 26th has given away some $20,000 to listening stay-at-homes in the U. S., is now recognized as one of radio's eight leading programs, from the standpoint of air audience.

Incidentally, the far-flung effects of the broadcast are said to reach to the telephone companies in the states. Thousands of radio listeners are understood to have stopped telephoning during the half-hour Tums show, to avoid busy signals lest they lose the award.

Plans of a giveaway by a number of independent film theatres of St. Louis and St. Louis County to combat the radio "Pot o' Gold" have been held by Carl V. Eimbeck, assistant prosecuting attorney of St. Louis County, to violate the Missouri statutes against lotteries.

The theatres agreed to promise their patrons to double the "Pot o' Gold" award should a patron's telephone number come out of the radio "hat" while they are in attendance at the theatre.

The theaters have been cutting in the radio program so that the name announced on the radio is made known to those in the theatre.

Circuit Attorney Franklin Miller of St. Louis has not ruled on the "protection system" as yet.

If exhibitors ignored the "Pot o' Gold" and other radio giveaway programs they would be better off, in the opinion of Ray Branch, head of Michigan Allied, who thinks the attacks by the Michigan Cooperative Theatres, the Ohio ITO and Nebraska groups may be doing more harm than good.

"When you start combating it," he said, "you increase the publicity for such programs.

Even if some states, such as Michigan, might stop their stations from airing the program, he pointed out, it would do no good, for the fans would dial in on programs originating in stations outside the state.

Ohio Exhibitors Drop Plan

Unable to obtain the required minimum of 200,000 seats, at three cents a seat, in order to make up the inital advance deposit of $6,000, with which to combat the "Pot o' Gold" program, P. J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, has abandoned the plan. Money paid into the fund will be refunded.

Under the setup proposed by Mr. Wood, particpating theatres were to offer double the amount of the radio award if the winner were in the theatre at the time his telephone was called by the air show.

Cleveland exhibtors have dropped a similar plan after a trial failed to show improved attendance on Tuesday, the night of the weekly broadcast.

Having started the stirring-up of exhibitors nationally into what has resulted in the "Pot o' Gold" and other radio giveaways having been nudged to the attention of the Department of Justice, R. R. (Bob) Livingston, at the Capitol, Lincoln, Neb., takes the attitude that he has accomplished good for radio, as well as the film business.

He admits that his initial plan, that of counter-acting the Tums radio show, by offering to give equal or double the amount of the Tums giveaway, if the person called was in his theatre, hasn't turned out too well.

It did, however, he said, fix national attention on the fact that a radio lottery was being conducted on the general plan of film theatres' chance games, which had been outlawed as a lottery in many states.

A "Pot o' Gold" program staged weekly at Standard Theatres' Kenosha theatre, Kenosha, Wis., has been withdrawn as the result of action started against the theatre on charges of operating a lottery. A warrant was issued by John P. McEvoy, district attorney, against the theatre. Manager Elmer then called off the game.

Wisconsin Imitations

Wisconsin theatre owners are faced with imitations of the national broadcast, although perhaps not quite so potent because of the smaller amounts involved.

The newest competitor of this kind is "Fortune Calls," each Thursday from 7 to 7:30 p.m. over Station WISN, Milwaukee, with $50 in cash going to the person who is at home when called upon and able to answer the announcer's question.

"Tap the Till," over WHBL, Sheboygan, each Tuesday night at 7:30, pays $1 to persons who are home when called and an additional $1 to persons answering the announcer's questions. In addition, a bonus is paid for questions used.

Spot Announcements

Broadway film and legitimate stage theatres in New York have turned to spot radio announcements to bolster their grosses and local radio stations have shown a marked increase in revenue from these sources in the past six months.

WNEW this week announced the signing of two one-year contracts with Paramount theatre and Twentieth Century-Fox and the Roxy theatre. Paramount will sponsor three quarter-hours per week on the "Make Believe Ballroom" program for films to be exhibited at the Paramount. Twentieth Century-Fox has signed for 251 spot announcements to be used during the year for films at the Roxy and other houses.

WQXR also has a one-year contract with Fox for spot announcements.

Principal users of spot announcements in the legitimate field are the Shuberts for "Hellzapoppin'," "Streets of Paris" and "Folies Bergere." Herman Shumlin and the Playwrights Company have also used spot announcements on local stations.

The Duane Theatre Corporation sponsors "Harlem Amateur Night" over WMCA. It originates from the Apollo. MGM, Columbia and United Artists also have used spot announcements for some films, but Paramount and Fox are the most consistent advertisers.

WHN is used considerably by Loew's, which owns the station but other film companies and stage producers also have purchased time.

"Pot O' Gold" Decline

Results of the tenth annual radio poll, conducted by the Milwaukee Journal, operator of station WTMJ, apparently show that artists, not prize money, have public favor. Edgar Bergen, Bob Hope, Jack Denny, Fibber McGee, Kay Kyser, Bing Crosby, Radio Theatre and others were voted favorites. Horace Heidt, heading the "Pot o' Gold" program, ranked fourth last year in the dance orchestra classification; this year he dropped to sixth place.

JAMES ROOSEVELT EXPLAINS FILM PLAN

Hollywood-producer James Roosevelt's selection, last week, of the "Pot o' Gold" $1,000 weekly cash radio giveaway as a subject for production by his new Globe Productions, in the face of general exhibitor protests that the program is unfair competition, this week brought the statement from the President's son that the air-show is big enough as a radio hit to make it a "sure-fire" proposition as a screen show.

Mr. Roosevelt expressed the foregoing opinion at an informal meeting with some exhibitors in Philadelphia before addressing the third annual donor dinner of the B'nai B'rith Women's Council at Philadelphia's Penn Athletic Club.

Code Saved Industry, Says Herbert Wilcox

Producer Who Fought Code in 1935 Points to Attendance Gain

Revision recommended in 1935 of the Herbert Wilcox British production of "Nell Gwyn" by the American Production Code Administration resulted in a wave of protest and complaint on the part of British industry. The British press echoed and re-echoed protest and complaint.

Mr. Wilcox, who has just completed a 10-month production period in Hollywood, producing for RKO-Radio release, during which time he has had an opportunity to familiarize himself in detail with the operations under the Production Code, discusses the situation as follows:

"The Production Code is the foundation stone of the motion picture industry, and I speak as a convert who was an arch-enemy of the Code and principal target of the Purity League Drive, as it was then called, six years ago when my picture, 'Nell Gwyn,' had been denied Production Code Administration approval for exhibition in America. I know now that if the Code had not been accepted at that time as the saviour of the industry and trends had continued their course there soon would have been no industry worth saving."

The British producer's reference is to an occurrence in the spring of 1935, which assumed the proportions of an international incident in the affairs of the English-speaking cinema and led directly to the setting up of machinery by which the Production Code Administration, through its New York branch, supplies to British producers the same advisory service on story material and scripts which it supplies at first hand to producers in Hollywood. It will be recalled that the bridging of the attendant difficulties entailed a visit to London by Martin Quigley, accompanied by Carl E. Milliken of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, at the invitation of the British industry, to explain to the Film Producers Group the nature of the Code, the reasons for its establishment and the method of its application.

Fine Pictures Under the Code

"I have had the good fortune to be present in Hollywood this time," says the producer who has filmed "Nurse Edith Cavell" and the now completed "Irene" in this country since May 1, 1939, "during a period in which an extraordinary sequence of fine pictures, sound contributions to a genuine art, have come forth. I believe we would not have had these pictures, would not have arrived at a condition stimulating and justifying their production, if the Code had not been adopted. Production standards had been drifting lower and lower, tastes were blunted, the public was being estranged, particularly in the smaller communities and in the family units, and the motion picture theatre was coming to be regarded as an unsafe place. It is a safe place today.

"We owe a great deal to a man like David O. Selznick for making a big, vital picture like 'Gone With the Wind,' which is doing a great work, beyond its immediate entertainment job, in winning back to the motion picture theatres large numbers of people who had stopped attending.

"Were it not for the Code and the benefits which have accrued to the industry during the years of its operation there would have been no market assurance to warrant a producer in undertaking so great a task, risking so great an investment as is implicit in a picture of that scope.

Discriminating Audience

"Another graphic demonstration of the Code's effect upon the industry is Warners' 'Dr. Ehrlich,' a sensitive and appropriate treatment of a subject which, in the old days, was not even mentionable and would have been treated on the screen, if at all, only in some cheaply sensational manner by some irresponsible producer seeking quick profits and blind to the long view.

"The Code has brought to the cinema a discriminating audience capable of accepting a 'Dr. Ehrlich' as the fine film it is and to producers, here and abroad, knowledge essential to the making of fine films.

"Yes, the London which voiced its objections so violently when first told that British pictures would have to receive Production Code Administration approval if they were to be extensively exhibited in the States now knows well the wisdom of that provision. British producers have become convinced by that best of all tangible evidence, better business, for theatre attendance in the United Kingdom has been larger since Code standards were accepted than it ever had been before.

In a Different Light

"I am, indeed, a convert," Producer Wilcox continues, "for I was most stubborn of all British producers when told that 'Nell Gwyn,' which I had filmed with complete historical accuracy, did not meet Code requirements on the morality side. The facts about Mistress Gwyn and her king were well known. Clearly I could not marry them up at the end, in defiance of known record. I was deeply disturbed at the time. The other day I had 'Nell Gwyn' run off for me again—it's always a good idea to look at one's past work; sometimes it appears woefully bad, sometimes surprisingly good—and I saw it in an altogether different light. I know that if a similar subject were brought up to me now I would simply discard it at once as not constituting proper motion picture material. I believe most producers have experienced equivalent change of views.

"I want to pay a tribute to Joseph I. Breen for what he has done as Production Code administrator. I have worked in intimate contact with him on the pictures I have made here and I have never known him to advance a negative suggestion without advancing at the same time a positive one, have never known him to turn thumbs down on a detail or manner of treatment without going to great lengths to point out a better way of handling the material and one that would meet Code requirements."

It was ensuant upon the 1935 visit of Mr. Quigley and Mr. Milliken to London and as the direct result of their discussions there that Charles Tennyson, as chairman of the Film Producers Group of the Federated British Industry, addressed to Will H. Hays, president of the MPPDA, a letter suggesting establishment in New York of a branch of the Production Code Administration to furnish to British producers, with minimum delay, those services rendered American producers by the Administration in Hollywood.

BRITISH EXHIBITORS ASK 40 U. S. FILMS

The Cinematograph Exhibitors Association has asked the British Board of Trade to insist on at least 40 American-sponsored films a year and 40 independent productions.

The exhibitor group also asks that new legislation call for an exhibitors quota not to exceed 10 per cent, and a prohibition on the acquisition of British film theatres by foreign interests.

American interests in London are expected to ask the Board of Trade to fix a definite figure to serve as the film quota with a monetary basis, instead of the present footage arrangement.

National Decency Legion Classifies 12 Pictures

Of 12 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week seven were approved for general patronage, two were listed as unobjectionable for adults and three were cited as objectionable in part. The films and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Caballo a Caballo" (Spanish), "Five Little Peppers at Home," "The Cheyenne Kid," "Little Orvie," "Mexico Lindo" (Spanish), "Rhythm of the Rio Grande," "Young Tom Edison." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet," "Women Without Names." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "The Face Behind the Scar," "My Little Chickadee," "Secrets of a Model."

Nugent Feted at AMPA Luncheon

Frank Nugent, film critic of the New York Times, was to be guest at the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers' luncheon Thursday at Jack Dempsey's Resturant, New York. Nugent will leave for Hollywood shortly to fulfill a writing contract recently signed with 20th Century-Fox.

The New York Film Critics tendered Mr. Nugent a "farewell dinner" on Tuesday.

New Times Square House

Construction of the new 600-seat New York theatre, latest addition to the Times Square area, is expected to be completed in time to allow the house to open in Easter Week. The theatre has been leased for 21 years by Consolidated Amusement Enterprises, Inc.

ONLY SEVEN OUT OF 1,000 FILM ADS, PUBLICITY PIECES ARE "CENSORED"

Changes or Rejections under Advertising Code Total Only 1,092 in 157,686 Items Submitted in a Year

The organized industry's voluntarily adopted self-regulation of its motion picture advertisements and publicity rounded its sixth full year with but seven pieces of copy out of every 1,000 falling short of the standards set up on June 6, 1930, in the Motion Picture Advertising Code, as administered by the Advertising Advisory Council starting Nov. 17, 1933.

157,686 Items Submitted

The producer-distributors in Hollywood and New York in 1939 submitted 157,686 advertising-publicity-exploitation items, out of which changes were ordered or rejections made in only 1,092—seven changes per thousand items; in 1938, they submitted 146,555 items, out of which changes or rejections were made in 620—four changes per thousand items and a slightly better showing, of course, than in 1939. In 1939, however, 11,131 more units were submitted for approval than in 1938.

The Advertising Advisory Council's report for 1939 will, as usual, be incorporated in the annual report which Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, will submit to his board members at their annual meeting in New York March 25th.

In 1939 there was comparatively little change in the taste and tone of items submitted for exploitation ideas, posers, trailers, advertisements and publicity stories, as compared with 1938, but there was an increase of more than 100 per cent in the number of stills rejected or revised, jumping from 387 ordered changed in 1938, to 845 in 1939—but even those rejections compare favorably with the totals submitted: 109,083 stills in 1939; 103,357 in 1938.

Changes ordered or rejections made in advertising, publicity and exploitation items compare as follows:

ITEMS	1939	1938
Stills	845	387
Exploitation Ideas	5	3
Posters	32	12
Trailers	9	3
Advertisements	198	210
Publicity Stories	3	5
TOTAL CHANGED OR REJECTED	1,092	620
TOTAL SUBMITTED	157,686	146,555

The foregoing shows that the most improvement was made in the taste and tone of advertisements submitted, both on the face of fewer changes ordered and in comparing the total of 12,386 ad items submitted in 1939 with the 9,830 submitted in 1938, some 2,550 fewer than last year.

"Miscellaneous accessories" have received a "clean bill" for two years running, with 6,960 such items submitted in 1939 and 6,252 in 1938.

The number of exploitation ideas, posters and trailers submitted has remained about the same in the last two years (so have the numbers of changes ordered): there were 10,554 exploitation ideas submitted in 1939 and 9,388 in 1938; posters: 2,013 in 1939, 1,937 in 1938; trailers: 981 in 1939, 747 in 1938.

Of 15,709 publicity stories submitted in 1939, there were only three rejected; 1938 saw 15,044 submitted, and only five rejected.

While the totals of all items submitted in 1939 (157,686) were 11,131 greater than in 1938 (146,555), they were 20,663 fewer than the all-time peak of 1937.

Council Interprets Code Provisions

The effort sponsored by MPPDA member companies to promote clean advertising is guided by the provisions of the Advertising Code, voluntarily adopted in 1930, and administered by the Advertising Advisory Council, after public complaints were heard that there were some examples of bad taste.

The Advertising Advisory Council numbers among its members the company advertising directors, each of whom is directly responsible for his own advertising. The Council is responsible for uniform interpretation of the Advertising Code, which says:

1. We subscribe to the Code of Business Ethics of the International Advertising Association, based on "truth, honesty and integrity."
2. Good taste shall be the guiding rule of motion picture advertising.
3. Illustrations and text in advertising shall faithfully represent the pictures themselves.
4. No false or misleading statements shall be used directly, or implied by type arrangements or by distorted quotations.
5. No text or illustrations shall ridicule or tend to ridicule any religion or religious faith; no illustration of a character in clerical garb shall be shown in any but respectful manner.
6. The history, institutions and nationals of all countries shall be represented with fairness.
7. Profanity and vulgarity shall be avoided.
8. Pictorial and copy treatment of officers of the law shall not be of such a nature as to undermine their authority.
9. Specific details of crime, inciting imitation shall not be used.
10. Motion picture advertisers shall bear in bind the provisions of the Production Code that the use of liquor in American life shall be restricted to the necessities of characterization and plot.
11. Nudity with meretricious purpose, and salacious postures, shall not be used.
12. Court actions relating to censoring of pictures, or other censorship disputes, are not to be capitalized in advertising.

Allow More Time on RKO Claims

The time for filing petitions for allowances for services performed in the reorganization of RKO has been extended by William Bondy, federal judge, from March 1st to March 15th. The extension was asked by Irving Trust Company, and the Atlas Corporation, proponent of the reorganization plan, which with their counsel were unable to complete their seven year service records on which their applications for allowances will be based, within the time originally prescribed.

Atlas may ask for compensation in the form of new RKO common stock in an amount to be approved by the court. Provision for this was made in the RKO reorganization plan.

Irving Trust will file its final report as RKO trustee in conjunction with its application for allowances. Interim payments have been made from time to time to both Irving Trust and its counsel.

A hearing on an application to fix three claims against RKO is set for Tuesday in New York. The claims are those of Radio Corporation of America for $18,565, Lehman Brothers for $9,098 and Lehman Corporation for $4,511. They are based upon an agreement made by RKO in floating an $11,600,000 loan in 1931 to pay for transfer taxes.

A petition for a $14,500 final allowance for services rendered in the reorganization proceedings, the first application to be filed in federal court, was made last week by Florence J. Sullivan, attorney.

ASCAP WRITES NEW RADIO PACTS AS OPPONENTS BRING BUCK'S ARREST

Montana's Governor, However, Refuses to Ask Extradition; Tennessee Law Is Declared Unconstitutional

The fight being waged for its existence by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, in many states, this week took a new turn with the issuance of a warrant for the arrest of Gene Buck, president of the Society, by the State of Montana, on a charge of extortion through ASCAP's insistence upon collecting royalty payments from Montana radio stations despite a state law prohibiting outside agencies from making such collections for the public performance of copyrighted music.

Demand Lower Fees

Radio stations and broadcast networks have been fighting ASCAP for three years for lower fees for their public performance of music of the Society's members, claiming that their total payment of $4,000,000 a year is much too high. Through the efforts of broadcasters, and night clubs and other public music performers the Society has been attacked openly 40 times in 25 states in two years, in legislatures and in the courts, and several laws have been enacted, all contested or to be contested by the music interests. Montana's law is one of the pieces of anti-ASCAP legislation.

Another such state law, one enacted in Tennessee, this week was declared unconstitutional.

And while the radio industry continued its fight against ASCAP, the Society's board of directors was to meet at headquarters in New York to study new basic contracts being written by a special ASCAP committee for radio to supplant those expiring Dec. 1, 1940.

New Formula Predicted

Several new formulae were to be discussed by the directors, a spokesman said Tuesday. Adoption of a formula would result in its inclusion in the new contracts, he said.

"I think you will find it safe to say there will be a 'new deal' for broadcasters," he declared.

"Any new form will certainly contemplate the payment of the ASCAP percentage, in the case of a network broadcast, entirely by the original station. The effect of this payment at the source, in a network broadcast, will be substantially to increase the amounts paid by the station which originated sponsored network broadcasts, and to equally reduce the amounts paid by stations which merely receive such network programs. This idea was incorporated in all of the formulae which the directors will discuss."

The Society may also reduce the rates for small radio stations which use recorded music, he declared.

Long Term Licenses

One more innovation which the music society may adopt is the offer of long term licenses to broadcasters, it was said.

Officials of the Society discussed contract changes recently in Phoenix, Ariz., where Gene Buck, president, was staying. Conferring with Mr. Buck at the time were John G. Paine, general manager, and Charles Schwartz, general counsel. Their discussions resolved around suggestions made by a special radio committee.

Concern over the new ASCAP contracts is generally regarded as the reason for the formation of Broadcast Music, Inc., by the members of the National Association of Broadcasters. The new company is to supply music, and is expected to rival ASCAP as a music source.

267 RADIO STATIONS IN BROADCAST MUSIC

Twenty-one radio stations have joined Broadcast Music, Inc. within the last ten days, bringing the total up to 267. Broadcast Music, Inc. is the organization set up by the radio industry to provide a source of music in addition to the American Society of Composers, Authors and Musicians (ASCAP). The new organization is scheduled to begin operations on April 1st.

Neville Miller, president of BMI and also head of the National Association of Broadcasters, also said that Milton Rettenberg, composer and arranger, and Robert B. Sour, lyricist, have been added to the BMI staff. These are the first two names announced of the music writers who are expected to provide competition to ASCAP.

Arrest Gene Buck

While on vacation, Gene Buck, of New York, author, and president of the ASCAP, was arrested in his hotel rooms last Thursday in Phoenix, on a Montana warrant charging attempted extortion. He was released on $10,000 bond after six hours. This was reduced to $750 the next day, and an extradition hearing set for March 5th. On Tuesday, however, Governor Roy E. Ayers of Montana, refused to ask Arizona's governor to extradite Mr. Buck and it was said that the warrant was being withdrawn.

Edward Dussault, Missoula County attorney, said last week that his telegraphed warrant was the same as that issued several months ago for the arrest of Mr. Buck and other ASCAP officials, in New York. At that time, New York authorities declined to act.

The warrant referred to registered letters sent by Mr. Buck and the ASCAP to Montana radio stations and theatres, asking that they pay their fees or have their licenses revoked. The Montana law which calls this procedure extortion has been declared unconstitutional by the United States supreme court.

Attorney Dussault said: "We claim that ASCAP does not own 95 per cent of the music they claim they own or control by assignment. This has nothing to do with a civil action by ASCAP against Montana stations."

The action referred to was continued last week in Missoula, until May 15th, by District Judge C. E. Comer.

Charges Selfish Interest

Mr. Buck said he never had been in Montana, and that the state's authorities were "utilizing criminal law in a trade war."

"It's a case of the law being used for selfish interests," he continued. "Montana has not paid an author or composer in the United States for three years. It is unwilling to pay for music, the raw material which keeps the radio microphones going.

"They used the Washington's Birthday holiday, when banks and such institutions are closed, to carry out their nefarious trick. The $10,000 bond is another part of the scheme. You'd think I was another Dillinger."

Specifically, the warrant not only charges Mr. Buck with attempted extortion, a felony, but also with attempting to obtain money under false pretenses and with conspiracy to extort, both these being misdemeanors.

Mr. Buck's defenders arose within a few hours after his plight became known last Thursday. He contacted Los Angeles friends to arrange bond. Arizonians offered aid. The University of Arizona music school protested to the governor.

Louis D. Frohlich, of the firm of Schwartz and Frohlich, ASCAP counsel, said, in New York:

"We can play the game just as well as the radio stations. I can, and probably will, have a few radio broadcasters in Montana arrested, for violating the federal copyright laws."

Stupid, Says Mills

E. C. Mills, chairman of the society's administration committee, called Mr. Buck's arrest "a stupid, contemptible, entirely ineffectual effort to terrorize, humiliate and embarrass the president of ASCAP, who, after the death of his mother, had gone with his wife to Phoenix, in an entirely personal and private capacity, to recover from the shock."

Mr. Buck was arrested in the presence of his wife, Mr. Mills charged; "taken from the Biltmore hotel, over to the court, his bond fixed at $10,000, and he was held for six hours while bond was being arranged," on Washington's Birthday when the banks were closed.

The Governor of Arizona "indicated his complete disagreement with the whole procedure," Mr. Mills charged.

"The whole procedure has been a complete fiasco, and has merely shown the length to which the Montana broadcasters are willing to go in their efforts to avoid the payment of royalties to ASCAP'S members.

"Why, they have paid no royalties whatever, since 1937," he continued, "and now, faced with hundreds of infringement suits, they seek to so terrorize the executives of ASCAP as to prevent them from entering the state to try these suits."

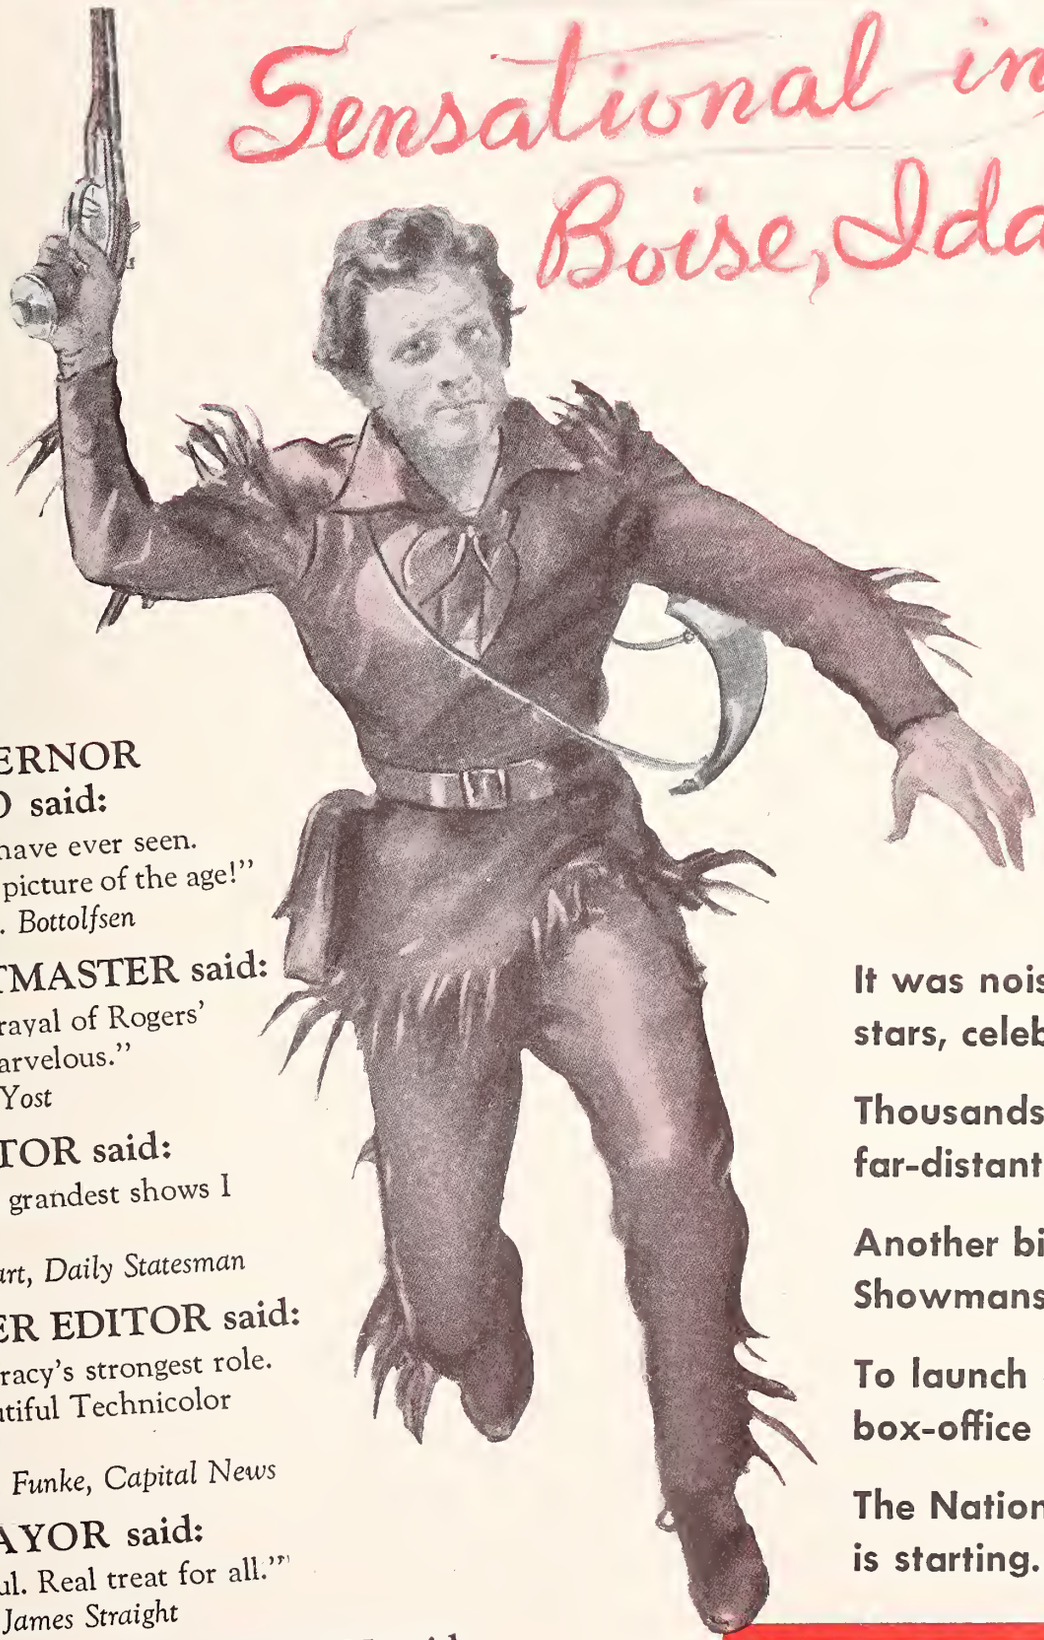
Countersuit Threatened

This week, it was reported from Phoenix that Mr. Buck was considering filing a countersuit for false arrest.

Meanwhile, a United States district court at Great Falls, Mont., overruled motions made by radio station KFBB in 17 items, and refused to dismiss an ASCAP complaint, charging copyright infringement.

The court allowed the defendant 30 days in which to answer the complaint.

Tennessee Law Out



A three judge federal statutory court in Nashville, Tenn., last Wednesday granted ASCAP'S application for a permanent injunction, restraining the state from enforcing its law aimed at the Society. The judges were Elmer Davies, George Taylor, and Xenophon Hicks, of the United States circuit court.

They termed the state law "class legislation" and said it "was aimed only at proprietors of music copyrights and no other copyright, and it exempts the performance of musical works which are protected only by common law."

In 1938, the Society had obtained a temporary injunction against the state law, which had been in effect until the latest ruling.

The state authorities have not indicated whether they will appeal to the United States supreme court.

MAJORS TURN TO 1940 CONVENTIONS, WITH APRIL THE STARTING DATE

Twentieth Century-Fox Will Announce 52 Features at Sales Gathering in Chicago Next Month; Warners Plan on July

When the producer-distributors start giving attention to sales conventions, new season's product formulations are well in hand. And this they did this week, with convention discussions by Twentieth Century-Fox and Warners, and indications coming from others that they, too, soon will set at least tentative arrangements, dates or places of assembly at which studio and home office executives will reveal to their salesmen programs of product on paper and policies under which they are to be sold.

April looks like the beginning of the sales convention season this year, with Twentieth Century-Fox taking the lead. Warners is to meet in July.

William F. Rodgers, in Chicago Wednesday en route east from Hollywood, said MGM's 1940-41 sales convention would not be held until late in the year, due to "press from 'Gone with the Wind'" and the existence of a large number of previously set franchise deals.

The week also brought many another development in product and policy both for the present and forthcoming seasons.

Twentieth Century-Fox Program

A program of 52 features, including four to be made in England, and 52 one-reel short subjects, will be announced to the 280 delegates at the annual sales convention to be held by Twentieth Century-Fox early in April in Chicago.

A meeting of district managers has been called by Herman Wobber, general distribution manager, for Friday and Saturday at the Park Central Hotel in New York. Home office executives will attend.

Warners Summer Meeting

Warner Brothers' annual convention is planned for July. Last year the convention was held in New York, March 12th-13th. No definite location for the Warner meeting has been picked, but it was reported that it may be held in Chicago. S. Charles Einfeld, advertising and publicity director, was in Chicago for conferences with William K. Hollander, Balaban and Katz advertising executive, on plans for the showing of "Dr. Erlich's Magic Bullet," gave the information about the company's convention plans.

Hal B. Wallis, executive producer, before leaving for the Coast Monday night, said that Broadway at present offers little material, except "Life with Father." He did not say if Warners is considering buying it. Mr. Wallis said that a script is being prepared on "The Life of Freud" to go into production after "Brother Orchid." Mr. Wallis said that by fall the studio will have six or eight of next season's pictures finished. "The Male Animal," now running in New York, will not be made until after the run of the play.

Norman Moray, general sales manager for Vitaphone short subjects, said in Chicago, "the demand for short subjects is increasing day by day." He said that even where double features are used shorts are also on the program because the public demands variety. The increasing demand for shorts, however, Mr. Moray said, might be indicative that double features were losing their grip.

Warners are considering producing two pictures in Nevada, "Territorial Enterprise" and "Sutro's Tunnel." The suggestion was made by Governor E. P. Carville in conference with Jack L. Warner. Governor Carville is in Hollywood heading the group working out details for the opening of "Virginia City" at Virginia City and Reno on March 16th.

Warner Brothers has decided to go ahead and make a picture based on the life of Benjamin Franklin even though RKO recently purchased Carl Van Doren's biography of Franklin. It is contended that biographical material on Franklin is in the public domain. Warners plan to put Edward G. Robinson in the title role and RKO is considering Charles Laughton. Mr. Wallis said that Warners has priority rights because it registered the title with the Motion Picture Producers Association on the Coast last year.

Stahl Deal Ready

John M. Stahl's deal for the production of three pictures to be released by United Artists is scheduled to be closed this week in Hollywood. Mr. Stahl, detained in New York for several weeks by an illness, left for the Coast Tuesday to close the deal with Maurice Silverstone, United Artists chief executive, who has been on the Coast for several weeks conferring on production plans.

The addition of Mr. Stahl to the UA ranks will give the company approximately 28 or 30 pictures for release next season, about the same number as are scheduled for the current season.

Nine of the company's forthcoming releases are completed and awaiting release arrangements, Lynn Farnol, advertising and publicity director, said Monday on his arrival in New York from the Coast. These are Charles Chaplin's "Production Number 6," "Rebecca," "My Son, My Son," "Our Town," "The Westerner," "House Across the Bay," "Thief of Bagdad," "Over the Moon" and "1,000,000 B. C."

Three of these, "Rebecca," "My Son, My Son" and "Our Town," have been booked by the Radio City Music Hall, Mr. Farnol said.

The Chaplin picture will be entitled "The Great Dictator" if negotiations now under way with Paramount, which owns the title "The Dictator," are successful. The film will be released this Summer, it was said.

Richard Wallace and Grover Jones have signed with Hal Roach as a director-writer combination for three pictures. The first is "Captain Caution" and will be released in the current film season.

Newspaper Film Critics Vote for "Chips", Donat and Bette Davis

The first annual poll conducted by the Newspaper Film Critics of America, with 600 critics participating, resulted this week in the selection of "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film produced in England as the best picture of 1939, of Robert Donat, star of that picture, as having given the best male performance, and of Bette Davis, for the best feminine performance, in "Dark Victory."

Second and third choices in each of the three classifications were: "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" and "Wuthering Heights," in that order, in the first group; James Stewart in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" and Spencer Tracy in "Stanley and Livingstone" in the actor group, and Greta Garbo for "Ninotchka" and Rosalind Russell for "The Women," in the third classification.

Results of the poll were announced in Hollywood by Merle Potter, film editor of the Minneapolis Times-Tribune. Awards will be presented to the winners shortly, according to Harry Martin of the Commercial-Appeal, Memphis, president of the critics' organization.

The best performance by a male supporting player was by Thomas Mitchell in "Stage Coach," the critics voted. Brian Aherne was second in "Juarez," and Akim Tamiroff was third in "Disputed Passage."

Best performance by a feminine supporting player was credited to Greer Garson in "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," Rosalind Russell in "The Women" was second, and Alice Brady in "Young Mr. Lincoln" was third.

The young actor considered most likely to win greatest fame in 1940 was Jeffrey Lynn. Eddie Albert was second, and John Howard was third.

The young actress thought most likely to win greatest fame in 1940 was Maureen O'Hara. Linda Darnell was second, and Lana Turner was third.

INDEPENDENTS SET PRODUCING PLANS

Drive began last Friday his second tour of the country. He is accompanied by Harry Michalson, short subject sales manager. Thirty-eight exchanges in the United States and Canada will be visited. The first meeting was held at Los Angeles where N. P. Jacobs is branch manager. The Seattle exchange, headed by E. A. Lamb, at the end of the third week led in the Drive. Milwaukee, A. Schmitz, branch manger, was second, and Buffalo, with C. Boasberg, manager, was in third position.

The March month of the Ned Depinet Drive has been designated "Smith" month in honor of Cresson E. Smith, western and southern sales manager, and A. W. Smith, Jr., eastern and Canadian sales manager.

Dan Winckler, former executive of the Myron Selznick Agency, has been put in charge of all RKO studio commitments, succeeding J. J. Nolan, who was named vice-president in charge of the studio a short time ago. Sidney Rogell, studio manager, has been given a new two-year contract.

Six pictures in the RKO 1940-41 schedule have been assigned to Lee Marcus, production executive. The six include "Anne's House of Dreams," to star Ann Shirley, and "Freckles," both to be made from novels by Gene Stratton Porter; "Men Against the Sky," "Men Without a World" and an untitled original by Peter B. Kyne. Cliff Reid will produce five of the six and Howard Benedict will be in charge of "Men Against the Sky."

Irving Reis, formerly a writer for Paramount, has become a director under Lee Marcus at RKO.

Three more pictures in the Dr. Christian series, starring Jean Hersholt, will be produced by Stephen Lang Productions for distribution by RKO, following the signing this week of a new contract. The original contract specified three only.

The RKO legal department has advised the Saturday Evening Post that certain parts of the article on Orson Welles in the February 7th issue were erroneous. The legal department said the contract was in effect and Welles had not been bought off for $160,000. Furthermore, no Welles picture budget calling for over $1,000,000 had been submitted.

Republic's Program

The heaviest production program in Republic's history will be completed during the next four and a half months, Herbert J. Yates, chairman of the board, said this week. He announced 16 features and 11 westerns would be finished and released by July 1st. Mr. Yates was in Hollywood with James R. Grainger, Republic president, for conferences with western district managers and studio executives.

Two of the 16 features, "Women in War" and "Wagons Westward" will have high budgets. Another top budget release for spring, "The Dark Command," is nearing completion. Another feature finished is "Forgotten Girls" with Donald Wood and Louise Platt.

Titles of other features planned are "The Higgins Family in Grandpa Goes to Town," "In Old Missouri," "Doctors Don't Tell," "The Crooked Road," "Gangs of Chicago," "Grand Ole Opry," "Lady from New Orleans," "Scatterbrain," "Girl from God's Country," "Should Wives Work," "Oomph Girl and the Cowboy."

Mr. Grainger said the company's business as of February 1st was 25 per cent over last year's figure at that time and he predicted that by the end of May a minimum of 8,500 contracts will be signed.

Joseph Mankiewicz, MGM producer, has announced that he will produce "The Philadelphia Story," current New York stage hit. Filming is to start in June on the coast. Katharine Hepburn, star of the stage play, and Robert Taylor will play the leads.

CIRCUIT TAKES OVER FREE MILK PROJECT

When a city project, Lake Charles, La., to furnish nearly 200 school children with free milk was faced with failure as money ran out, officials of the Southern Amusement Company, through George Baillio, president, announced that it would sponsor continuation of the program in the future. The circuit operates four houses in Lake Charles.

McConville to Latin America

Seven of Columbia's Latin American offices will be visited by J. A. McConville, foreign manager for the company, who left last week on the Santa Elena from New York. Panama, Peru and Chile will be his first stops on his way down the west coast of South America and he will cover Argentina, Uruguay, Brazil and the British West Indies on the return trip.

Mr. McConville will confer with branch managers and supervisors on distribution and new product and he expects to investigate South American production activities. He will return about the middle of April.

Columbia reports unusual response from exhibitors and exhibitor leaders to its announcement of the Montague Fifteenth Anniversary sales drive.

Thompson Sees Fewer "B's"

Production of low budget pictures will be reduced by all major producers this year, according to Harlan Thompson, Paramount producer who has just completed "Road to Singapore" with Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour. The producer said that indications pointed to a greater number of top bracket pictures for the 1940-41 programs of all companies.

George Bancroft, once a top ranking star at Paramount, will return to that studio for a featured role in Cecil B. DeMille's Technicolor production, "Northwest Mounted Police." Filming is to start Tuesday.

Mark Sandrich, Paramount producer and director, has received a new two-year contract.

Product Travelers

During the week more than a score of top-ranking production, distribution and circuit executives, and many of their lieutenants, were traveling to and from New York and Hollywood in the interests of both current and new season's programs and sales.

Herman Wobber, general distribution manager of Twentieth Century-Fox, plans to leave New York next week for production conferences with Darryl F. Zanuck, at which the 1940-41 program will be set.

James R. Grainger, president of Republic, left Hollywood Monday for San Francisco on a two-day business trip.

Nate J. Blumberg, Universal president, has arrived in New York from Florida.

Hal B. Wallis, Warner Brothers executive producer, accompanied by Mrs. Wallis, left New York Monday for the coast studio.

Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox, returned to New York this week from Miami Beach after a visit with his brother, Nicholas M. Schenck, president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Lynn Farnol, director of publicity and advertising for United Artists, arrived in New York Monday from the coast.

Emanuel Silverstone, American sales representative for Alexander Korda, left New York Wednesday for Hollywood. He plans to spend about two weeks on the coast.

Leonard Goldenson and Sam Dembow, Jr., of the Paramount home office theatre executive staff, left New York Sunday for Chicago and Detroit for conferences with the company's theatre associates.

Robert T. Kane, in charge of British production for Twentieth Century-Fox, plans to return to England about March 15th.

Harry Ham, managing director of Myron Selznick, Ltd., sailed on the Manhattan Saturday for his post in London.

E. B. Hatrick, vice-president of Cosmopolitan Productions, is scheduled to leave New York this week for coast conferences.

J. A. McConville, Columbia foreign manager, left New York this week for a two months' business trip to Central and South America and the West Indies.

Richards Buys 'Wind' for Circuit

After weeks of negotiations following refusal of E. V. Richards, of the Saenger circuit, when in New York recently to buy "Gone With the Wind" on MGM's 70 per cent terms, a deal finally was closed this week in Florida by Thomas J. Connors, MGM division manager, who had gone South for the purpose.

On a fishing vacation at Stuart, Fla., Mr. Connors made several trips to Miami were he conferred with Mr. Richards. The deal is for the entire Saenger circuit of about 70 theatres—on MGM's terms of 70 per cent, it is said.

Saenger will open the film in Shreveport, Mobile and six other cities March 7th or 8th, and other bookings will follow.

Mr. Connors in the South also is completing negotiations with M. A. Lightman, head of the Malco circuit of Memphis. Malco will open the picture in several Southern cities March 7-8. Mr. Lightman has been among the few circuit "holdouts" against MGM's terms.

Mr. Connors is dickering in Miami also with Paramount partners and had a discussion with Barney Balaban and others there about Balaban and Katz taking the picture. B. & K. had rejected the film in Chicago. It appears a deal may be made by Balaban and Katz for Chicago subsequent runs.

MGM says that the guarantee of 10 per cent of the gross as profit to the exhibitor has been a determining factor in closing numerous deals.

As of late this week, MGM distribution officials said that the picture had grossed more than $11,000,000 at theatres.

Medial Pay $120 Writer Guild Says

Fifty per cent of the active writers in Hollywood studios received $120 weekly or less during 1939 and 50 per cent received more than that figure for average employment of 24.4 weeks for the year, according to an economic survey conducted by the Screen Writers Guild.

Without comment, the Guild in a copyrighted report of the survey, said that, while the percentage of writers getting high salaries decreased, the percentage of low salaries and unemployment increased. The Guild compiled the figures from 520 replies to 1,000 questionnaires sent out. Medial figures were used instead of averages because of the wide variation in salaries.

Radio Policies Are Individual: Kent

A blanket agreement by film companies to keep their stars off radio broadcasts is not feasible and might be construed as illegal, Sidney Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, has advised Abram F. Myers, chairman of the board of National Allied States Association.

The letter was written after Mr. Kent received copies of resolutions adopted at the annual meeting of the National Allied directors last month in Washington.

His company's policy is to bar its stars from radio broadcasts, except in special instances in which such broadcasts help the motion picture industry, Mr. Kent told Mr. Myers.

Mr. Kent also said he was in favor of arbitration for industry disputes, and opposed 16 mm. versions of 35 mm. films.

MORE INDEPENDENTS SUE MAJORS; NEW ANSWERS FILED IN U. S. SUIT

Distributors Take Advantage of Clause Calling Upon Government to Keep Production Data Secret

The large company defendants in the Federal Government's "key" anti-trust suit in New York, by which the United States seeks to divorce exhibition from distribution, end Hollywood's talent pool and revise industry practices, are moving along in providing the Department of Justice with answers to the many interrogatories which the Government asked the federal court of New York to order submitted.

The Department of Justice Wednesday served notice that it was applying for an injunction to restrain the distributor defendants from possible attempts to "intimidate and coerce" any witnesses in the Government's New York suit in equity. The application will be heard March 5th. The motion cites possible "dangers" of pressure on exhibitor witnesses by the defendants and was accompanied by supporting affidavits signed by Col. H. A. Cole, Nathan Yamins, and Joseph Conway, a member of Allied of eastern Pennsylvania.

Answers Filed

Answers to the first 24 of the Government's interrogatories dealing with financial structure of the companies and their affiliates were filed this week by Paramount and Twentieth Century-Fox. Last week, as previously detailed, RKO, United Artists, Warner Brothers and Columbia filed their answers to the first 24 questions. On Saturday Paramount, Warner Brothers, Twentieth Century-Fox and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer filed answers to the questions numbered from 25 to 39 which refer to production activity. These companies, as well as RKO, Columbia and Universal, took advantage of the confidential clause and will insist that the Government keep secret the production data revealed.

All the answers are due by Friday, as well as the Government's replies to the questions proposed by the majors. Both sets of answers may be subject to an appraisal by the federal court if they fail to provide the information sought by the defendants and the Government.

Columbia Gets Until March 8th

Columbia on Monday was given until next Friday, March 8th, to file its objections to the Government's interrogatories. On the same day the Government is scheduled to file its counter objections to Columbia's interrogatories.

Steve Hannagan's office, which is handling the publicity on the majors' defense of the suit brought by the Government, said that no decision would be reached on releasing the text of the film companies' answers until Friday. At that time it is expected that all answers, except those the companies want kept confidential, will be revealed. It was said that the central legal committee does not even know all the answers.

On the first set of 24 questions, answers were given to all by Twentieth Century-Fox but Paramount treated 11 of these as confidential in nature. Paramount did not wish to reveal its answers to questions dealing with profits, grosses and financial obligations.

Stockholders Listed

Twentieth Century-Fox answers said that the company had no outstanding indebtedness and no current loans. A complete list of stockholders was given. The common stockholders list was headed by the following: Chase National Bank, 221,157 shares; General Theatres Equipment Corporation, 185,000 shares; William Goetz, 184,642 shares; Darryl F. Zanuck, 122,129 shares, and Joseph M. Schenck, 112,542 shares.

The three largest holders of preferred stock were listed as the Chase National Bank, 487,215 shares; William Goetz, 55,283, and Joseph M. Schenck, 26,983.

The answers showed that Twentieth Century-Fox owns 42 per cent of the stock of National Theatres Corporation, having 756,000 shares. The company has 59,889 of the 60,000 shares of preferred stock in Movietonews, Inc. The company is the sole owner of Twentieth Century Fox Corporation of Texas and Twentieth Century-Fox Distributing Corporation.

Profits and Loss

Twentieth Century-Fox showed its total gross, distribution and production gross, revenue from exhibition companies and net profits and gross and net of subsidiaries for the years from 1935 through 1938, as are shown in the table on the following page. Movietonews each year showed a substantial loss and the Distributing Company each year a small gain. The net profits in the years covered ranged from $2,921,897 in 1935 to a high for the period of $8,212,535 in 1937.

Paramount Shows Indebtedness

Paramount listed a fixed indebtedness of $7,302,000, which represents a reduction from $11,133,200, the answers point out. The following creditors were listed who have placed directors on the Paramount board: Harvey D. Gibson, representing the Manufacturer's Trust Company, holding $3,000,000 of Paramount debentures; Stephen Callagan of the Allied Owners Corporation, $250,000 in debentures, and Maurice Newton of the Adams Express Corporation, 40,000 shares of preferred stock, $103,000 in debentures personally held and $125,000 debentures held as trustee.

ANTI-TRUST COMPLAINTS REACH RECORD NUMBER

Wendell Berge, special assistant attorney general and right hand man to Thurman Arnold, said in New York last Wednesday that "there has never been a time in history when so many complaints of anti-trust violation as now have poured in on the Department of Justice." Although Mr. Berge did not specifically mention the motion picture business, it is one of those away out front in the number of cases pending—more than 40—as filed both by the U. S. Government and independent theatre owners.

Most of the complaints are coming from business men themselves, Mr. Berge said. He told the American Paper and Pulp Association that "vigorous enforcement of the anti-trust laws can do a great deal to curb the subversive activities of those men who through associations or otherwise are set upon a course destructive to real competition."

Hollingsworth Charges Product Was Denied Him After He Had Taken Over Lease at Beatrice, Neb.

The independents this week scored again in two more federal court anti-trust suits against the majors, with the filing of a triple-damage claim for $234,300 by Frank E. Hollingsworth, at Lincoln, Nebraska, and one for $300,000 by the Netcong theatre in Netcong, New Jersey.

In quite an important matter pending, the majors won a point over the Government, in their petitions for bills of particular from the Department of Justice, in a Nashville case.

Calls $78,100 Actual Damages

Claiming it will take $78,100 to satisfy actual damages inflicted upon his theatre operations in Beatrice, Neb., and which he seeks in triplicate, $234,300, Frank E. Hollingsworth entered his anti-trust filing on the docket of the federal court in Lincoln, Neb., last Friday. Defendants are the Fox Beatrice Theatre Corp., Fox Midwest, and Loew's, RKO, 20th Century-Fox, Universal, United Artists, Paramount and Republic, with the 20th-Fox manager Joe E. Scott, MGM manager Harry Shumow, and Republic manager Carl Reese, named as individuals.

Mr. Hollingsworth claims Fox Midwest entered into a conspiracy with the distributor defendants, got them to promise to deliver him film if he would take over the lease on the New Pix, which Fox Midwest had dropped in a rental dispute After leasing it for five years at $18,000 rental, he spent $16,000 on equipment, and opened Oct. 23, 1939. He then claims, operating at a loss of $3,150 up to now, he was forced to close the theatre because he couldn't get film in sufficient quantities to run it.

To force him out as an independent operator, he charges that Fox Midwest, for its single theatre, the Rivoli, has nearly three times as much film bought as it could run in its best year, and, as an opposition measure, cut boxoffice prices fully 30 per cent during the period in which he had the new Pix lighted.

New Jersey Suit

A Newark Federal Court suit instituted by Netcong Amusement Company, Inc., operators of the Netcong Theatre, charges unfair clearance between its town and Dover, eight miles distant.

"Our suit was started because the majors are making us play behind Newton, Hackettstown, behind Dover, behind Boonton," said Fred Falkner, on Wednesday. Mr. Falkner operates six theatres with William E. Smith, his partner.

Majors Win Tennessee Plea

The defendants in the Government's anti-trust suit against the Crescent Amusement Company and the large distributors in Nashville won motions for a more definite statement and bills of particular and the exclusion of the section of the federal complaint dealing with exhibition practices such as cut-rate admissions, money and other give-aways. U. S. District Judge Elmer Davies took up the requests separately and granted some and denied others. Further action will be delayed at least three months because the Government was given 45 days to furnish the particulars ordered and the defendants were given a similar time thereafter to file answers to the Government's complaint.

Judge Davies ruled that cut-rate admissions, giveaways and the like are purely local in character and have no bearing on interstate commerce and hence do not come under the provisions of the Sherman anti-trust law. He said, "The court is of the opinion that such local acts in themselves, not alleged to have been part of a conspiracy for the purpose of restraining interstate commerce, do not directly restrain and burden interstate commerce, and the court does not regard the acts alleged as creating a direct and substantial burden on interstate commerce."

Seventy-five requests for particulars were granted and 49 denied to the defendant companies having theatre affiliates. United Artists, Columbia and Universal, the defendants without theatre affiliates, had 66 requests granted and 61 denied. The requests denied were either of an "evidentiary" nature and could be properly put to the Government in the form of interrogatories later, or had been granted to the theatre-owning defendants and not needed by the second group.

John W. Caskey of Dwight, Harris, Koegle & Caskey of New York represented the theatre-owning defendants and Louis D. Frohlich of Schwartz & Frohlich represented the companies without theatre affiliates. Counsel from Nashville and Memphis also assisted.

Other Trust Matters

A final hearing on the anti-trust suit instituted by the Landis Theatre of Vineland, N. J., against the Warner Brothers theatre circuit in Philadelphia, and all the major distributors, has been set for March 25th before Judge William H. Kirpatrick in the United States district court sitting in Philadelphia. A previous preliminary injunction, restraining the major distributors from selling to Warners unless the Landis was given equal consideration, was set aside by the United States circuit court of appeals, decreeing that the injunction was prematurely issued and ordered the case returned to Judge Kirpatrick's court for a final hearing.

Federal Judge Michael Igoe postponed last Friday the hearing in the case of the Adelphi theatre anti-trust suit against Balaban & Katz and the majors until April 15th.

There was to be a hearing in the Dunbar anti-trust suit in Dallas this week.

Twentieth Century-Fox Figures Showing Gross and New Profits

Answers filed by Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation and its subsidiaries, Movietonews, Inc., and Twentieth Century-Fox Distributing Corporation, to U. S. $100,000 Benefit Fund Is Raised

Joseph M. Schenck, who was the California chairman of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, reveals that nearly $100,000 was raised by the film industry in that state, according to the Bulletin of the Screen Actors Guild in Hollywood.

Mr. Schenck said, according to the Bulletin, that while Southern California may fall just under its goal of $200,000, nearly $100,000 will come from the film industry, either as personal subscriptions or through the use of theatre facilities in making collections from audiences. All theatres cooperated in the "March of Dimes" drive in that state and studio collections went 100 per cent, Mr. Schenck said.

Major L. E. Thompson, motion picture chairman of the Finnish Relief Fund, issued the following statement over the weekend:

"Since the close of the Motion Picture Drive for the Finnish Relief Fund, requests have been received at headquarters from hundreds of theatres requesting a continuance of the drive. In many instances theatre owners themselves have extended the period of collections for a full week. We would welcome a drive from any theatre that did not participate in our recent campaign.

"Any theatre may obtain coin collection boxes and banners for the girl collectors by applying to Vincent G. Hart, Director of the Motion Picture Division, New York."

Jay Emanuel of Philadelphia and John H. Harris of Pittsburgh have accepted Herbert Hoover's invitation to serve as chairman of the drive in their respective cities.

More than 500 prints of the short subject, "Finland Fights," are now in circulation throughout the country.

Hold Charity Dinner

A large number of film industry leaders attended the 40th Anniversary celebration dinner of the National Jewish Hospital, Denver, at the Hotel Astor in New York last Sunday. Paul Felix Warburg, philanthropist, was the guest of honor. Jack Cohn, vice-president of Columbia, was chairman of the motion picture committee for the dinner and Louis Nizer, attorney, was vice-chairman. Mr. Nizer was also toastmaster.

The hospital, which is non-sectarian, is the oldest institution in the country for the free care of tubercular patients.

The Motion Picture Associates, New York, will make a formal request from the Motion Picture Relief Fund to augment its limited resources for welfare work, it was decided at a meeting of the board of directors last week. The Associates will also ask the major film companies to assist in its charity work.

Attending the meeting were Moe Streimer, chairman of the board; William Stein, Leo Brecher, Dave Levy and Jerome Wilson.

Edwin M. Booth, Cincinnati manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has been named zone manager there for the Will Rogers Memorial Drive in April.

The House across the Bay

(United Artists-Wanger)

Criminological Study

Joan Bennett, turning in what may well be called the best performance of her career, dominates this interesting study of the wives who wait for the men who go to Alcatraz. George Raft, varying his stoic style with a dash or two of humor in the early footage, gives another of his penitentiary portrayals. Lloyd Nolan is back to his old calling as the wily fellow who would have the lady one way or another, and Walter Pidgeon plays an amorous but upright gentleman who won't allow it. Gladys George has a profitable role as another of the "Rock Widows."

The situation dealt with by Myles Connolly in his original story and worked over for the screen by Kathryn Scola is intrinsically fascinating. In it the wife of an abruptly wealthy practitioner of extra-legal business operations reports him to the Income Tax Department for evasions she thinks will net him a year's sentence and save him from gangsters plotting his death. Instead, he gets ten years, his lawyer gets his money and strives to get also the well meaning wife. Incidents are melodramatic and the ending is final in all senses of the word.

Miss Bennett sings two songs, both the kind of numbers that get onto the radio and become popular. The direction by Archie Mayo is for the most part effective.

The Showdown

(Paramount-Sherman)

Hopalong Cassidy

The familiar pattern of action is followed closely in this version of the adventures of Hopalong Cassidy and other characters created by Clarence Mulford and interpreted by William Boyd, Russell Hayden and Britt Wood, with able assistance rendered by Morris Ankrum, as the villain of the piece, and Jane Clayton supplying romantic interest.

The main body of the action devolves from a shipment of horses made on behalf of the character interpreted by Miss Clayton, who follows her to a ranch.

The screen play by Harold and Daniel Kusell, from an original story by Jack Jungmeyer, provides ample scope for movement, the quality stressed by Howard Bretherton's direction.

Scenic and effective outdoor atmosphere has been provided for the Harry Sherman production.

The Ghost Comes Home

(MGM)

The Worm Turns

Herewith a screen version of a tale concerning a meek and ineffectual citizen who is driven by circumstance to turn upon his tormentors and discover the bliss of ruling as against being ruled.

Cast as the worm who turns is Frank Morgan, in a departure from strictly comic roles. Too, Billie Burke is cast as his nagging wife rather than on her usual fluttery lines. Ann Rutherford is seen as their daughter, John Shelton an orchestra leader with whom she falls in love. In the orchestra are Reginald Owen and Harold Huber, while Nat Pendleton and Frank Albertson portray relatives living off "the worm." Donald Meek, as a small town banker, and Hobart Cavanaugh round out the cast.

Produced by Albert Levoy, the picture was directed by William Thiele. Richard Maibaum and Harry Ruskin wrote the screen play, based on a stage play by Georg Kaiser. Lacking somewhat in pace, the film is carried by its players for the most part.

A Chump at Oxford

(United Artists-Hal Roach)

Farce Comedy

The campus of England's decorous Oxford is the locale for the latest Laurel and Hardy pursuit of comedy. With Hal Roach producing and Alfred Goulding directing, Hal Roach, Jr., makes his executive debut as associate producer.

Charles Rogers, Felix Adler and Harry Langdon wrote the story and adapted it. That some of the items are implausible has little to do with the case, for there is abundant comedy. No attempt is made to filter romance into it.

Stan and Ollie, as a reward for capturing a bank bandit, are sent to Oxford, but have a real job from the start in trying to catch up with the education. They immediately become victims of hazing. Lost all night in a maze of hedge, they run afoul of the dean. Stan receives a blow on the head and becomes the greatest athlete in the history of the school. Ollie, his man servant, quits, just as Stan is brought back to his senses.

The small parts allotted by Forrester Harvey as the gentleman's gentleman and Wilfred Lucas as the dean are capably enacted.

Blondie on a Budget

(Columbia)

Domestic Comedy

The fifth number in the Blondie series is addressed to a somewhat higher age level, in the main, employing for the first time story material of the variety commonly called sophisticated. It retains, however, a substantial amount of the lighter type humor for which the first four films in the series were notable, and this portion of the subject matter elicited more laughter from the preview audience than the snappier stuff. Over all, the picture grossed something less than the series' average of chuckles and guffaws.

This time the script, by Richard Flouroy from a story by Charles Molyneux Brown, has "Blondie" struggling to find $185 in the family budget with which to finance a fur coat, and "Dagwood" equally desirous of extracting

Millionaire Playboy

(RKO)

Farce

Joe Penner, in this farce, is a millionaire playboy who gets hiccups whenever he is kissed by a beautiful girl. Reminiscent of the earlier Harold Lloyd vehicles, the story brings him into contact with bevies of beauties, some of whom have osculatory designs on the hero.

Supporting Penner, whose mannerisms and manner of delivery are typically Penner, are Linda Hayes, Russ Brown, Fritz Feld, Tom Kennedy, Granville Bates, Arthur Q. Bryan, Adele Pearce, Diane Hunter, Mary Milford and Manton Moreland.

The screenplay by Bert Granet and Charles E. Roberts, who adapted an original story by Granet, leaves several matters undeveloped. Robert Sisk produced under the guidance of Lee Marcus, executive producer.

Leslie Goodwin's other achievements in the directorial field have merited more praise.

The Castle on the Hudson

(Warners)

Prison Tragedy

A virile drama of prison life, which ends in tragedy, Warner's "The Castle on the Hudson" is an emotional cocktail. Another of the pictures which takes its theme from Warden Lewis E. Lawes' book, "20,000 Years in Sing Sing," the film develops the story of an East Side New York youngster who is sent to Sing Sing, "the 'castle' on the Hudson," for a felony. Released temporarily on his honor when his sweetheart is believed to be dying, he is suspected of a murder she commits while aiding him in a fight with an enemy. He returns to prison when the warden is censured, and goes on trial for his life. Convicted despite the girl's confession, he is executed.

John Garfield as the victim of environment, Ann Sheridan as the girl and Pat O'Brien as the humanitarian warden head the cast in well rounded characterizations, Miss Sheridan doing rather well in one of her biggest assignments. In support are Burgess Meredith, Henry O'Neill, Jerome Cowan, Guinn "Big Boy" Williams, John Litel, Margot Stevenson, Willard Robertson, Edward Pawley, Billy Wayne, Nedda Harrigan, Wade Boteler, Barbara Pepper and Robert Strange.

Seton I. Miller, Brown Holmes and Courtney Terrett for the screenplay, and Anatole Litvak for the direction, as well as Samuel Bischoff for the production, merit credit for a grimly effective, heart tugging piece.

Dr. O'Dowd

(Warner Bros.)

Irish Character Drama

This is the sort of British film which comes forth with unexpected charm and life from a homely Irish canvas. The story of an old Irish doctor who is also a toper, it boasts a most interesting characterization by Shaun Glenville as the living epitome of L. A. G. Strong's original. In war stricken Britain, such a picture as this will have a sure escapist appeal; in the United States an Irish population should find it agreeable too.

Glenville's "Doctor O'Dowd" is a likeable old fellow who loses his practice through drink, and goes away to the mountains to fish, drink and forget. He comes up against the son who has disowned him, and despite professional adamancy and filial bitterness, saves him from diphtheria.

It is Glenville's film and here is a grand character artist. But Mary Merrill's tattered poetess, Walter Hudd's slick English doctor, Pat Noonan's burly and benign foreman, and an oddly unshaven portrayal by Charles Victor register soundly. Peggy Cummins, a flaxen-headed youngster, is arresting.

The Teddington technical sheen is over it all.

Mystery in Swing

(International Roadshow)

Murder and Jive

With an all-colored cast performing more than ably in this murder story with a background of swing music, "Mystery in Swing" is constructed along those lines best calculated to appeal to the 900 theatres for which it is intended.

The screen play, by Arthur Hoerl, with additional dialogue by F. E. Miller and William Werckenthien, is based on the murder of a "hot" trumpeter, through the placing of poison in the mouthpiece of the instrument. This, in turn, causes a second murder. Both crimes are solved in logical fashion and with a high quotient of accompanying comedy.

The humor is supplied by F. E. Miller, portraying a police sergeant whose long suit is effort rather than native ability, and by Buck Woods, as a continually jailed, card playing friend of the murdered man. Monte Hawley, as a newspaper reporter, Marguerite Whitten, Tommie Moore, Edward Thompson and Jess Lee Brooks all supply capable characterizations in leading roles.

Music of the sort to delight the genus rug cutter is supplied by Ceepee Johnson and his orchestra, and the "Four Toppers."

Arthur Dreifuss, who produced and directed, and Rudolph Brent, associate producer, have given their vehicle life and movement while aiming it squarely at its intended market.

Convicted Woman

(Columbia)

Prison Reform

Conditions in prisons for women are looked into in this Columbia melodrama about a girl who is sent to a reformatory for something she didn't do. One of the inmates commits suicide and the institution gets a new superintendent.

Heading the cast are Rochelle Hudson, Frieda Inescort, June Lang, Lola Lane and Iris Meredith. The only male part of any importance is that of a newspaperman, played by Glenn Ford. Nick Grinde directed from a screen play by Joseph Carole. The film was based on a story by Martin Mooney and Alex Gottlieb.

"Betty Andrews" is arrested in a department store and accused of theft. Although innocent and defended by "Mary Ellis," a prominent lawyer and social worker, the judge sentences "Betty" to a year in the Curtiss House of Correction. "Chief Matron Brackett" rules the reformatory with an iron hand, aided by some stooges among the inmates, among them "The Duchess." An inmate kills herself and "Betty" gets word of it to "Jim Brent," a reporter.

The scandal causes the appointment of "Mary Ellis," but "Chief Matron Brackett" stays on as an assistant. "Mary Ellis" changes things about, even agreeing to hold a dance for the girls. A merit system is installed under which ten girls are allowed to leave the reformatory for the Thanksgiving holiday. "Brackett" and "The Duchess" have "Betty" kidnapped to prevent her from returning on time, but the reporter rescues her and the regime of "Mary Ellis" is saved.

Song of the Windmills

(Molinos de Viento)

(Atlas)

Spanish Musical

The Spanish romance set to music, given the rather elastic title translation of "Song of the Windmills," is similar in locale and general story outline to "La Kermesse Heroique" ("Carnival in Flanders") of several years back, but the Hispanic successor has steered its plottings to good taste and lacks the Gallic film's production trappings.

The film was shot in Spain just before the civil war, which may explain the inferior mechanical construction, particularly in the lighting, and in the recording of the gay music of Maestro Luna. English titles have been superimposed.

Life in the land of tulips, windmills and dykes follows a calm and customary pattern until the arrival of a crew of dark-eyed Spanish seamen. The maids of the town, smitten by the courtly manners of the visitors, forget their swains. However, the Captain remembers his good breeding and hoists ancher, only to discover he is carrying off with him the village belle, whose love surmounts all barriers.

Seen at an afternoon performance in the Radio Teatro Hispano, in the heart of the Spanish speaking district of New York City, where the audience relished especially the comedy. —Joseph F. Coughlin.

Romantic Melodrama

Pearl diving in the South Pacific is the basis of action of the romantic melodrama filmed in and off Australia. The underwater scenes lend something of zest to the picture, which was produced and directed by Ken G. Hall.

Lloyd Hughes and Shirley Ann Richards have the leading roles.

"Daubeney Carshott," to prove his courage and win the hand of the vamping "Stella Raff," goes to Thursday Island to dive for pearls. He becomes acquainted with "Craig," another pearl diver. The Baker's Wife

(La Femme du Boulanger)

("The Baker's Wife, Inc.")

Bucolic Bawdry

The newest number from France is a daring and outspoken tale of a confectioner's connubial complications, with a dash of comedy.

The picture may be compared with a contentious contribution of last year, the censorially buffeted and critically acclaimed "Harvest." Both narratives found their origin in the racy imagination of Jean Giono.

Raimu gives a demonstration of his comic talents, particularly in the drunk sequences. The others are far from being distinguished in portrayals.

With a cosmic sounding foreword, implying a universal connection between the hunger for bread and sex irregularities, and a collection of expertly composed English titles by Dr. John Erskine, the idyll sketches a crisis—emphasized in the economic, not the moral element—that besets a village when the wife of the local baker gallops off with a district sheep herder, and the jilted baker-husband goes on strike until she returns.

Siege

(RKO Pathe)

Document of Warsaw

The final weeks of Warsaw, Poland, when it was under the constant rain of German bombs and shells, were captured pictorially by Julien Bryan, cameraman, and now are presented by RKO Pathe as a documentary of the Polish people as they lived in the shadow of death. Into the 10 minutes are packed glimpses of the destruction of homes and factories, deaths of men and horses from aid raids; women peasants lying dead in a potato field where they were machine gunned by German planes as they ran for shelter; expectant mothers and children in the cellar of a hospital; churches razed by the shelling. Mr. Bryan also gives the vivid narration. It is a powerful portrayal of the ravages of war.—Running time, 10 minutes.

(King of Comedy)

Chaplin Reissue

The "Paper Hanger" is one of a series of 10 two-reel Charlie Chaplin comedies that were made for the old Essanay company in 1915 and are being reissued by King of Comedy Film Corporation, New York. "The Paper Hanger," originally released in silent form under the title "Work," has been speeded up, with orchestral music and sound effects added. The 25 years of technical improvement of the motion picture makes difficult an evaluation of the Chaplin humor of 1915 on audiences today. Though the wistful little man with the cane, derby, overgrown shoes and twitching Hitler mustache is still a most appealing character the picture public of today may fidget at the obvious and repetitious comedy of the early Chaplin. A title has the comedian saying he isn't an ordinary paper hanger but is studying to be a dictator. Running time, 19 minutes.

Triumph!

"BRILLIANT... a grand picture. We have no hesitation in calling the film the play's superior, in calling Raymond Massey's screen Lincoln better than his play's Lincoln."

—Frank S. Nugent, Times

"SUPERB, all of it . . . all the superlatives which were justifiably lavished on the stage production of Robert E. Sherwood's 'Abe Lincoln in Illinois' may justifiably be heaped on the screen version of this memorable drama."

"UNFORGETABLE screen impersonation . . . Massey's acting transcends mere make-believe . . . a profoundly stirring motion picture experience."—Howard Barnes, Herald-Tribune

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Novels

Hollywood's interest in entertainment forms already stamped with the seal of public approval, as evinced by its purchases of stage plays, magazine stories and books, for film purposes, is turning more and more to the novel.

Already released since the start of 1940, or planned for release during the year, are some 60 pictures based on novels, representing schedules of 10 studios. Heading the list is RKO Radio, with 18, including the L. M. Montgomery "Anne of Windy Poplars" series, while Warner Brothers plan 11, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, nine, and Paramount, eight.

Nine at MGM

The novel is the basis of the following MGM films: "Escape," Ethel Vance; "Not Too Narrow, Not Too Deep" (to be released under the title of "Strange Cargo," Richard Sale; "The Yearling," Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings; "Florian," Felix Salten; "The Mortal Storm," Phyllis Bottome; "Northwest Passage," Kenneth Roberts; "Pride and Prejudice," Jane Austen; "Busman's Honeymoon," Dorothy Sayers, to be made in England, and the Selznick-produced and MGM released "Gone with the Wind," Margaret Mitchell.

Columbia will release Frank Lloyd's production of "Tree of Liberty," by Elizabeth Page, as well as "Arizona," by Clarence Buddington Kelland, both historical subjects, in addition to Maude Delavan's "The Rumelhearts of Rambler Avenue," and the "Pepper" series by Margaret Lathrop.

Popular Authors Used

Louis Bromfield's work is represented by "It All Came True," at Warners, and "New Orleans," at Columbia. A. J. Cronin's "Vigil in the Night" has been made by RKO, and his "Doctor Lennox" will be at Columbia, while RKO will also produce "Freckles" and "Laddie," both by Gene Stratton Porter.

Paramount's list includes "Seventeen," by Booth Tarkington; "Those Were the Days" (based on the "Siwash" stories by George Fitch); "The Way of All Flesh," Samuel Butler; "Victory," Joseph Conrad; "The Light That Failed," Rudyard Kipling; "Miss Susie Slagle's," Augusta Tucker, and "Food for the Gods," by H. G. Wells and "Shepherd of the Hills" by Harold Bell Wright, these latter two planned for 1941 release at present.

Warners accounts for "Captain Horatio Hornblower," C. S. Forester; "January Heights," Polan Banks; "The Sea Hawk," Rafael Sabatini; "City for Conquest," Aben Kandel; "All This and Heaven, Too," Rachel Field; "Flowing Gold," Rex Beach; "House on the Hill," Somerset Maugham; "Money and the Woman," James M. Cain; "Out of Gas," Charles Nordoff and James Norman Hall, and "The Sea Wolf," Jack London.

At RKO are "Half a Rogue," Garrett Fort; "The Life of Benjamin Franklin," Carl Van Doren; "Father Damien," John Farrow, (the book having been called "Damien the Leper"); "Little Men," Louisa May Alcott; "Kitty Foyle," Christopher Morley; "Little Orvie," Booth Tarkington; "Sister Carrie," Theodore Dreiser; "Smiler with a Knife," Nicholas Blake; "Tom Brown's School Days," Thomas Hughes; "The Unbreakable Mrs. Doll," Grace Perkins; "Water Gypsies," A. P. Herbert; "Wrapped in Cellophane," Vina Delmar, and three more pictures in the "Saint" series, Leslie Charteris.

Universal now has in the cutting room a screen version of Nathaniel Hawthorne's "House of Seven Gables," and Twentieth Century-Fox has already made its version of John Steinbeck's "Grapes of Wrath," and is scheduled to use "Children of God," by Vardis Fisher, as one part of its "Brigham Young."

For United Artists release, Selznick-International has "Rebecca," Daphne de Maurier; Edward Small, "My Son, My Son," by Howard Spring, and Walter Wanger, "Personal History," by Vincent Sheean.

PRODUCTION KEEPS A LEVEL PACE

Hollywood's studios completed seven pictures this week, one less than in the week before, started eight (seven last week), and had 34 shooting, 19 being prepared, and 64 edited, compared with the 33, 20 and 65 of the prior period in the same categories.

Twentieth Century-Fox and Republic each finished three: "Rancho Grande", "The Dark Comamnd" and "Ghost Valley Raiders" for Republic, and "Earthbound", "Star Dust" and "Charlie Chan's Cruise" for Paramount.

Started were "Offenders of the Law", Columbia; "Andy Hardy Meets a Debutante", MGM; "Covered Wagon Trails" and "Son of the Navy", Monogram; "Turnabout", Hal Roach, for United Artists release; "Maryland", Twentieth Century-Fox; "La Conga Nights", Universal, and "Flight Eight", Warners.

MGM had the greatest number shooting, with nine pictures before the cameras, followed by Warners with four, Universal three, and Columbia, Paramount, RKO Radio and Twentieth Century-Fox two apiece. Principal Productions and Edward Small had one each, both for United Artists.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

The Comes-the-Revolution Department of the New York (Communists') Daily Worker is asleep at the switch. Ten days have passed and not a word have we noted in that paper attacking the announcement that the world's costliest fur coat of Platina fox skins, valued at $100,000 is to be made for Paramount Pictures by I. J. Fox, New York furrier.

It is to be worn by Paulette Goddard in a new film, "The Ghost Breakers." The most expensive coat now is a $60,000 chinchilla.

Movie stars no longer like to display expensive clothes for fear of antagonizing the public, according to I. J. Fox's Jack Sarnoff. He recalled that Marlene Dietrich was on the point of posing for photographers with one of his $11,000 fox pelts when she refused, remembering some income tax difficulties.

Identities of most of the chemical bases, except silver, going into film stock on which the stars of Hollywood charm their audiences, are pretty much unknown to the public. Camphor, for example—500,000 pounds of the tough, gumlike crystalline substance going into the manufacture of motion picture film every year.

Twenty-five years ago, camphor was a foreign monopoly, according to Dr. C. M. A. Stine, vice president of E. I. duPont de Nemours and Company, which is actually engaged in the motion picture business through its holdings in DuPont (formerly DuPont-Pathe) Film Manufacturing Company, and which, with Eastman Kodak, manufactures just about all the film stock used in Hollywood.

The island of Formosa off the China coast was once the world's camphor center. But chemistry has changed all that, and the southern pine forests of the United States have largely supplanted Formosa. Camphor that is said to be chemically identical with the variety from Formosa is being made, and economically, from pinene derived from southern turpentine by passing hydrochloric acid gas into oil of turpentine. The imported Formosa stuff had cost $3.65 a pound, whereas, the synthetic camphor used in films is down to 35 cents a pound.

Many out in Australia apparently were inspired by Metro-Goldwyn's production of "Boys' Town," writes Victor Nowland to Rob Wagner in Beverley Hills, Cal., and at least one person really did do something about Australian boys who are in a similar plight to those befriended by Father Flanagan at his Boys' Town in Nebraska. The benefactor is Father Dunlea who began a Boys' Town at Southerland, New South Wales, with only seven boys. Now there are 17, ages ranging from eight to eighteen. Mayor of this boys' town, by strange coincidence, is one 16-year-old Michael Rooney, same age, same name as "Mickey" Rooney, that is, the same as "Mickey's" screen name, "Mickey's" father being Joe Yule.

London exhibitors give new proof that necessity is the mother of invention. With nightly blackouts of the blackest darkening the streets so dark as to make night traveling unadvisable, the Curzon theatre advertises the relationship between the moon and easy getting around, circulating cards announcing that there is a bright new moon, a full moon, etc., to guide customers to the Curzon box office window.

Some five years ago come spring, Milton Silver, advertising-publicity director of Herman Robbins' National Screen Service, devised the form of company institutional advertising which has since become so widely known, in its featuring of lusty babies of all kind and description. Nor has the attention given the series emanated alone from within this business, for large industrials outside are turning to Milt's babies, even going back, it would seem, right to their beginning, as the Bell Telephone System has, for one, as witness.

Silver's first ad of the series, in 1935, showed a little roustabout yelping: "You're telling me . . . about National Screen Trailers!" Now Bell comes along with an ad featuring a little roustabout yelping: "You're telling me . . . what a great thing the telephone is!"

The film and radio business gave Terry Carpenter, Democratic candidate for governor of Nebraska, an idea on which to plant the campaign seed from which he hopes to reap a bumper crop of votes.

From films, he takes the case of "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," and from radio, the weekly "March of Time" broadcast.

Result is he has shaken up a program for daily airing on Station KFAB, Nebraska's most powerful broadcaster, called "Mr. Carpenter Goes to Lincoln" (the state capital). The program, in "March of Time" style, will air his views, his early life, his first steps in politics, his major campaign ideas, and his many stormy affairs in Nebraska vote scrambling. He will NOT appear in the show, which will be cast from the KFAB studio staff.

Building from a March 1st start, the program will run until April 8th, the day before the primary, and the last week will be devoted to all the things Carpenter will do when (and if) elected.

Whether the two Swiss inventors who have devised a "smell' track to supplement the motion picture's sound track are effecting a contribution to the fuller enjoyment of living remains to be seen—or sniffed. It requires no excessively fertile imagination to detect possibilities both captivating and horrendous in a magic which, for example, can tickle the nostrils of moviegoers with the scent of orange blossoms whilst the eyes feast upon a wedding procession and the sound track brings to our ears the measured strains of the "Lohengrin" march.

The announcement that the "odorated talking picture" is already an actuality presents immediate problems of a degree of delicacy that will tax Hollywood, causing the editors of the New York Herald-Tribune to pray that we do not come to the day when "movie" houses advertise: "A clothespin with every seat."

The local license commission of Lowell, Mass., has the most peculiar privilege of issuing passes to any and all of the town's ten theatres, admitting one commissioner and guest at any hour of the day and night, supposedly for the purpose of examining the premises. No less than 450 of these passes, to all theatres, are in use of "commissioners." There probably aren't 450 persons in the employ of the entire commission.

The newsreels might take time off from picturing the perennial baby parades, flower festivals, ski skaters, sweepstake winners, ship launchings and other favorite lens subjects and go hunt up one Giuseppe Pucci, in Aliquippa, Pennsylvania. Having lost his job in a local steel mill, in 1936, because of something about his work in a union, he was forced to borrow money from friends until recently, when he received $1,624 in back wages under a NLRB decision, went from door to door and paid off his debts, then inserted a paid advertisement in the local newspaper publicly giving thanks to 28 benefactors he listed by name in the ad.

Funnyman Ned Sparks, who started life as Edward Sparkman, just won't take the Government's word that the cost of his false teeth are not deductible on his income tax return. He's had the argument with Uncle Sam clear across the continent, and right now is having it out in the Federal Courthouse in San Francisco, where Ned is hollering that he had his own teeth pulled out and store teeth put in, at a cost of of $3,500, because he found he was hissing in sound films every time he pronounced the letter "s" and that was spoiling his screen career.

Sparks declared that he lopped off $500 from the $3,500 cost because he used the store teeth outside of acting hours.

Harry Hershfield, of "Abie Kabibble" note, who last week became commentator on drama and the cinema for the New York Daily Mirror, tells the yarn about the exhibitor, whose business was very good during summer and fall, but who found it dropped to almost nothing in January and February. He couldn't figure it out. Until a patron asked him why he still had a large sign outside saying, "40 Degrees Cooler Inside."

In Holland one is no longer allowed to whistle or hum his favorite tune over the telephone. You are also forbidden to make strange sounds which appear to have no meaning. (That gives us an idea for those Western Union "Happy-Birthday-to-You" song greetings chirped into telephones over here).

This is the ruling of the Dutch military censor, who has banned what he describes as "calls without content"—that is, telephone calls whose contents are not comprehensible.

Calls are listened to by censors and may be cut off without warning or indication of reason.

Patrons of Fremont Williams' Ada, Okla., theatre sat tensely in their seats as the crucial moment of the feature picture arrived.

The hero's mother was lying at the point of death. The hero, grief stricken, was wringing his hands.

Suddenly from the silver screen boomed a deep voice:

"Calling Car No. 2. Calling Car No. 2. Go to Main and Mississippi Streets and investigate a collision. That is all. KNHC, Ada police, signing off." At that very second, on the screen, a nurse came from the sick room, put her finger to her lips, and said, "Sh-h-h."

One of the tubes in the theatre's amplifier had acted as a detector tube in picking up the police short wave emergency broadcast.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE, LABOR AND BETTER FILM GROUPS OPPOSE NEELY

Los Angeles Chamber Votes Opposition; Central Labor Union of Wilmington Protests Anti-Block Sales Bill

Opponents of the Neely anti-block booking bill this week received the support of a local Chamber of Commerce, and of talent and labor groups and better films councils. Within the industry itself, RKO, Paramount and Twentieth Century-Fox further extended their activity in opposition.

The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce unanimously voted its opposition to the measure last week. After a report from Frank P. Doherty, chairman, and Neil Petree and Phillip Norton, of a special committee, the chamber's board ordered its Washington representative to "do all in his power to defeat the Neely Bill."

None of the committee members is in the motion picture industry. The chamber was the first group of its kind to go on record in opposition to the bill.

"Censorship at Worst"

Mr. Doherty called the synopsis clause "censorship at its worst," and continued, "What may appear to one person as a true statement of the picture and a true description of the depicting of vice, crime, or sex passion to another would appear to be a misstatement or deliberate concealment. . . ."

Another of the many union groups who have gone on record on opposition to the proposed bill, is the Central Labor Union of Wilmington, Del.

A majority of the members of the Chicago Better Films Council opposed the bill. Specific action may be taken, it was learned.

New York's Independent Theatre Owners Association reported Wednesday that 95 per cent of independent owners throughout the country answering a questionnaire expressed opposition to the bill, and that the replies indicated that many local women's clubs and church groups oppose it.

The Screen Directors' Guild Tuesday voted to oppose the bill, attacking the synopsis clause.

Thomas Hungerford, a theatre manager, under the auspices of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, outlined the bill's provisions last Saturday over Station WAAF.

Paramount theatre associates individually and locally will conduct campaigns, Leonard Goldenson, home office theatre executive, said on his return from a meeting in Miami.

Fox Midwest circuit managers, under the direction of Elmer C. Rhoden, are understood to have embarked upon an anti-Neely bill drive.

9,200 Letters to Civic Executives

RKO sent two letters, on on "Pinocchio" and the other on the Neely Bill, to 9,200 executives of women's clubs, better films councils, schools, churches, and the like. Both letters were accompanied by a booklet, entitled, "Questions and Answers Clarifying the Neely Bill," by Harry Goldberg, director of advertising and publicity of the Warner Brothers theatre circuit.

RKO said in the letter: "We sincerely believe that this proposed law will not accomplish its purpose, and we are opposed to it because it is impractical, misleading, and, if passed, would materially increase distribution costs of motion pictures, and consequently increase admission prices."

RKO sent two letters, one on "Pinocchio" and bill as impractical, remarking that, under the provisions of the first, "it would be impossible for us to sell more than one picture at a time . . . a procedure bound to drastically increase selling costs."

Of Section Four, on requirements of synopses, RKO declared the producers would have to change marketing methods, which "would cause financing troubles for us, reduced production, and consequently a large increase in unemployment."

Mr. Goldberg, to show that there is no uniform opinion on the bill among previewing groups in 20 cities, presented these figures:

Town or City	Number of Pictures Shown	Recommended by One or More Public Groups	Percentage of Recommended Pictures
Beloit, Wis.	150	147	98%
Adrian, Mich.	101	89	88%
Portland, Ore.	72	62	86%
Memphis, Tenn.	61	52	85%
Chicago, Ill.	103	86	83%
Omaha, Neb.	49	39	80%
Cincinnati, Ohio	72	57	79%
Milwaukee, Wis.	75	58	77%
Wichita, Kan.	123	95	77%
Huntington, Ind.	87	66	76%
Lansing, Mich.	103	78	76%
Minneapolis, Minn.	76	58	76%
Richmond, Ind.	146	108	74%
The Oranges, N. J.	150	108	72%
Kansas City, Mo.	70	50	71%
Indianapolis, Ind.	463	295	64%
Lincoln, Neb.	211	136	64%
Topeka, Kan.	270	164	61%
Columbus, Neb.	153	86	57%
Houston, Texas	367	206	56%
	2,902	2,040	70.3%

"The variation of opinion from Beloit, 98 per cent recommended, to Houston, Texas, with 56 per cent recommended, is a difference of 42.

Mr. Goldberg in his booklet defined terms like "block-booking" and others which may be unfamiliar to the general public. He cited the testimony of George Schaefer, president of RKO, that in 1936-37 only 33 per cent of the contracts sold by RKO provided for the full amount of the 46 pictures to be produced (announced by RKO).

"Fifty-eight per cent of the contracts sold to exhibitors were for less than 40 pictures," Mr. Goldberg said, adding, "In 1937-38, only 32 per cent of the contracts called for the total number."

Mr. Goldberg noted the cancellation privileges motion pictures based on famous modern or classic literary works:

J. M. Barrie's "Quality Street".....2,837
Maxwell Anderson's "Winterset".....3,259
Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream".....2,971
Dicken's "Great Expectations".....2,720
"A Christmas Carol".....1,292
"Green Pastures".....1,503
"Romeo and Juliet".....590

"This shows that from 15 per cent to nearly 50 per cent of the exhibitors ordinarily buying a company's product, refused to play these worth-while pictures.

"On the other hand, there were less than twenty cancellations for the following pictures:

"Last Gangster"
"Desire"
"They Gave Him a Gun"
"Bad Man of Brimstone"
"Slight Case of Murder"
"Big City"
"Alcatraz"
"Jungle Love"
"Angels With Dirty Faces"
"Little Tough Guys"

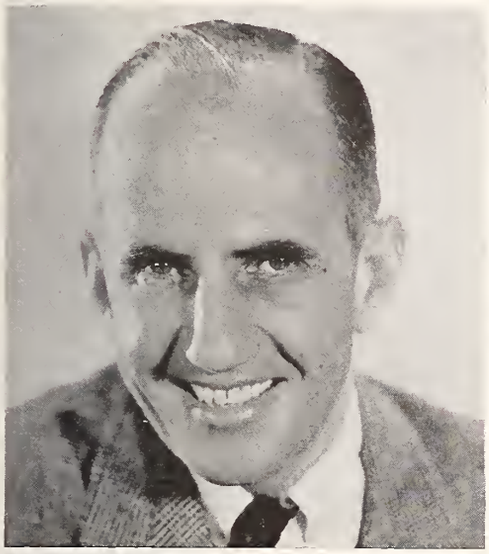
Mr. Goldberg said the "chief inspiration of the Neely Bill is the attempt of a minority of theatre owners to create a public opinion that they can use as a club against competitors."

WOR'S FM TRANSMITTER GOING ON THE AIR

The New York area will have its first full-time frequency modulation station when WOR's new FM transmitter, manufactured by Western Electric, goes on the air this weekend. The FM station will carry the same programs that are broadcast by the regular amplitude modulation transmitter."

The new FM transmitter, according to F. E. Lack, manager of Western Electric Company's specialty products division, is based on Major Armstrong's system and is designed to contribute to economy of operation and naturalness of transmitted sound. J. R. Popple, chief engineer of WOR, said that frequency modulation will give the radio listener amazingly fine reception.

New Greek Film Import Rules



New Greek regulations which facilitate the importation of high-priced film and establish a special quota for shorts and newsreels have been announced by the motion picture division of the U. S. Department of Commerce.

Until the modifying decision was made the maximum amount authorized in foreign exchange for the importation of feature films (including royalties, cost of print and advertising material) was $750 per feature. Now the maximum amount has been raised to $1,500, provided special conditions are fulfilled. The terms include: 1) the importer must guarantee that the film will be shown for one week simultaneously in two first-run Athens theatres charging 20 drachmas or more for orchestra seats or two consecutive weeks in one theatre; 2) the importer must furnish a 100,000 drachma bond to guarantee that the conditions will be met and that the film will be released before the end of April, 1940; 3) the value quota will be charged at the full value of the film in foreign exchange and the quantity quota will be debited two instead of one features.

The S. A. Athenes-Actualites ("Cineac") has been granted a special quota of $9,000 to be used exclusively for the importation of shorts not exceeding 600 meters in length. That quota must be utilized before Oct. 31, 1940. The Cineac may assign portions of that quota to other importers. Educational and scientific films not exceeding 1,200 meters may be imported for a period of not over 75 days for showing for one week only at the Cineac News theatre in Athens. Exchange is made available only for print costs at the maximum rate of 2½c per foot for black and white prints and 8c for colored films.

The office of the American Commercial Attache in Athens reported that the trade received favorably the new decisions.

HOLLYWOOD BUYS MORE STORIES IN MONTH THAN IN PREVIOUS EIGHT

MGM Pays $150,000 for "The Philadelphia Story", with $100,000 More for Katharine Hepburn to Star

Hollywood has purchased more new screen material in a month of the new year than it had in any of the previous eight months. In January there 61 purchases made. Forty were original stories, 15 were books and magazine articles, and six stage plays. Included in these purchases was a radio program entitled "I Want a Divorce," purchased by Paramount as a vehicle for Dick Powell and Joan Blondell.

Paramount Buys "Interlochen"

Following closely on its "The Great Victor Herbert" musical, Paramount has purchased the rights to "Interlochen," a story dealing with the famed National Musical Camp for Young America at Interlochen, Mich. The picture will be under the technical guidance of Dr. Joseph E. Maddy, founder of the camp and professor of radio music instruction at the University of Michigan. Andrew Stone, whose most recent effort was "The Great Victor Herbert," will produce and direct the new musical. The idea for the picture was purchased from Ann Ronell, who has been engaged to work on the music and lyrics.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer paid $150,000 for the screen rights to the Broadway stage success, "The Philadelphia Story," plus $100,000 to Katharine Hepburn to star in the picture. Miss Hepburn a short while ago purchased the screen rights to the play from author Philip Barry for the sum of $30,000, giving her a profit on the negotiations of some $220,000. The purchase price for "The Philadelphia Story" is called by far the highest paid for a stage production since the outbreak of the war last September but the price is by no means the highest ever paid for a stage play. Several have brought higher purchase figures, such as "Room Service" at $255,000; "The American Way," $250,000; "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," $225,000; "You Can't Take It With You," $200,000; "Dead End," $165,000; "Dodsworth," $160,000. "Brother Rat" was bought at the same amount as "The Philadelphia Story," $150,000.

Goldwyn Gets "Little Foxes"

Another Broadway production, "The Little Foxes," was purchased by Samuel Goldwyn. The price was 25 per cent of the net profit with a minimum of $100,000 guaranteed.

A novel, written about ten years ago by the late Heywood Broun, "The Boy Grew Older," was purchased for production by John M. Stahl. The book reflects the Broun wit and brilliance but has no political or socialistic theme. It concerns mostly the life of a man left alone with his one son and his study of the boy's growth to maturity. The picture will go into production as soon as Mr. Stahl completes releasing arrangements.

BRITAIN OFF TELEVISION UNTIL WAR IS OVER; GERMAN COMPANY RESUMES

British Postmaster General Tells Commons Service Awaits Peace; 2,000 Receivers in New York, Says NBC

History seemed to be repeating itself this week when England decided that it could not revive television before the end of the war. The World War is still given as one of the reasons why England fell behind the United States in the development of motion pictures. Indications are that, although England took television out of the laboratories before this was done in the United States, America will assume undisputed leadership in the new medium of communication and entertainment before the current conflict is over. Meanwhile Germany began television operations again on a skeleton basis, hoping to keep up with world developments in television.

In the United States, activities on television's road of progress included observations by Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith on what type of television programs are suitable for theatres; NBC's report of audience reaction and new programs; work on a new Don Lee transmitter; arguments from the Du Mont company; Farnsworth demonstrations in New England cities; the formation of a new company, Television Film Industries, to make films for television uses and engage in other television projects and from Philadelphia attention to the possibilities of television as an educational medium.

Military Angles Involved

The British postmaster general told the House of Commons last Wednesday that there is little likelihood television service will be renewed in England before the war is over. Since television, as all forms of communications, falls under the jurisdiction of the postmaster general his statement to the House of Commons amounts to the final word.

The Television Advisory Committee of the British Government met last Monday, the first time since the opening of the war. Television interests have urged that some kind of service be restored. Preliminary conferences have been held with the Post Office Department, which has jurisdiction over communications in England.

English television was suspended during the war because the channels used are important for military purposes, both for England and the enemy. With a television transmitter taking up a band width about 600 times that required for a broadcasting station it would cause inteference with special transmitters, and enemy aircraft could use the television signals as a direction finder.

German Company Resumes

The Reichpost Television, Ltd., German television company, has resumed operations, according to the report of Sam E. Woods, American commercial attache in Berlin. Operations, as in England, were stopped at the outbreak of the war. The company is continuing its experiments with television cables or "land lines" as the English call them. The network is being expanded. It was noted that seven auditoriums in Berlin have been connected with the television transmitter. A coaxial cable has been laid to Hamburg, and it is reported that programs will begin there in the near future. Germany has resumed television to keep up with world progress in that medium, according to Mr. Woods' report to the Commerce Department. A curtailed schedule is planned.

Allan B. Oxley, RCA acoustic engineer, told a Montreal audience that television problems for the Dominion of Canada were more economic than technical. He said that someone who would put up $100,000 to start television going must be found. Furthermore, other funds would be needed for equipment for studios, transmitter and television cameras. Before television activities can be started in Canada a license must be obtained from Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, a quasi-governmental group which controls radio in the Dominion.

Inspects U. S. Television For British Theatres

Richard Ford of the Odeon Theatres, Ltd., is in the United States for a survey of television conditions. He is the television contact for Oscar Deutsch's British circuit of 185 theatres. The Odeon circuit, Mr. Ford said, pioneered in the use of theatre television in England.

Theatre television had advanced so far before the war, according to Mr. Ford, that a serious copyright situation arose. The British Broadcasting Company, which does all the transmitting, would give permission for the installation of television projection equipment in theatres, but negotiations for using material such as prize fights had to be carried on by the theatres with the fight promoter.

"One of the most successful theatre television programs was of the return of the King and Queen from their American tour," Mr. Ford said. "We had audiences as large as 1,000. Theatres found that patrons were willing to pay more than cinema prices for a special television event, such as a good fight."

Mr. Ford does not believe television will be a threat to motion picture theatres but a good extra attraction. "Not for a long time will theatre television be able to attract the public for anything besides special events. But the time may come when theatres will have a regular television part of their showing, running a quarter of an hour to one half hour. But television will never supplant films but may some day become a regular addition to motion picture programs."

NBC Report on Progress In Television Programs

Two thousand television receivers are in operation in New York City and vicinity, according to a survey released by Alfred H. Morton, NBC vice-president in charge of television. Nine out of every ten receivers are reported to be in homes with the others in theatres and hotels and other similar places. The potential audience is put at 10,000, with about 8,000 listening to the evening programs.

NBC also reported that its list of owners of receivers who had written in for program charts numbered over 1,000 at the beginning of the year and was rising about 10 per cent a week. An analysis of the returns made by the television audience indicate that the quality of the programs steadily has improved, said the executive. About 38 per cent of the reply cards are sent back each week.

The out-of-pocket cost per week was listed at $10,000 and if certain overhead costs are included the figure is about $15,000 according to Mr. Morton's report.

Complete Play March 3rd

The first complete play to be presented over television during its Broadway run is scheduled to be J. B. Priestley's "When We Are Married" on Sunday, March 3rd. Mr. Morton said, "We hope to demonstrate that television has something very valuable to offer the legitimate stage." The decision to telecast the play was contingent on the approval of Actors Equity Council which voted in favor of the program. The players are to receive the same rates as for a regular stage performance.

Playwrights Form Company

Playwrights' Radio Company has been formed by Elmer Rice, S. N. Behrman, Maxwell Anderson and the estate of Sidney Howard to bring about closer cooperation between play writers and radio and television. The organization is supervised by Henry Souvaine. The group plans to invite other authors to contribute original material. A number of radio production men have become associated with Playwright's Radio Company.

NBC has been assembling a stock company of television actors to give shows at various stations all over the country when the need arises. George Engles, NBC vice-president and managing director of the network's artists' service bureau, said that such stock companies can serve not only television but also should prove a source of material to Hollywood scouts.

Don Lee Television

Harry R. Lubcke, director of television for the Don Lee Broadcasting System, on a visit to New York said, "Television should not attempt to excel or imitate any prior art in its program material: it must develop its own technique." Mr. Lubcke said that a television program must have variety and pace.

The Don Lee television station, W6XAO,

NBC TELEVISION CUTS FILM TIME

NBC has cut the amount of film for W2XBS, the television station, to two hours a week: one hour of shorts and one feature picture. The reason for this action, according to E. A. Hungerford, head of film buying for the station, is on account of lack of satisfactory product. Independent and foreign pictures have not been popular with the television audience.

Mr. Hungerford is negotiating for exchange deals under which the television station would receive shorts free for playing trailers over the air. The usual price for shorts, he said, was $15, while features average between $75 and $100.

Though the subject of a NBC newsreel has been considered, Mr. Hungerford said, "We are in the business of broadcasting, not producing motion pictures. Sooner or later, Hollywood will decide to cooperate with us. In the meantime, we will keep trying to convince film companies that our interests do not conflict."

started operations Dec. 23, 1931, and has been on the air ever since. Over 5,500 hours of programs have been telecast, including 11,000,000 feet of motion picture film. The Don Lee company formerly was permitted to use major company film but now only commercial and educational films are shown.

The Federal Communications Commission has given Thomas S. Lee permission to move his television station to Mt. Lee overlooking Hollywood. About one million dollars will be spent. The new station will be located on the former Mack Sennett estate. The new transmitter which is expected to increase W6XAO's range from 30 to about 60 miles is scheduled to go on the air this summer.

Television Programs For Theatres Considered

The question of what types of television programs could be presented in theatres has arisen since RCA has announced that it will put on the market in 1940 a theatre television projector. At least three other companies hope to have theatre television equipment ready this year: Baird. Scophony and General Electric. All this is commencing to cause no little exhibitor reflection on possibilities of competition.

Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, consulting industrial engineer and past president of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers and of the Institute of Radio Engineers, gave an answer to part of the theatre television program problem by saying, "Look at the present newsreels—television can present for theatres the same type of subjects. Generally speaking, the subject must be scheduled at a definite time in advance so that the equipment can be brought to the scene." He said that newsreels sometimes get in at the end of an unscheduled news event, such as a fire. Television, Dr. Goldsmith pointed out, could do the same thing.

Vaudeville was classed by Dr. Goldsmith as another great source of television program material for theatres. He coined the word "televaude" to describe what he believes may be some time in the future an important part of theatre programs. Vaudeville acts lend themselves to television, he said. He said that one day motion picture stars or other personalities may be interviewed from a central point and a number of theatres all over the area would be able to advertise a "television interview" for a definite hour.

Dr. Goldsmith expressed the opinion that television presentations would form only a small part of motion picture theatre entertainment, something like the present newsreel or an outstanding short subject. Television programs are expected to have definite appeal in theatres but a number of considerations limit the scope of television in the motion picture field.

The whole question of "Television Economics" has been treated by Dr. Goldsmith in a series of articles which have run for a year in the magazine—Communications. In the January issue—it was suggested that television might have one non-broadcast application to link a number of motion picture sound stages together so that central supervision would be possible.

In the February Communications which was published on the 15th Dr. Goldsmith discusses theatre television. The theatre, he points out, may be the meeting ground of the motion picture, radio and television industries. Among the factors hindering theatre television, according to Dr. Goldsmith, are "high cost of service, the expense of installing and maintaining the new equipment . . . the unproven continuing appeal of such a service to the audience."

Engineers of the staff of Allen B. Du Mont Laboratories have conceded the adequacy of the present 441-line television standard for the reproduction of close-ups and other subject matter with limited amount of pictorial detail but hold that a fine screen structure is essential for general scenes, particularly news and sporting events.

Du Mont advocates slowing down the number of frames per second by one half to double the number of picture elements that can be transmitted over a given channel. Du Mont hopes to eliminate the flicker which a slower rate would introduce by developing a better screen for the cathode-ray tube. The company also advocates a large screen for home reception which would require more lines in the picture.

NEW BRANDT HOUSES MAY HAVE TELEVISION

The circuit of Brandt theatres to be built in a dozen small cities in New England will have accommodations for television projection, Harry Brandt said in New York this week. The plans for the additional theatres still being in a discussion stage, the television provisions were not described in detail by Mr. Brandt, beyond his statement that each theatre would have "additional" booth space for possible television projectors, and also space behind each screen, for possible "back-of-screen" television projection.

Mr. Brandt said he had talked to one of the television companies about theatre television, but believed "that they have not progressed far enough, at this stage."

Farnsworth's Mobile

Farnsworth mobile television is being demonstrated in various New England cities. The first demonstrations were held at the Jordan March store in Boston and the unit will tour through March 20th. Public reaction in Boston was said to be very good.

Television Industries

Television Film Industries Corporation has been formed to produce and distribute films for television broadcasts and engage in other activities in the television field. The officers are George H. Cole, president of King Cole's Sound Service, Inc., president; Walter Lynch, Mecca Films Laboratories, vice-president in charge of operations; A. G. Berg, formerly with the RCA sales department, vice-president in charge of sales and Pauline Wolff, secretary. Wally Van, film producer and director, will be in charge of the company's talent department.

Classroom Television

Dr. Alexander J. Stoddard, superintendent of Philadelphia public school system, said that the Philadelphia schools will pioneer in the use of television as a part of standard classroom equipment.

Chicago Television Programs

W9XZV, Zenith's experimental television station in Chicago, is now sending programs on Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights. Studio and motion picture programs are being presented.

STUDIO WAGE FIGHT STILL IN AIR; EQUITY ASKS CHANGES IN "FOUR A'S"

Hollywood Awaits Resumptions of Conversations Over Abrogating Wage Raise; Casey Predicts Early Arbitration

Hollywood still was waiting this week for the resumption of conversations between producers and the leaders of the Conference of American Federaiton of Labor Studio Unions, on the producers' demands to abrogate the ten per cent wage increase they gained from the producers last fall for 13,000 studio craftsmen.

Meeting on February 15th with the producers, and led by William Bioff, West Coast leader of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and chairman of the Conference, the unions examined producers' contentions that they could not afford to maintain wage increases, and countered with their own contentions that salaries of top executives, stars, directors, writers, and the like, should be reduced, rather than those of the "average worker."

The next day the meeting was adjourned, each side to come again to the conference table with more detailed information.

Last week, in Chicago, to which he had gone by plane from Los Angeles to face a charge of not having completed a 1922 Chicago jail term, Mr. Bioff reiterated that the unions would not surrender the increase.

Promise Arbitration

In his absence, other spokesmen for the AFL Conference said the unions would certainly carry out their agreement to submit the matter to arbitration, should the next meeting result again in a deadlock; and submitting the matter to the American Arbitration Association would mean, according to observers' interpretation, abiding by the decision of that body, even if it called for relinquishment of the wage increases.

Pat Casey, producers' labor contact, in New York from the Coast, said that the MPPA's negotiating committee, headed by Y. Frank Freeman, of Paramount, expected the matter to be arbitrated, after a meeting early next week.

Lew Blix, Alliance international representative, this week warned 10,000 IATSE members of an "open shop" drive by "anti-labor elements of the industry."

Meanwhile, Hollywood producers were signing Screen Publicists Guild contracts with about 200 of their publicity men.

Fourteen studios are affected. The only large studios not parties to the agreement are the Sol Lesser and Selznick International. The contracts are effective upon signature, and are retroactive to Oct. 9, 1939.

The contracts provide a guild shop, virtually; a minimum weekly salary of $100 for seniors; $50 for juniors in the first year, $55 in the second, and $60 in the third; a minimum salary, for apprentices, of 70 to 80 cents an hour.

In Hollywood, the Radio Writers Guild won an agreement from the local manufacturers of recorded transcriptions, for a 100 per cent guild shop; and also won approval, by the companies, of its minimum basic agreement.

Philadelphia Strike

Joseph Weber, president of the American Federation of Musicians, was asked last Friday, in a resolution passed by Local 77 of Philadelphia, to take immediate action to support the local in its three-month-old strike against the Warner circuit in that city. Mr. Weber on Wednesday said he would give "whatever immediate assistance is possible."

BIOFF IS STILL OUT OF JAIL

"Willie" Bioff, West Coast studio union leader, will appear at a hearing next Wednesday in Chicago criminal court, on a writ of habeas corpus, which freed him last week, one hour after he had surrendered to the police, on a charge that he had not completed a 1922 Chicago jail term. Bioff, who represented studio unions in wage readjustment negotiations on February 15th and 16th in Hollywood, flew to Chicago last week.

Chief Justice John Prystalski, of the city's criminal courts, before whom appearances were made, asked for an inquiry into the delay (1922 to 1939).

Bioff's counsel next Wednesday are expected to argue that the state had allowed the case to lapse and so had surrendered its right to further action.

Warners dropped all musicians in its Philadelphia theatres December 1st, after failing to agree on a new contract. The possibility of Local 77 joining the musicians appeared remote unless the musicians instituted a national strike against Warners, it was said.

The local's strike against the independent Carman theatre there has been settled.

William Wilkins, superior court judge, in Seattle, last week ordered Local 154, projectionists, to stop picketing the Center theatre, in White Center, a suburb.

New NLRB Examiner

Alexander B. Hawes, assistant general counsel to the National Labor Relations Board, assumed the newly created post of chief administrative examiner of the board, on Friday.

Pittsburgh Officers

The Pittsburgh Theatre Employees' Union, Local B-12, has elected the following officers, for 1940: Charles E. Kennedy, president; Harry Hessinger, vice-president; Elaine Deschamps, financial secretary; Dorothy Glausser, recording secretary; David Hook, treasurer.

New officers of Exchange Employees' Union, B-11, are Ted Tolley, president; Sara Kells, vice-president; Mrs. Mary Carroll, recording secretary; John Navoney, treasurer.

Scranton Unions in Dispute

Violence flaring in the dispute between the Scranton projectionists' Local 329 of the AFL, and the Local 32 of the CIO, has caused comment by local newspapers, the Scranton Times noting that intervention by the National Labor Relations Board had been requested. Acid has been thrown into automobiles and homes, and stench bombs exploded in theatres.

Nick Loses Again

The St. Louis court of appeals has overruled, without comment, a motion by John P. "Big" Nick, deposed head of the city's projectionists' Local 143, and Clyde Weston, its former business agent, for a rehearing of their appeal from a circuit court order voiding their control of the union. They may apply to the state supreme court for a writ of error.

Council of Actors Equity Acts in Line with "One Big Union" Idea After Parent Group's Tilts

Actors Equity Council on Monday, in New York, drafted recommendations for specific changes in the setup of the parent actors' union, the Associated Actors and Artistes of America. The recommendations, not revealed, were made in connection with a "one big union" plan, upon which an accountant has been working for more than two months.

Sequel to Disagreements

The council's action is a sequel to numerous disagreements among members of the Four A's, on its operating expenses, upon the necessity of forming a "single big union," which would eliminate duplicate dues payments and unnecessary offices, and allocation of debts incurred by the organization in its fight last summer against the threatened invasion of its field by the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees.

The Screen Actors Guild, called the most powerful union in the Four A's, recently threatened to withdraw, unless the single union plan were adopted soon. Conferences on the Coast by guild officials with Equity and American Federation of Radio Artists officers were reported to have settled the dispute.

The Equity council, after the meeting in which the "recommendations" were adopted, said that the Guild and the Artists Federation would be given an opportunity to answer.

Variety Artists Win Round

Meanwhile, the newest member of the Four A's, the American Guild of Variety Artists, which two weeks ago took on a new executive secretary, Hoyt S. Haddock, labor consultant, scored a victory in its drive to organize New York houses with stage shows. Its members struck at the Apollo, Harlem, on Saturday night. On Sunday the management signed a 10-month contract, providing a closed shop, $30 weekly minimum for chorus girls, $40 weekly minimum for principles. Leo Brecher owns the theatre.

The union last Friday started negotiations with the Roxy, managed by Irving Lesser; and was to begin talks with other theatres this week.

Other members of the Four A's will support the AGVA against recalcitrant theatre, guild officials said this week. Thus, it was foreseen that a theatre refusing to sign a guild contract for its stage performers would face boycott by screen and radio personalities.

In Philadelphia, the local United Entertainers Association has become affiliated with the AGVA, as its local.

Extras' Autonomy

The Screen Actors Guild last week suspended all negotiations with producers in behalf of extra players and granted them complete self-government, under a local charter.

Suggests "Junior" Division

A New York radio station official last week suggested classification of those television performers engaged in experimental telecasts, as "juniors" by the Four A's unions concerned in the field. The suggestion is being mulled by the Four A's, whose board is jointly administering the television field, until a definite television scale has been set up.

EDUCATOR POINTS UP SELF-REGULATION VALUE

Dr. Frederic Thrasher Calls for Community Film Selection Rather Than Censorship

Educators and others studied several aspects of motion pictures in the January issue of the Journal of Education Sociology. Dr. Frederic M. Thrasher, professor of education at New York University, was editor for the issue and contributed the principal article, "Education Versus Censorship."

Attacks Federal Censorship

Other articles in the issue are: "The Motion Picture and Informal Education," G. L. Freeman, director of the Northwestern University Motion Picture Project; "The Documentary Film and Education," Donald Slesinger, executive director of the American Film Center; "A Study in Suitability of Motion-Picture Theatre Programs to the Needs of the Child," Claude A. Shull, San Francisco State College; "The Film Work of the American Museum of Natural History," Grace Fisher Ramsey, American Museum of Natural History, and "The Motion Picture Academy, A Cooperative in Hollywood," Donald Gledhill, executive secretary of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. Comments on motion picture research projects and methods and book reviews are also included.

Dr. Thrasher's article on "Education Versus Censorship" attacks government censorship of motion pictures and recognizes the great value of self-censorship within the industry. He appeals for "selection rather than censorship" and stresses the function of education in improving the quality of motion pictures. The opening sentence of the article is noteworthy because educators do not all agree on the worth of the motion picture: "The motion picture is distinguished as the only great art form to be born in modern times."

The technical value of a given motion picture can be easily determined, said Dr. Thrasher, but especially with regard to the entertainment film, it is difficult to get a general agreement on what is or is not a good picture. Educational, advertising, propaganda and such types of films, the writer points out, can be judged on the basis of their effects which can be measured. Dr. Thrasher writes, "In his book on 'Decency in Motion Pictures,' Martin Quigley, author of the Production Code, demonstrated conclusively that political censorship of the motion pictures is an 'unworkable scheme.'"

Urges Community Selection

As a positive substitute for censorship (Dr. Thrasher recognizes what he calls the 'negative' value of the Production Code) he advocates community selection, holding that each community has the power to forbid the showing of any picture it considers indecent. "Any community, furthermore may make its own laws governing the admittance of children to public motion picture showings.

"Yet it is unnecessary to invoke the police power against a motion picture, except in rare instances. The motion picture industry itself feels a responsibility for providing the public with wholesome entertainment and it has answered the question, 'If not censorship, what then?' for itself by adopting its well known Production Code as a form of self-regimentation," Dr. Thrasher wrote.

The article on the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences shows its many activities in addition to giving "Oscars" for outstanding achievements in the motion picture. Something of the history of the Academy and its place in the film world also is given.

Child Survey

The study in suitability of motion-picture theatre programs to the needs of the child was conducted in San Francisco and Oakland. Questionnaires were distributed to 28,123 children between the grades of four and eight or from about 9 to 14 years of age. Of this group 83% reported attendance once a week or oftener and 65% said they went alone or with other children. To determine what kind of pictures the children see over the week-ends a survey was made of the year's week-end programs offered by 47 neighborhood theatres in San Francisco. The following results are announced: both films of adult suitability, 5.11%; one film adult and one mature, 12.20%; one film adult and one family, 19.50%; both films mature, 11.92%; one film mature and one family, 30.00%; both films family, 21.27%.

G. L. Freeman in his article on "The Motion Picture and Informal Education" points out that often pictures presented for educational ends are neither "educational" nor "entertainment." The article on the documentary film by Donald Slesinger begins with a discussion of the difficulty in defining exactly what a documentary film is. Close association between film makers and educators is asked. Another article, on "The Film Work of the American Museum of Natural History" explains the importance of motion pictures in the museum's work.

The withdrawal of Amkino, distributors of Russian films, from the American market, has caused the Sonotone theatre in Chicago to change its policy to other foreign product.

Clubwomen Seek Children's Shows

The Schools Motion Picture Committee, comprised of clubwomen in New York from many groups affiliated with the Parent-Teachers Association, has written an "open letter" to the organized industry for industry support of a plan to designate three or four theatres of New York circuits for weekly showings of "recommended films" for the 1,278,164 children in New York between 5 and 14 who attend film houses at least once a week.

Because "in other fields, consumers' groups of anything like the same size (as those whose children attend films) command special attention," the Schools Motion Picture Committee, through its sponsoring of selected programs, "is encouraging parents to make their wants articulate," according to the Committee, headed by Mrs. Alonzo Klaw.

Philadelphia PTA Acts

Thirty Parent-Teachers organizations of Philadelphia have started a campaign to have theatres cut down the length of the present three and four-hour children's matinees on Saturdays to two hours or less, and, additionally, they also ask elimination of shooting and killing scenes, morbid and frightening sequences, war pictures and "pointless, noisy" shorts. They call the ideal program one that has "one good, wholesome family type feature, one good comedy, one animated cartoon and one educational short."

Expanding its radio program, the New York City Board of Education is conducting the record number of 178 classroom broadcasts this term. Miss Regina C. M. Burke, associate superintendent of schools in charge of radio, announces.

Started experimentally a year ago, the school broadcast is now an important part of the classroom work.

Virtually every subject in the curriculum is represented.

All broadcasts will originate in the Brooklyn Technical High School.

With the aid of agents of the United States Secret Service, the board has undertaken a campaign to teach the 400,000 junior and senior high school children of this city how to recognize counterfeit money. Each day 10,000 boys and girls witness a showing of a film, "Know Your Money."

BRITISH INDEPENDENTS QUESTION CIRCUIT VOICE

Fear Too Much Say in CEA; Requests for Sunday Shows Follow Army Order

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Independents began to bristle at the week's General Council meeting of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association on discussion of the vital matter of the executive committee, which has superseded the various committees since the war. Independent spokesmen criticized the current machinery and a report calling for continuation of the methods of functioning was referred back.

Question Circuits' Position

The report, a sober and detached effort to some members, nevertheless aroused independents by its virtual contention that even more important than systematized procedure was that the three large circuits should be represented on the executive committee as a matter of accepted policy. The fear that the circuits might become too powerful in the executive by obtaining additional further votes was not removed by suggestions of gentlemen's agreements and honored understandings.

Since the war the various CEA committees have been absorbed by the executive committee. It has been an accepted rule that the three circuits, only one of which was represented on the General Council, should have representatives thereon. With the election of the 1940 General Council all three circuits are represented. It is now possible to give the circuits representation on the Executive without irregularity. The report goes one step farther, however, in the expressed opinion that the three circuits should be represented on the Executive as a matter of course, with three circuit men added to the present Executive of 15 members.

The more determined independents interpret the move as a politic concession to the powerful circuits, and prefer that it be left to open voting.

Whatever motives might lie behind the new step, it is a fact that Government departments bargaining and conferring with exhibitor delegations have questioned the representative authority of parties not graced with full representation of the three large theatre-owning groups. Delegations representing A. B. C., Gaumont and Odeon, as well as the vast bulk of independent picture house operators, would be welcomed in the legislative circles of Whitehall. This the Panton Street headquarters of the CEA believe.

New Sunday Rules

British councils, rural districts and local municipal areas have lost little time in responding to the new Home Office ruling on the Sunday opening of picture houses, which supplants the older order of town meeting and poll with a direct application of an order for opening issued by the military authorities. In every county of Britain, excluding Scotland, first steps have been taken, and the odds are that by the spring hundreds of districts will have availed themselves of the new machinery.

Only nine orders have been placed before the House of Commons to date, as legislative adaptation to the new situation requires time.

As with most film trade matters, there have been anomalies. In one or two exceptional areas the military authorities have shown no inclination to make a move towards demanding Sunday cinemas. In several sections, not least notably in Sheffield, Yorkshire, exhibitor disinterest has resulted in a decision to take no action. Experience has justified the official CEA policy that Sunday cinemas are a matter for local decision.

In general any opposition has been forthcoming from the independents, while the more earnest campaigning in favor of Sunday opening has been done by the circuits.

In some areas, of course, the enmity of the local authorities to any form of Sunday entertainment, even in favor of the Forces, has been ferocious. In Wales the Sabbatarian element is fighting tenaciously, and on the wider field the Lord's Day Observance Society is presenting a solid phalanx of opposition.

Most exhibitors probably favor Sunday cinemas. Some, as witness Denis Walls of the North England Emery circuit, contend that Sunday cinemas will meet the recreational needs of national service workers as well as of the uniformed forces.

In 1939 only nine districts took action in favor of Sunday shows. This year it may well be nearer ninety because of the new order. Finally, apparently a wider school of thought believes the new machinery will operate in favor of better box office returns all round.

Fear Government Flood

Fears that the British quota market on short subjects will be flooded with Government-sponsored subjects have been expressed in several quarters.

The Films Council has appointed a new committee to study the short subject situation.

Irish audiences are seeing fewer films. The Irish censor reviewed 1,915 films last year, as compared to 2,214 in 1938. Of the 1939 total, 1,106 were American pictures. England supplied only 209 films.

FILMS TO TEACH HOW TO CEASE GOSSIPING

Britons are to be taught by films to keep their own counsel and not divulge news that might be of value to the enemy. The idea comes from Sir Kenenth Clark, recently appointed director of the Film Division of the Ministry of Information. The producer is Michael Balcon of Ealing Studios.

Sir Kenneth has commissioned a series of short subjects which will underline the anti-gossip poster campaign. By arrangement between members of the Kinematograph Renters Society the films will be distributed in England by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and British exhibitors have agreed to show them. No rentals will be charged.

Three films are already underway: "All Hands", "Dangerous Comment" and "Prattle". Two are being directed by John Paddy Carstairs and the third by Dallas Bower. Carstairs and Bower wrote the original stories. Treatments have been devised by Roland Pertwee, Angus McPhail, Jeffrey Dell, Basil Dearden and Roger McDougall.

The company already has purchased 16 mm. rights to 30 Hollywood features and is negotiating for 20 more. Mr. Edwards declared there will be no competition with regular theatrical bookings.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN

Nonstop Production

Claiming to be the only British studio which has a nonstop production record over the last eighteen months, Ealing Studios, under the tutelage of Michael Balcon, declares their intention of going ahead with its 1940 plans, without consideration of War or Quota. A production break did threaten, however, until the script of "Let George Do It" was revised, because it had pulled the leg of the military authorities.

The seven films already planned by Balcon for 1940 are:

Two George Formby comedies, the first of which probably will be titled "It's Turned Out Nice Again," with the Lancashire comedian seen as a policeman against his native background of Blackpool.

Version of Stage Play

The next film to go in production will be "Saloon Bar," a screen version of the stage success still running in the West End, with Gordon Harker playing the role he created on the stage. Walter Forde, who this year celebrates his coming-of-age as a film director, will direct this and two other Balcon productions in 1940.

These will be: A screen version of Edgar Wallace's "The Calendar," in which Balcon hopes to unite Clive Brook and Gordon Harker in one film, and "Sailors Three," a comedy with a naval training depot as a background, written by Austin Melford and as yet uncast.

Work already has started on exterior shots for "Convoy," which Pen Tennyson will direct. The film was inspired by a recent BBC account of an aerial attack on a convoy, and is being made with the official cooperation of the Ministry of Information and the Admiralty.

Musical Planned

Plans are being completed for a musical film telling the story of entertainment behind the lines in wartime. For this the cooperation of the ENSA and NAAFI will be sought.

Probably five more will be added to this list when negotiations are finished for the purchase of new properties, or when those subjects already owned by Ealing will be modified or altered to meet new conditions. In that category may be included "Bullet in the Ballet," thriller with a Ballet background, and "Epitaph for a Spy," from the best selling novel by Eric Ambler.

Other properties owned by the company include "Wings of the World," a story of the development of civil aviation in this country; "The Pipe Major of Little Sorrowful," a Saturday Evening Post story, and "His Worship the Mayor," by Walter Greenwood, author of "Love on the Dole."

FILM SHOT IN BRITISH LINES FOR FEATURE

Twelve hundred feet of film taken in the British lines in France is the prize brought back to Britain by the Legeran unit working on location for "Old Bill and Son", which is due to arrive on the floor at Denham immediately.

All in the unit are enthusiastic about the cooperation afforded them in France. Accompanied by conducting officers, they were allowed to go right up to the front line. Practically every type of British Unit in France was filmed, at work and at play, and over Christmas cameraman Jack Whitehead took footage of two concert parties, at one of which Gracie Fields was the star turn.

Mary Clare has been signed to play Maggie, the wife of Old Bill, and for the part of Young Bill, who represents the modern mechanized army, the War Office has agreed to release John Mills from the R.E.'s.

Hitler Double

Ambitious is 20th Century Productions' "Gestapo" nearing close of production at the Gaumont British Studios at Shepherds Bush. An adventurous story of espionage and persecution in Europe, it takes in its stride spectacle and history, romance, drama and comedy. It has been produced with a strict attention to accuracy.

Carol Reed, director of the highly successful "Stars Look Down," is in charge. Maurice Ostrer and Edward Black are responsible for production. Considerations of physical resemblance rather than of comedy have inspired the choice of Cockney comedian Billy Russell to play the part of Adolf Hitler. Russell is removing his mustache as soon as the last shot is in the can!

The Shepherds Bush Studios have been transformed into a replica of a German railroad station, bespattered with swastikas and Nazi flags, decorated with goose stepping troopers and misty with steam.

Margaret Lockwood and Michael Redgrave are the stars.

Seeks Studio

Losing no time in getting to work, Bill Sistrom, RKO Radio's American producer, already has opened negotiations for studio space and launched preliminary plans for a production program designed to meet the company's British Quota commitments.

Mr. Sistrom is quartered at the RKO Radio offices in London's West End.

In the News

The Women's Auxiliary Territorial Service section of Britain's wartime feminine army will be featured in a new Butchers production which is now on the floor at the Nettlefold Studios, Walton on Thames, "Pack Up Your Troubles." This is a comedy aiming to epitomize in screen form the good humor and high spirits of the English Tommy Atkins. Oswald Mitchell directs.

The changing scene includes barrack squares, a German prison camp, and the foreign and home battle fronts. One motive of the yarn is the readiness of the modern Tommy to learn the tricks of the trade from the boys of the old brigade, yclept, in army parlance, "old sweats." The ATS supplies both ornamental and romantic relief.

Reg Purdell, Wally Patch, Wylie Watson, Muriel George, Ernest Butcher, Meinhart Maur, and Manning Whiley are in the cast. Geoffrey Faithful has charge of the cameras. Percival Mackey, noted English dance band impresario, is looking after the music.

Neville E. Neville, producer of "An Englishman's Home," has launched a new production company, Aurora Films, Limited. Private finance backs it.

Three films already are scheduled. "Peace in Our Time," an original by Alec Coppel, author of "I Killed the Count," is the first of three. Budgeted at £75,000 ($300,000) and due for production at Denham and release by United Artists, it is said to be "a dramatization of Britain's war aims."

Monty Banks has joined the board of Dufay Chromex, British colour company. He says a forthcoming Gracie Fields film may be made in that process.

Using Two Studios

With two studios in use, and 1,000 artistes and technicians employed, Charter Films, independent British unit, has launched yet another War subject. "Pastor Hall" is a screen treatment of the life and career of Pastor Niemoeller. Over a four-week schedule the Twickenham and Highbury Studios, subsidiaries of Grand National for whom the film is being made, will be scenes of the company's most ambitious effort.

Featured in scenes already shot were Wilfed Lawson, as the Pastor, Sir Seymour Hicks, as General von Grotjahn, Nova Pilbeam as Christine Hall and Marius Goring, as stormtroop leader Gerte. Others signed to prominent roles include Brian Worth, George Carney, Peter Coates, J. Fisher White, Barbara Gott, Manning Whiley and Bernard Miles.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

AMAZING MR. WILLIAMS: Melvyn Douglas, Joan Blondell—Good comedy that will get the laughs. Better than its predecessor and more laughs than "Housekeeper's Daughter" but won't gross like that one due to the fact that the "Thin Man stories" are wearing through.—H. H. Silver, Overlea Theatre, Overlea, Md. General patronage.

AMAZING MR. WILLIAMS, THE: Melvyn Douglas, Joan Blondell—This was a "honey" of a picture. I think it a lot better than their previous pictures. Lots of laughs, good business. What more do we want? Running time, 86 minutes. Played February 7-8.—E. J. Pennell, Coliseum Theatre, Bronson, Mich. General patronage.

BEWARE SPOOKS: Joe E. Brown, Mary Carlisle —A fair Brown entree. Good for weekends. The kids will eat it up. Nothing much for other than Joe E. fans. Photography and sound Ok. Joe still needs a good story to bring him back. Running time, 67 minutes.—H. H. Silver, Overlea Theatre, Overlea, Md. General patronage.

BLACK ROOM, THE, (reissue): Boris Karloff, Marian Marsh—Played with Paramount's "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." See report on "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." Running time, 70 minutes. Played January 30-31.—Stanley Lamhert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

BLONDIE BRINGS UP BABY: Arthur Lake, Penny Singleton, Larry Simms—The Blondie series are getting better each time you play one. This one surprised me. It was 20 below zero both nights, the coldest it has been in years, and my house was filled to capacity both nights. If you are not playing the Blondie series, get started, as they have as much draw as the "Hardys" here. Running time, 69 minutes. Played January 17-18.—E. J. Pennell, Coliseum Theatre, Bronson, Mich. General patronage.

BLONDIE MEETS THE BOSS: Arthur Lake, Penny Singleton, Larry Simms—Good first week program. Running time, 74 minutes. Played Decemher 14-16.—Coombes and Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town patronage.

HIS GIRL FRIDAY: Cary Grant, Rosalind Russell, Ralph Bellamy—Paced fast, this picture hits the stretch like Challedon on a muddy strip! Cary Grant should stick to roles such as this. Audience was gay and relaxed throughout and left the theatre witb that self satisfied smirk that stamps approval. Business was above average despite hot competition (and I don't mean the weather). Running time, 90 minutes. Played January 19-25.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

MIRACLE ON MAIN STREET: Lyle Talhot, Margo, Walter Abel—This is the poorest excuse of a picture I have ever played. Poor direction, poor acting all the way tbrough. Played it on a double bill and had plenty of walkouts of which I did not blame them. Pass this one up hy all means. Running time, 78 minutes. Played February 2-3.—E. J. Pennell, Coliseum Theatre, Bronson, Mich. General patronage.

First National

DUST BE MY DESTINY: John Garfield, Priscilla Lane—Very good draw. Good show. Garfield will have to change to another role. Too many of this kind will ruin him. Running time, 88 minutes.—E. E. Brungardt, Comet Theatre, Lewiston, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

FOUR WIVES: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, Eddie Albert, Jeffrey Lynn, Claude Rains, Dick Foran, Frank McHugh, May Robson—Here is as good a picture as you would want to play that is not drawing peanuts. Cannot figure the reason. It is a wonderful show, full of good entertainment but to us a terrible disappointment at the hox office. Use your own judgment in booking, as perhaps we did not exploit properly. Running time, 98 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

OLD MAID, THE: Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, George Brent, Jane Bryan—My crowd and I thought this was excellent. You can't beat Bette Davis for excellent acting. The plot is very fast moving and different and kept everyone in my audience enthralled. Some of you are always asking why they make pictures like this because you can't use them. Well, believe me, I wouldn't live without them. Maybe, you will die with it but I don't gripe about it. I die with those you may think are just right. It all evens up in the end. I douhled this with "Intermezzo, a Love Story," with good results. Running time, 95 minutes. Played February 16-17.—W. Varick Nevins, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

ON YOUR TOES: Zorina, Eddie Albert, Alan Hale, James Gleason, Gloria Dickson—With the proper ads and hallyhoo you should go to town on this one. A truly fine dance and comedy picture with Zorina carrying out the first mentioned and Albert the comedy end. Both fine and hope to see more of them. Running time, 94 minutes. Played February 2-3.—C. W. Hawk, Ada Theatre, Ada, Ohio. Small college town patronage.

PRIVATE DETECTIVE: Jane Wyman, Dick Foran —Satisfactory on Saturday. Average gross. Running time, 55 minutes. Played Janauary 27.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, Deo Leon, Texas. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BABES IN ARMS: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Charles Winninger, Guy Kihbee—Exceptionally good picture but weather was against a hig draw.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

BALALAIKA: Nelson Eddy, Ilona Massey, Charles Ruggles, Frank Morgan—Saw this screened. Too operatic for small towns.—E. M. Freihurger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

BALALAIKA: Nelson Eddy, Ilona Massey, Charles Ruggles, Frank Morgan—This is a special musical production with Nelson Eddy more gay and convincing than we have ever seen him. Ilona Massey makes a grand debut in her first picture and she can not only sing in her beautiful voice hut she can act as well. There is even a plot to the story, and it does not depend on music and song to hold it up. Our customers' reaction was excellent, and the hox office was above average. Running time, 102 minutes. Played January 28-29.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

BALALAIKA: Nelson Eddy, Ilona Massey, Charles Ruggles, Frank Morgan—Good musical which entertains regardless of Russian atmosphere. Eddy gives spirited performance with Ilona Massey a standout. Where musicals are liked, this can't miss. Excellent direction and Frank Morgan getting the laughs, and so this is good entertainment for tbe whole family. Running time, 102 minutes.—H. H. Silver, Overlea Theatre, Overlea, Md. General patronage.

BALALAIKA: Nelson Eddy, Ilona Massey, Frank Morgan, Charles Ruggles—Played this against the last three days of "Gone With the Wind" and cleaned up. Audience liked it but frankly many told me they were afraid of it on account of the title. Somebody has to convince these producers that 95 per cent of audience is not cosmopolitan minded. "Tovarich," in spite of a great cast, was anotber example. It would pay some of those studios to hire a theatre manager in the field (or a group of them) to pass judgment on titles of pictures if they want them to appeal to the masses. Are there any offers? So. I'll still go out and sell them! Running time, 103 minutes. Played February 9-14.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

BALALAIKA: Nelson Eddy, Ilona Massey, Frank Morgan, Charles Ruggles—Lost money on this hut the ones who came to see it were loud in tbeir praise of it. Too bigh class for country towns. Played February 4-6.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

BALALAIKA: Nelson Eddy, Ilona Massey, Frank Morgan, Charles Ruggles—Unless you are in a city of twenty thousand or more, do not play this one on your Sunday dates or you will die witb it. Personally, I thought it a grand picture and what few came to see it were well pleased. Ilona Massey was very good but I think it would have been a lot better if she would have sung with Nelson Eddy more than the one time. Running time, 102 minutes. Played February 11-12.—E. J. Pennell, Coliseum Theatre, Bronson, Mich. General patronage.

BLACKMAIL: Edward G. Robinson, Rutb Hussey, Gene Lockhart, Bobs Watson—Very good. They like Robinson here. If had had good weather, could have paid expense. Running time, 81 minutes. Played February 7-8.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. Rural patronage.

CONGO MAISIE: Ann Sotbern, John Carroll, Rita Johnson—Good picture. Good business Sunday and Monday. Running time, 73 minutes. Played February 4-5.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. Small town patronage.

EARL OF CHICAGO: Robert Montgomery, Edward Arnold, Reginald Owen—Most of the reviews I have read on this feature bave nothing but praise for Rohert Montgomery's performance as the gangster who inherits a castle and all the intangible millions tbat go with it. Our reaetion to the picture and the many dissatisfied remarks from the customers would indicate that this picture is not for small towns. And I have a sneaking feeling that many of the larger towns will find this feature a bit tiresome and over-acted. It is bard to imagine Rohert Montgomery as the tough mug he pretends to be, and his voice and manner are to obviously affected to be convincing. His laugh, wbich amounts to nothing more than a "cackle," is unconvincing, terribly annoying and ridiculously funny. The whole picture jumps from scene to scene, witb nothing but conversation and not one ounce of action. I could not begin to list the unfavorable remarks heard after each showing, nor can I find one person who found Robert Montgomery pleasing in his role. The picture is slow and drags to a noticeable degree, and it is our opinion that one more such opus will do him more barm than good. There is no doubt that the book made interesting and convincing reading, but its adoption to the screen leaves much to be desired. Our audience reaction was "null" and the box office was "void," so draw your own conclusions. Running time, 87 minutes. Played January 21-22.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

I TAKE THIS WOMAN: Spencer Tracy, Hedy Lamarr—Interesting picture of the "Citadel" type. Tracy good and Lamarr hetter than in "Lady of the Tropics." Good for midweek hut had rather see Tracy in adventure pictures for our week-end business. Average midweek attendance. Running time, 98 minutes. Played February 7-8.—J. F. Bohbitt, Stearns Theatre, Stearns, Ky. Mining and general patronage.

MUTINY ON THE BOUNTY (reissue): Clark Gable, Francbot Tone, Charles Laughton—Exceptional entertainment and well worth a reissue. Good print and good sound. Was afraid it would be too old, hut turned out very good. Running time, 10 reels. Played February 15.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

NICK CARTER, MASTER DETECTIVE: Walter Pidgeon, Rita Johnson—Good for action fans and the beginning of a promising series. Rnnning time, 58 minutes. Played Februarv 17.—H. H. Silver, Overlea Theatre, Overlea, Md. General patronage.

NICK CARTER, MASTER DETECTIVE: Walter Pidgeon, Rita Johnson, Henry Hull—This is a short feature but certainly a good start for the Nick Carter series. There is a lot of action and thrilling scenes that hold interest, and Walter Pidgeon is convincing as Nick Carter and no doubt will build up a following as tbe Master Detective. We did above average business with everyone pleased, but I suggest, if Metro keep up this series, they run a little longer, say 75 minutes. If the subsequent ones are as thrilling as the first, sixty minutes is much too short. Running time, 60 minutes. Played February 6-7.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

NINOTCHKA: Greta Garbo, Melvyn Douglas, Ina

Claire—Nothing wrong with this picture except the title. Garbo gives her usual fine performance and Douglas does his share to turn out a very enjoyable piece of entertainment. I think the title of the picture and the type of publicity used prior to the release of the picture are both unfavorable from the standpoint of the small town exhibitor, and the box office suffered accordingly. Running time, 110 minutes. Played February 11-13.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

REMEMBER? Robert Taylor, Greer Garson, Lew Ayres—Taylor should play more comedy roles. He might regain his one popular approval. Garson and Ayres also did a fine job of acting in this one. Just average attendance. Running time, 83 minutes. Played January 7-8.—C. W. Hawk, Ada Theatre, Ada, Ohio. Small college town patronage.

SECRET OF DR. KILDARE: Lionel Barrymore, Lew Ayres, Laraine Day, Helen Gilbert—Real entertainment. Patrons well pleased. Good for any date. I hope Lionel Barrymore can stay with these series for some time to come, as he is the backbone of the picture. If we only had a dozen Lionel Barrymores, we would not have to worry about theatre business. Running time, 85 minutes. Played January 31-February 1.—E. J. Pennell, Coliseum Theatre, Bronson, Mich. General patronage.

SHOP AROUND THE CORNER, THE: Margaret Sullavan, James Stewart, Frank Morgan—This one will really take them if you don't mislead them about its supposed location, Budapest. Get across to your patrons it is all American and a honey. Not just the three mentioned stars but all in the cast are excellent. You can't go wrong; book it now. Running time, 100 minutes. Played February 4-6.—C. W. Hawk, Ada Theatre, Ada, Ohio. Small college town patronage.

SHOP AROUND THE CORNER, THE: James Stewart, Margaret Sullavan, Frank Morgan—Very good. The stars drew and the picture pleased. (Such grammar!) Stewart is real box office and the veteran Frank Morgan is always good for a laugh. The minute his image appeared in the trailer the audiences began laughing, expecting the inevitable from Frank, a laugh line. Some day due homage will be paid these veteran artists who in supporting roles are the life blood of a picture. Running time, 100 minutes. Played February 17-20.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

SHOP AROUND THE CORNER: James Stewart, Margaret Sullavan, Frank Morgan—Good fairy tale for grownups. Lubitsch touches add to the enjoyment of picture. Reaction was mixed. The ladies for and most men against it. No good for action fans. For better class houses it will hold up for extended playing time. Running time, 100 minutes.—H. H. Silver, Overlea Theatre, Overlea, Md. General patronage.

SHOP AROUND THE CORNER, THE: James Stewart, Margaret Sullavan, Frank Morgan, Felix Bressart—This is a quaint story that will please any audience. The locale of the picture is Budapest, Hungary, and the whole story centers around the "Shop," but there is nothing particularly to indicate the story could not have been laid in New York or elsewhere. James Stewart does a fine job as the head clerk. Margaret Sullavan is fine as the newly hired employee. Felix Bressart is excellent as the nervous and worried employee, but honors go to Frank Morgan, as the owner, who practically steals the show. The plot is good and there are many amusing scenes. We did above average business on this picture and it should please small town audiences. Ernst Lubitsch has given it fine direction and a warm and human quality. This is an outstanding production that deserves your best playing time. Running time, 100 minutes. Played February 11-12.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

WHAT A LIFE: Jackie Cooper, Betty Field, John Howard, Lionel Stander—Good title, good picture. Everyone satisfied. What more could we expect. Running time, 79 minutes. Played February 14.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. Rural patronage.

WOMEN, THE: Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Rosalind Russell, Paulette Goddard, Mary Boland, Joan Fontaine, Virginia Weidler—Not so good for rural patronage. Had more walkout than any picture in long time. Yet had some good comments on it. Running time, 134 minutes. Played February 11.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. Rural patronage.

Paramount

BEAU GESTE: Gary Cooper, Ray Milland, Robert Preston, Brian Donlevy—Pretty much of a flop for us.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

DR. JEKYLL AND MR. HYDE (reissue): Fredric March, Miriam Hopkins—Played with "The Black Room." My fifth Horror Show and it went great guns. Would have played it longer but had to set in "The Fighting 69th." The boys now want to present me with a "Horrible Oscar." It will have five heads of the various Bogey Men! Running time, 76 minutes. Played January 30-31.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

REPORTS FROM THE NORTH AND SOUTH

New reporters this week to "What the Picture Did for Me" are the following:

E. B. Bowman, Maxton Theatre, Maxton, N. C.

E. E. Brungart, Comet Theatre, Lewiston, Minn.

Coombes and Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Saskatchewan, Canada.

H. H. Silver, Overlea Theatre, Overlea, Md.

M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas.

E. J. Pennell, Coliseum Theatre, Bronson, Mich.

Five years ago Mr. Pennell reported to the department but from the Berrien theatre, at Berrien Springs, Michigan.

GERONIMO: Preston Foster, Ellen Drew, Andy Devine, Ralph Morgan—We gave this picture big publicity and it brought results on Saturday beyond our expectations. It has many exploitation possibilities, and the fact that Geronimo was a real flesh-and-blood person, his life so full of malice and adventure, is a natural for dividends. The motion picture is intensely interesting, fast moving, well acted, exciting and thrilling, which pleased our patrons, no end. Paramount have added color and realism to an already colorful character, and they have given the small towns a real "break" in this fine production. If you give this picture to your Friday and Saturday patrons and give it the publicity it deserves, you will get the business. Many of the old-timers, especially through the middle west, can recall Geronimo and the lurid tales of his escapades in adventure and butchery. Use your press sheet on this one. The possibilities are unlimited. Aside from our regular ad in the newspaper, we ran a brief biography of the life of Geronimo, who died at Ft. Still, Oklahoma, in December, 1909. We also made up a board with many items of interest from the press sheet, about his life, news items about the picture, and used stills to illustrate, which was read by many in front of the theatre, and caused much comment. Then a spotted pony with an Indian astride with a banner advertising Geronimo, walking up and down the streets, and standing in front of the show, caused much curiosity and added patronage. Paramount certainly have been contributing their quota of good pictures this year. Thanks to them for "Geronimo" and a good business. That means a lot to us, in this neck of the woods. Take our word for it. Running time, 90 minutes. Played February 3.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

GREAT VICTOR HERBERT, THE: Allan Jones, Mary Martin, Walter Connolly—The beautiful music of the great Victor Herbert beautifully recorded. Slightly above average business. Running time, 84 minutes. Played February 8-9.—E. B. Bowman, Maxton Theatre, Maxton, N. C. Small town patronage.

GULLIVER'S TRAVELS: Color Cartoon Feature—Will attract children only. Don't compare with any Disney. It's just a long cartoon. Play on weekends only. Running time, 77 minutes.—H. H. Silver, Overlea Theatre, Overlea, Md. General patronage.

REMEMBER THE NIGHT: Barbara Stanwyck, Fred MacMurray, Beulah Bondi, Elizabeth Patterson—This picture is a little better than the average Paramount, but would suggest if you have plenty of product, to play it in the mid-week, as it did not draw here. Running time, 90 minutes. Played February 18-19.—E. J. Pennell, Coliseum Theatre, Bronson, Mich. General patronage.

RULERS OF THE SEA: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Will Fyffe, Margaret Lockwood—A very good feature that did not break any box office records. The last half of picture very exciting. Played February 19-21.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

RULERS OF THE SEA: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Margaret Lockwood, Will Fyffe—Good picture; fair business. Running time, 95 minutes. Played February 11-12.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Republic

JEEPERS CREEPERS: Weaver Brothers and Elviry, Roy Rogers—Played this on a double feature with "Too Busy to Work." It made the best double bill I have played in a long time. Played February 16-17.—E. J. Pennell, Coliseum Theatre, Bronson, Mich. General patronage.

JEEPERS CREEPERS: Weaver Brothers and Elviry, Roy Rogers—Great. Drew well and pleased. Republic is to be congratulated. Running time, 69 minutes. Played February 9-10.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

JEEPERS CREEPERS: Weaver Brothers and Elviry, Roy Rogers—Played this with "Stop, Look and Love" to the best business this winter and everybody satisfied. Running time, 69 minutes. Played February 9-10.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. Rural patronage.

MAN OF CONQUEST: Richard Dix, Gail Patrick, Edward Ellis, Joan Fontaine—This proved a good business getter for us on Friday and Saturday.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

NIGHT RIDERS, THE: Three Mesquiteers (John Wayne, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune), Doreen McKay, Ruth Rogers—Double with "The Zero Hour" and made a fair Friday-Saturday show. Played February 16.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. Rural patronage.

PRIDE OF THE NAVY: James Dunn, Rochelle Hudson—An average program feature. Double billed with "Pack Up Your Troubles." Running time, 64 minutes. Played February 8-10.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

ROVIN' TUMBLEWEEDS: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Mary Carlisle—Personally I didn't think this was up to Gene's standard. Mary Carlisle is liked for his leading lady, but even "Frog" wasn't quite as good as usual. And where was the hymn in this one, Gene? Our folks are looking for you to get a hymn in your pictures now ever since you sang "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," which made such a big bit that people are still talking about it. Played February 2-3.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

SOUTH OF THE BORDER: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Best of the Autrys and good enough for anybody's best time. They liked it, and excellent business.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SOUTH OF THE BORDER: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Doubled with Fox's "Man Who Wouldn't Talk." Best business since July 7-8, 1939. Believe the title of the western drew the crowd. Turned them away both Friday and Saturday night with pouring rain Saturday. Don't know what would have happened with good weather. Autry had slipped, but believe this will help him back up again. Both pictures satisfactory. Running time, 71 minutes. Played February 16-17.—J. F. Bobbitt, Stearns Theatre, Stearns, Ky. Mining and small town patronage.

SOUTHWARD HO! Roy Rogers, George Hayes—An average western feature. George "Gabby" Hayes very good in this picture. Played on the same program with "Here I Am a Stranger," a Fox picture. Running time, 57 minutes. Played February 15-17.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

VILLAGE BARN DANCE: Richard Cromwell, Doris Day, Lulu Belle and Scotty—Mighty fine show. Good draw. Lulu Belle and Scotty are okay and get the business for us. Running time, 74 minutes. Played February 18-19.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. Rural patronage.

ZERO HOUR, THE: Frieda Inescort, Otto Kruger.—Double with "Night Riders" and made a fair Friday-Saturday show. Nothing to brag about, but got by. Running time, 65 minutes. Played February 16.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. Rural patronage.

RKO Radio

ALLEGHENY UPRISING: John Wayne, Claire Trevor, George Sanders, Brian Donlevy—Story not too good. These characters cast into the proper story should go good. Running time, 81 minutes.—E. E. Brungardt, Comet Theatre, Lewiston, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

BACHELOR MOTHER: Ginger Rogers, David Niven, Charles Coburn—Ginger Rogers is always good here. Box office results good. Running time, 82 minutes.—E. E. Brungardt, Comet Theatre, Lewiston, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME, THE: Charles Laughton, Maureen O'Hara, Sir Nedric Hardwicke, Thomas Mitchell, Basil Rathbone, Walter Hampden—Picture will draw to divided opinions. Photography dark and mob scenes handled crudely. Laughton does the difficult job satisfactory. Cast and sound okay. Will do business when sold. Running time, 116 minutes.—H. H. Silver, Overlea Theatre, Overlea, Md. General patronage.

MEET DR. CHRISTIAN: Jean Hersholt, Dorothy Lovett—RKO so far has the best lineup of pictures of any company of this year. This type of picture is a natural for small towns. Running time, 72 minutes. Played January 8-10.—Coombes and Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town patronage.

NURSE EDITH CAVELL: Anna Neagle, Edna May Oliver, May Robson, Zasu Pitts, George Sanders—Cast did a marvelous job. Too many war pictures. Box office not so good. Running time, 97 minutes.—E. E. Brungardt, Comet Theatre, Lewiston, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

PACIFIC LINER: Victor McLaglen, Chester Morris, Wendy Barrie—Fair program. First of the week show. Running time, 75 minutes. Played February 5-7.—Coombes and Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Saskatchewan, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town patronage.

RACKETEERS OF THE RANGE: George O'Brien, Marjorie Reynolds—These O'Brien westerns are as good as any on the market.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RENO: Richard Dix, Anita Louise, Gail Patrick—Too bad the producers can't give us more dope on a picture like this. Played on a double bill Friday and Saturday. Good enough alone any time in the week. Box office results good. Running time, 60 minutes.—E. E. Brungardt, Comet Theatre, Lewiston, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

THAT'S RIGHT, YOU'RE WRONG: Kay Kyser and His Orchestra, Adolphe Menjou, May Robson, Edward Everett Horton, Lucille Ball—This picture played all around me last November and December and I thought I was too late to get any business on it. However, it went over big, doing about 50 per cent better than average. Running time, 88 minutes. Played February 15-16.—E. B. Bowman, Maxton Theatre, Maxton, N. C. Small town patronage.

THAT'S RIGHT, YOUR'E WRONG: Kay Kyser and His Orchestra, Adolphe Menjou, May Robson, Edward Everett Horton, Lucille Ball—One of the best drawing pictures during this slack season. We should have more pictures like this. Any radio artist good here. Box office good. Running time, 94 minutes.—E. E. Brungardt, Comet Tbeatre, Lewiston, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

THAT'S RIGHT, YOUR'E WRONG: Kay Kyser and His Orchestra, Adolphe Menjou, May Robson, Lucille Ball, Edward Everett Horton—All who came to see it liked it, but complained too much Kyser and not enough band music. Our student patronage ate it up, also the younger set, but it didn't appeal to most of our adults. Running time, 91 minutes. Played January 28-30.—C. W. Hawk, Ada Theatre, Ada, Ohio. Small college town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BANJO ON MY KNEE: Joel McCrea, Barbara Stanwyck, Walter Brennan—This lusty entertainment registered big at my box office. Did top gross of week. Running time, 85 minutes. Played February 7.—E. B. Bowman, Maxton Theatre, Maxton, N. C. Small town patronage.

CITY OF CHANCE: Lynn Bari, C. Aubrey Smith, Donald Woods—We gave this to our bargain day patrons, but business was below average and the picture is none too well done. Rather mediocre entertainment, in which the audience reaction was neither good nor too bad. There is a great deal of conversation, too little action and a climax that is none too exciting. Just an "Oh-hum" picture, good for a double program. Running time, 60 minutes. Played February 13-14.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

DAY-TIME WIFE: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Warren William, Binnie Barnes—Fox "A" pictures good this year, but tbey have whiskers on them when I get them. Running time, 72 minutes. Played February 8-9.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. Small town patronage.

DAY-TIME WIFE: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Warren Williams, Binnie Barnes—Very delightful entertainment that drew good Sunday business. Nothing big about it, but just good entertainment. Running time, 78 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK: Claudette Colbert, Henry Fonda, Edna May Oliver—A grand show. Well received. Good business. Running time, 103 minutes. Played January 14-15.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. Small town patronage.

DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK: Henry Fonda, Claudette Colbert, Edna May Oliver—It is hard to know what a picture will do when the weather is below zero and roads are a cake of ice. But this did very well considering weather. Running time, 105 minutes.—A. N. Miles, Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky. Small town patronage.

ELSA MAXWELL'S HOTEL FOR WOMEN: Linda Darnell, James Ellison, Ann Sothern, Elsa Maxwell, Lynn Bari—Good show for weekend playing. Good story and nice cast. Running time, 83 minutes. Played December 4-6.—Coombes and Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town patronage.

HE MARRIED HIS WIFE: Joel McCrea, Nancy Kelly, Mary Boland—Good picture; fair business. Allocated too high. Running time, 83 minutes. Played February 14-15.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HE MARRIED HIS WIFE: Joel McCrea, Nancy Kelly, Roland Young, Mary Boland—Confucius say: "He who pay alimony is like a man buying feed for a dead horse!" That is the theme of this comedy of a horse loving sportsman too busy to pay attention to his wife. Used the popular "Confucius say" heading in my newspaper ads and it attracted citywide attention. Noticed the Palace in Chicago used a "Confucius" heading a week later, so it seems that we both hit on the idea about the same time. "Great minds...," etc. Running time, 83 minutes. Played February 3-8.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

HERE I AM A STRANGER: Richard Greene, Brenda Joyce, Richard Dix, Roland Young, Gladys George—A slow-moving drama which just got by on a double bill. A program picture sold here as a special production. Played with Republic's "Southward Ho!" Running time, 83 minutes. Played February 15-17.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

HIGH SCHOOL: Jane Withers, Joe Brown, Jr.—Good picture; good business. If Fox would only give Jane some support, she would go places. Running time, 75 minutes. Played February 16-17.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HIGH SCHOOL: Jane Withers, Joe Brown, Jr.—Fairly good little picture which pleased the high students and the loyal Withers fans. Business was not satisfactory, however, If Fox would give Jane just half the break they gave Shirley Temple these pictures would do some business. Running time, 74 minutes. Played February 9-10.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

HIGH SCHOOL: Jane Withers, Joe Brown, Jr.—Will please the Jane Withers fans. It's about time for Fox to make up their mind what to do with this clever kid. Running time, 74 minutes.—H. H. Silver, Overlea Theatre, Overlea, Md. General patronage.

HIGH SCHOOL: Jane Withers, Joe Brown, Jr.—Played high school band benefit. Swell picture. Good business. Running time, 72 minutes. Played February 6-7.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. Small town patronage.

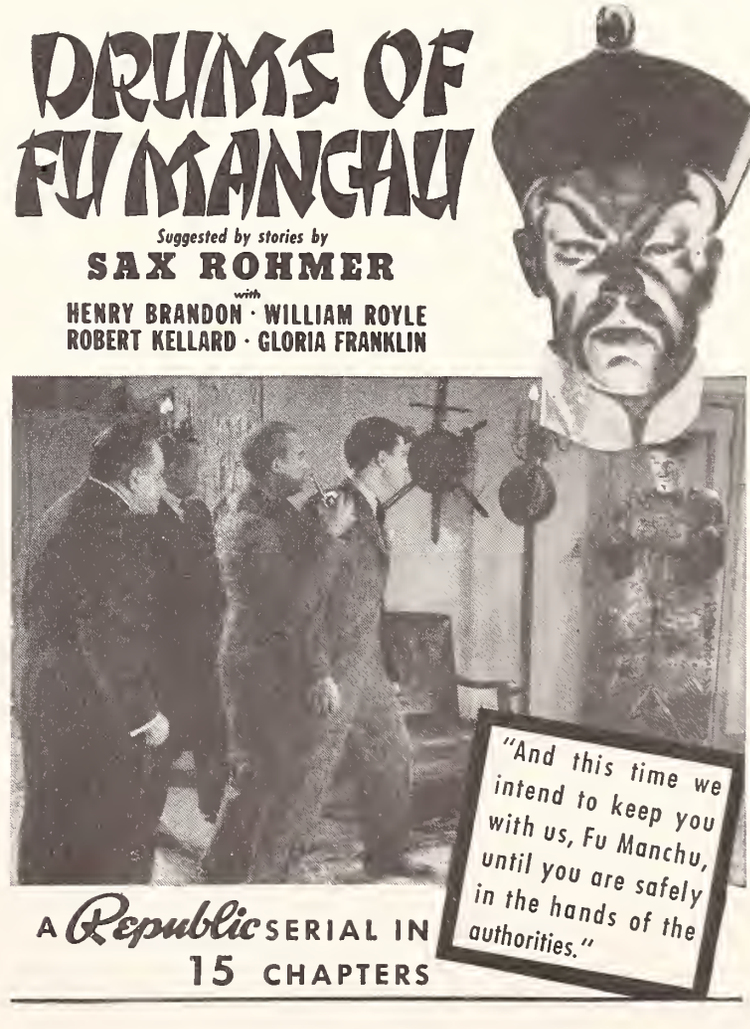
HOLLYWOOD CAVALCADE: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Stuart Erwin, Buster Keaton. Good show. Did not draw so well as some, but weather too bad for business, anyway. Running time, 96 minutes. Played February 4.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. Rural patronage.

HONEYMOON'S OVER, THE: Stuart Erwin, Marjorie Weaver, Patric Knowles—Really not a bad little picture, but it is not good enough to attract the critical cash customers to the box office. Played on our giveaway nights. Running time, 70 minutes. Played February 7-8.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

KENTUCKY: Richard Greene, Loretta Young, Walter Brennan—Old but good. If you have not played it, do so at once. You can't go wrong. Running time, 96 minutes. Played February 11-12.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

LITTLE PRINCESS, THE: Shirley Temple, Richard Greene, Anita Louise, Cesar Romero, Ian Hunter, Arthur Treacher—Good picture, but did not draw too well. Shirley Temple is not what she used to be. Running time, 91 minutes. Played February 18-19.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

MAN WHO WOULDN'T TALK, THE: Lloyd Nolan, Jean Rogers—A good program picture which will please your customers if you can get them to come and see it. Nolan does a very good job and gets good support from the rest of the cast. The story is unusual and will hold the attention of the fans from start to finish. We used the picture on our giveaway night. Running time, 72 minutes. Played February 14-15.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.



MAN WHO WOULDN'T TALK, THE: Lloyd Nolan, Jean Rogers—Doubled with Republic's "South of the Border." Best business since July 7-8, 1939. See report on "South of the Border." Played February 16-17.—J. F. Bobbitt, Stearns Theatre, Stearns, Ky. Mining and small town patronage.

PACK UP YOUR TROUBLES: Jane Withers, Ritz Brothers—Good program picture with lots of laughs. Patrons enjoyed this better than Jane's previous picture, "Chicken Wagon Family." Double billed with Republic's "Pride of the Navy." Running time, 75 minutes. Played February 8-10.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

RAINS CAME, THE: Myrna Loy, Tyrone Power, George Brent, Brenda Joyce—Swell show and swell cast. Storm scenes very well done. Running time, 104 minutes. Played January 1-3.—Coombes and Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

RAINS CAME, THE: Myrna Loy, George Brent, Tyrone Power, Brenda Joyce—Very elaborate production with no appeal to my type of clientele, resulting in a loss at the box office. Running time, 103 minutes. Played February 4-5.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

STOP, LOOK AND LOVE: Jean Rogers, Robert Kellard—Played this with "Jeepers Creepers" to the best business this winter and everybody satisfied. Played February 9-10.—H. T. Nokes, Ozark Theatre, Ozark, Mo. Rural patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Andrea Leeds, Al Jolson—This picture is made to order for small towns, and if you don't bave it booked, better do it now. We have not had a picture in ages tbat pleased so well and it brought out customers we have not seen in the show since silent days. Stepben Foster's music, together with Al Jolson singing in his blackface technique, that made him famous and the old show boats and darky tunes, seemed to take the audience back to a peaceful and pleasing era. Every actor and actress gave a fine performance and the color added cbarm to a charming story. If one were to scratch the surface, they could see Don Ameche a poor counterpart for the famed Stepben Foster, who did not inject real life into the character, but nevertheless his acting was good and the picture injected new life into the box office, which, after all, is the important thing. Our hat is off to Fox for this "bread winner," and if you don't get in on tbe profits on this one, you are slipping. Running time, 86 minutes. Played February 1-2.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Andrea Leeds, Al Jolson—Excellent music, color and story. Good business.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Al Jolson, Andrea Leeds—This is a "hit" picture. Put everytbing you bave behind it. Good picture; good business. Running time, 86 minutes. Played February 14-15.—E. J. Pennell, Coliseum Theatre, Bronson, Mich. General patronage.

TOO BUSY TO WORK: Spring Byington, Jed Prouty, Joan Davis—Played this on a double feature with "Jeepers Creepers." It made the best double bill I have played in a long time. "Too Busy to Work" is without a doubt the best picture of the Jones Family to date. Joan Davis puts on the finishing touch that it needed. Loads of laughs and that's what we need. Running time, 65 minutes. Played February 16-17.—E. J. Pennell, Coliseum Theatre, Bronson, Mich. General patronage.

20,000 MEN A YEAR: Randolph Scott, Margaret Lindsay, Preston Foster—A fair little program picture, shoved in the upper allocations by Fox. Fox must be hard up for pictures when they place "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," "Here I Am a Stranger," "The Cisco Kid and the Lady" and "20,000 Men a Year" in the higher allocation—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

20,000 MEN A YEAR: Randolph Scott, Margaret Lindsay, Preston Foster—Fair picture, fair business. Allocated too high. Running time, 84 minutes. Played February 13.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Okla. Small town patronage.

United Artists

COWBOY AND THE LADY, THE: Gary Cooper, Merle Oberon—Played this one late as is the case with most of our showings. This picture in my estimation is rated too high as regards price, as I think it is not much better than a good "B" feature. While it is fair entertainment, none of my patrons praised it and a few considered it to be poor. Running time, 92 minutes. Played February 8-9.—A. R. Dakin, Rice Lake Theatre, Bissett, Manitoba, Canada.

HOUSEKEEPER'S DAUGHTER, THE: Joan Bennett, Adolphe Menjou—Hilarious from start to finish. "Percy, the Passion Flower" (Menjou), is tops as the philandering newshawk. He chases after every gorgeous "Donkey" that pops up and goes completely and hilarious "gaga" over La Bennett. Audience ate it up and the word-of-mouth was terrific. Never a doubt as to comedy when Hal Roach directs! Running time, 76 minutes. Played January 13-19.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

INTERMEZZO, A LOVE STORY: Leslie Howard, Ingrid Bergman, Edna Best—Class picture for class audiences only. Good music for music lovers, too. Good cast, good photography, good sound, good direction. Put them all together and you have the grandest box office flop of the year. Running time, 70 minutes. —H. H. Silver, Overlea Theatre, Overlea, Md. General patronage.

INTERMEZZO, A LOVE STORY: Leslie Howard, Ingrid Bergman, Edna Best—This is strictly a class picture, but very good of its kind. I can use this type to good advantage. I am considered a crazy exhibitor, but as long as I am happy, who cares? Anyway, I doubled this with "The Old Maid" and everyone who was evenly slightly interested couldn't resist the show. It was a success both financially and enjoyably. Personally, I believe in not dividing my audience up on doubles. I want all who come to like both rather than liking one and disliking the other. Both pictures in my doubles always appeal to the same group and for me it is the most successful way to do it. My next double will appeal directly to the comedy lovers and everyone of that type will be at the show. I guarantee it. Running time, 70 minutes. Played February 16-17.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

RAFFLES: David Niven, Olivia de Havilland—Story dated. Must be sold as a gangster picture to the young who don't remember the original. Production and cast good. Never no draw, yet a Goldwyn program picture at Goldwyn prices. Running time, 70 minutes.—H. H. Silver, Overlea Theatre, Overlea, Md. General patronage.

REAL GLORY, THE: Gary Cooper, David Niven, Andrea Leeds—This certainly is smash-bang entertainment with some gruesome scenes thrown in for good measure. The climax is one of the most exciting we have ever had. Action fans should like this as there isn't a slow moment in it. As for the box office, we had mile-high snow drifts, impassable roads and a basketball game against us, and we still did above normal business. It must have pretty good drawing power. The "real glory" of the whole thing was that the film carrier got the show into town over those impassable roads. You have to give those fellows plenty of credit in times like this. Running time, 96 minutes. Played February 15.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

WUTHERING HEIGHTS: Merle Oberon, Laurence Olivier, David Niven, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Flora Robson—Very dismal and depressing. We have enough troubles now without these kind of shows. Running time, 107 minutes. Played February 1-3.—Coombes and Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town patronage.

Universal

DESPERATE TRAILS: Johnny Mack Brown, Bob Baker, Fuzzy Knight, Frances Robinson—Universal really has sometbing if the balance of these westerns are as crammed full of action as is this one. Excellent. Running time, 58 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DESTRY RIDES AGAIN: James Stewart, Marlene Dietrich, Charles Winninger, Mischa Auer, Brian Donlevy, Una Merkel, Irene Hervey—A really big western that deserves best time. We didn't break any records with it, but not the fault of picture, as we ran into some bad weather. Will please all types of fans. Played February 18-20.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Tbeatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

DESTRY RIDES AGAIN: Marlene Dietrich, James Stewart, Charles Winninger, Mischa Auer, Brian Donlevy, Una Merkel, Irene Hervey—We felt this would bring in the western fans, but it failed to do so and we had about average midweek business. Guess we should have booked on weekend as it certainly would do business in that spot. Feature of the "Tombstone" type and was very satisfactory entertainment. Running time, 94 minutes. Played February 14-15.—J. F. Bobbitt, Stearns Theatre, Stearns, Ky. Mining and small town patronage.

LAUGH IT OFF: Johnny Downs, Constance Moore, Edgar Kennedy—Try and do it. Good for lower half of duals, if you must have a lower half.—H. H. Silver, Overlea Theatre, Overlea, Md. General patronage.

LITTLE ACCIDENT: Baby Sandy, Hugh Herbert, Florence Rice, Richard Carlson, Joy Hodges—As good a little picture as you would want to play. Just a swell show that deserves the best days you can give it. Running time, 65 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

TOWER OF LONDON: Basil Rathbone, Boris Karloff, Nan Grey, Ian Hunter—This was okay as far as the 14th Century pictures are concerned, but our people just don't like these costume features. However, rental was reasonable and had almost average Family Night business. Running time, 92 minutes. Played February 12-13.—J. F. Bobbitt, Stearns Theatre, Stearns, Ky. Mining and general patronage.

UNEXPECTED FATHER: Baby Sandy, Mischa Auer—Baby Sandy pictures all very good. Running time, 77 minutes. Played December 18-20.—Coombes and Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Saskatchewan, Canada. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

BRITISH INTELLIGENCE: Boris Karloff, Margaret Lindsay—Saw this screened; not so hot.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

BROTHER RAT AND A BABY: Priscilla Lane, Wayne Morris, Jane Bryan, Eddie Albert, Ronald Reagan, Jane Wyman—Good show. Good business on Sunday and Monday. Running time, 87 minutes.—Played January 28-29.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. Small town patronage.

CHILD IS BORN, A: Geraldine Fitzgerald, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George—This is strictly an adult picture, and to protect ourselves from the wrath of mothers and fathers, we billed it as "Not Recommended for Children," which drew some attention, but when you leave out the kids the box office suffers, especially on a Sunday date. We gave the picture big publicity, but it drew only average business. Geraldine Fitzgerald gave a fine performance as the expectant mother who left prison to have her baby in a large hospital. Jeffrey Lynn was sympathetic as the much worried and harassed father, and Gladys George came tbrougb with a fine performance as the vaudeville trouper, also confined for maternal purposes. Running time, 79 minutes. Played January 14-15.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

CHILD IS BORN, A: Geraldine Fitzgerald, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George—Advertised for adults only. Did fair gross in coldest weather of year. Running time, 79 minutes. Played January 25-26.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. Small town patronage.

INDIANAPOLIS SPEEDWAY: Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan, John Payne, Gale Page—Just fair. Can just as well be let alone. Usual hokum. Running time, 82 minutes. Played January 11-13.—Coombes and Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Saskatcbewan, Canada. Small town patronage.

INVISIBLE STRIPES: George Raft, Jane Bryan, William Holden, Humphrey Bogart—Raft, Bryan and Holden do a good job in this. Raft is becoming more popular with the better roles. Bill Holden is a natural and Jane Bryan without a doubt rank high. Business good. Patrons satisfied. Running time, 80 minutes. Played January 27-30.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

KID NIGHTINGALE: John Payne, Jane Wyman—Good little programmer that pleased on double bill and Jane Wyman is okay by us. Played February 16-17.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

PRIDE OF THE BLUE GRASS: Edith Fellows, James McCallion—All who saw this entertaining little picture seemed to enjoy it, but I barely took in film rental. My patrons do not turn out to see horse race pictures. Running time, 65 minutes. Played February 14.—E. B. Bowman, Maxton Theatre, Maxton, N. C. Small town patronage.

PRIVATE LIVES OF ELIZABETH AND ESSEX, THE: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland—While we did only average business on this picture, it was very pleasing, well acted and beautifully photographed. Bette Davis is superb as the Queen and Errol Flynn is all that you would expect him to be. This is definitely for the more cultured trade, but if you can get them in the theatre they will come out entirely satisfied. We cannot find fault with this one from the standpoint of artistry, but from the box office angle I think even Bette Davis will have a hard time drawing customers in a small town to a costume picture. Why people will turn their nose at such a fine production is beyond me, but since it is allocated in the higher brackets, it is not bread and butter for the small towns. Running time, 106 minutes. Played January 25-26.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

ROARING TWENTIES, THE: James Cagney, Priscilla Lane, Humphrey Bogart, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George—Just the type for my town and should go over wherever gangster pictures are liked. Running time, 106 minutes. Played February 16-17.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

ROARING TWENTIES, THE: James Cagney, Priscilla Lane, Gladys George, Humphrey Bogart, Jeffrey Lynn—Very good entertainment. James Cagney and Gladys George are outstanding. Received very good comment from the patrons. Due to bad weather, business was not good, but we were pleased. For once it was not the fault of the picture. Running time, 104 minutes. Played February 12-14.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

ROARING TWENTIES, THE: James Cagney, Priscilla Lane, Humphrey Bogart, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George—Very good gangster picture to better business than I expected on it. Seemed to please the customers too. Musical score is swell and brought back memories to my audiences. Gladys George steals the picture and should be given bigger and better roles in the future. Running time, 105 minutes. Played January 28-30.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre. Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

State Rights

TARZAN AND THE GREEN GODDESS: Herman Brix—Biggest Saturday in months. Adams Film Exchange releases in this territory. Grab this one. Running time, 70 minutes. Played February 10.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

BOY, A GUN AND BIRDS, A: Color Rhapsodies—Just so-so. Good color and fair subject, but people do not come to a picture for a lecture. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

OH, YOU NAZTY SPY: Three Stooges—A dandy slapstick comedy.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SKIING TECHNIQUE: Special Sport Thrills—Too

much skiing. For a community that takes their skiing seriously this is all right, but for us in the midwest just no good. Running time, seven minutes. —A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

CAIRO, CITY OF CONTRAST: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Good short, as all this series from MGM is. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. R. Dakin, Rice Lake Theatre, Bissett, Manitoba, Canada. Mining patronage.

CAPTAIN SPANKY'S SHOWBOAT: Our Gang—Did not think this one was quite up to standard, but it is good compared to most short subjects and is worth a play date. Running time, 11 minutes.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

DAY OF REST, THE: Robert Benchley—Very few of our patrons like these subjects and I think this will be the last one we use. Running time, nine minutes.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

PEACE ON EARTH: MGM Cartoons—Above all others get this color cartoon. One grand cartoon. Will help in a big way to round out any program. Running time, nine minutes.—C. W. Hawk, Ada Theatre, Ada, Ohio. Small college town patronage.

POUND FOOLISH: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—As usual, this is another interesting subject with plenty of action in it. It deals with the society smugglers who try to get imported gems into this country without paying the customs. Running time, 19 minutes.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis.

SKI BIRDS: Pete Smith Specialties—Interesting. No skiing here, but had a number of favorable comments. Running time, nine minutes.—C. W. Hawk, Ada Theatre, Ada, Ohio. Small college town patronage.

AUTOGRAPH HOUND: Walt Disney Cartoons—Glad to get another Disney short.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

FOX HUNT, THE: Walt Disney Cartoons—Probably the noisiest and screwiest Disney we have had the doubtful pleasure to show. This is certainly a long way below the standard of these cartoons, which I consider are tops in their line. Running time, eight minutes.—A. R. Dakin, Rice Lake Theatre, Bissett, Manitoba, Canada. Mining patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 6: The Republic of Finland—The time is ripe for this Finland March of Time. I gave it special ad space. Had people in our theatre for the first time. Running time, 18 minutes. —C. W. Hawk, Ada Theatre, Ada, Ohio. Small college town patronage.

WINTER PLAYGROUND: RKO Pathe Sportscopes —This came along at all too appropriate a moment. The scenes of Canada looked exactly like our own town except that I think our snow was deeper. However, it is a good reel if your people like to see skiing and tobogganing and such. Running time, 10 minutes. —W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

WINTER PLAYGROUND: RKO Pathe Sportscopes —An excellent snow reel.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CLOCKING THE JOCKEYS: Ed Thorgersen (Sports)—Average sport short. Has been done too many times before. Running time, 11 minutes.—Don Bloxham, Palace Theatre, Exira, Iowa. General patronage.

GANDY THE GOOSE IN DOOMSDAY: Terry-Toons—A very ordinary colored cartoon which fell as flat as a bride's first cake. Quality of this series is not very consistent. Running time, nine minutes.—H. William, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

GOLDEN WEST, THE: Terry-Toons—Went over great on Saturday night. Running time, seven minutes.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

HOOK, LINE AND SINKER: Terry-Toons—Just a cartoon in color. Running time, eight minutes.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

HOOK, LINE AND SINKER: Terry Toons—In color. Here is a good cartoon that got the laughs. Running time, seven minutes.—W. Clark, Palace Theatre, Fort Covington, N. Y. Rural patronage.

KANGAROO COUNTRY: Magic Carpet Series—Very interesting subject which was well received. I think most people with the exception of the Jitterbugs appreciate a subject of this kind. Running time, 10 minutes.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

MONKEYS IS THE CWAZIEST PEOPLE: Lew Lehr—These subjects are well liked by our patrons and I thought this one was especially entertaining. Running time, 10 minutes.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

MONKEYS IS THE CWAZIEST PEOPLE: Lew Lehr—Not as good as the previous release, "The Silly Season," but is very entertaining. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

Universal

GOING PLACES, NO. 67—A dandy travelogue about Africa.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION, NO. 68—They seem to have run out of interesting subjects on this reel. Not so good. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

AFRICA SQUEAKS: Looney Tunes—It is another one of those Schlesinger belly laugh cartoons that have made my adult patronage cartoon-conscious. When people ask, "Got a funny cartoon tonight?", all I have to answer is, "And how! It's a Merrie Melody!" or "It's a Looney Tune!" Running time, seven minutes.—Stanley Lambert, Rialto Theatre, Racine, Wis. General patronage.

AMERICAN SADDLE HORSES: Color Parade—Very good color and an unusual angle on the subject makes this a dandy short for anyone and a knockout for horse lovers. Get in touch with the right local people on this one. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

ARTIE SHAW AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Good band reel for the young audience, but they definitely thought the over-serious scenes during the singing of "Deep Purple" were funny. So did I. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

EDDIE DELANGE AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—When a big ox of a man tries to act coy it is terrible. and DeLange is no exception. This is putrid. Running time, eight minures.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SCREWBALL FOOTBALL: Merrie Melodies—If your crowd knows football language, they'll like this batch of puns on the same. The college folk thought this color cartoon was dandy. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

VINCENT LOPEZ AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—An average band act.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Damages of $25,000 as well as reformation of the plaintiff's contract, and temporary and permanent injunctions are sought. IN COURTS

Goldwyn Action Pleas Postponed

Cross-applications in Samuel Goldwyn's suit against United Artists, Alexander Korda and London Film Productions were postponed to March 15th in a stipulation filed Monday in federal court in New York.

The postponement refers to a motion by Mr. Goldwyn to examine Mr. Korda before trial, one by Mr. Korda and London film to dismiss the suit against them, and an application by United Artists for an order to strike out parts of the complaint and for a bill of particulars. Under terms of the stipulations, answering affidavits were to be served by Wednesday and all replies by March 12th.

Mr. Goldwyn is suing Mr. Korda and United Artists for an injunction to restrain them from interfering with the distribution of his pictures. Mr. Goldwyn contends that his releasing contract with United Artists is cancelled.

The chancery court of Delaware recently dismissed a suit instituted there by Mr. Goldwyn against United Artists on the grounds that his suit did not include Mr. Korda as defendant.

Court Dismisses Wanger Libel Suit

The appellate division of the New York supreme court Friday reversed a decision which had upheld the $1,000,000 libel suit of Walter Wanger and Walter Wanger Productions, Inc., against the News Syndicate Company, Inc., publisher of the New York Daily News and Ed Sullivan, columnist, and dismissed the complaint.

The court ruled that Mr. Sullivan in an article which ran in the Daily News and which discussed the Goldwyn dispute with United Artists, did not libel Mr. Wanger without proof by him of damages caused by it. The suit claimed that the article implied that Mr. Wanger produced inferior pictures.

File Republic Suit

A copyright infringement suit against Republic productions, Inc., Republic Pictures Corporation and Republic Film Exchange, Inc., was filed Friday in federal court in New York by Marquis James, author of "The Raven," a biography of Sam Houston. IT'S A REMEDY, TOO

If every theatre newspaper ad is a combination of many others, the reasons-why are not hard to find. Next to the picture itself, continuous day-to-day advertising is the very life-line of exhibition. To titillate jaded entertainment appetites, admen search out new twists and developments of selling appeal. Thus, the conscientious ad maker sets himself a standard not easy to maintain. It is the artist in him that spurs on the lad to turn out a job that will pass his own inspection, often more critical than it needs be.

That would be illustrated currently in a letter from George E. Clark, able ad head of Famous Players Canadian theatres, in Vancouver, B. C., whose work has been represented in these pages. A twenty-year campaigner in showbusiness, the Round Tabler discusses with intelligence the hazards that beset the conscientious ad maker in turning out his daily stint. Writes the Canadian member:

"Being an ad man who must draw his own ads and write his own copy, we naturally are interested in your ad page. Our job here is to handle the space for the four downtown and eight neighborhood theatres. We turn out a plate each day. Some of our stuff has been good and some otherwise. It takes a lot of work and sometimes a fellow gets stale. The remedy I have always found is a ramble through the Round Table ad pages in our stack of Heralds.

"It has long been my contention that it is the easiest thing in the world and a favorite sport in showbusiness to criticize and to pull to pieces an ad that a man originated from nothing to a completed article. Therefore, I contend that a good man can invariably take any ad and improve it, not in the form of criticism, but in the matter of his own use of it."

Obviously, an ad is to be termed good or bad only in relation to its effectiveness. It is no secret that a layout which delivers in one situation can be a complete flop in another. The reasons are not difficult to find, what with the varying expressions of taste and temperament in picture audiences. Thus, the ads reproduced in these pages are not selected primarily through any especial rating of excellence. They are intended rather as a weekly presentation of representative advertising expression and, as Clark sees it, a possible tonic for the harassed ad man seeking to sell more tickets within the newspaper limitations of "black-and-white."

"I have used many of the ideas put forth by Managers' Round Table and decided it was time I sent something in."

The above is the opening paragraph of a letter from Manager Ralph E. Craig, who runs the largest kid club in northern Pennsylvania, and writes to tell the members about it.

Thus, in 22 words, in two lines of type, a manager sets down the reason-for-being which has secured for your Round Table its universal recognition as the industry's clearing house for showmanship. The voluntary obligation that theatremen assume to report their activities in return for ideas in these pages offered by others is this department's greatest asset.

SELLING THEATRE-GOING

Evidences reported here, and not infrequently, show that institutional advertising is not swept aside in the rush of contributions on picture campaigns. Round Tablers who have reason to value the results of consistent institutional plugging point out advantages to sell in the theatre other than the programs, that also command boxoffice approval.

A fitting example, detailed in a recent issue, is the ingenious "Do You Know" folder gotten out by George Laby. Copy stressed the theatre's fine equipment, policy, extra services. No program mention was carried. The idea brought excellent reaction from patrons and home-office heads.

It is still to be disproved that, with everything else equal, the house given the advantage of consistent and intelligent "institutionalizing" stands a better chance of topping the opposition.

As we go to press, the latest flash from the coast is that David O. Selznick, head of Selznick International and producer of "Gone With the Wind", will be the toastmaster at the Quigley Grand Awards luncheon and presentation, in Hollywood, on March 12th. The winners, Ray Bell and Lige Brien, will arrive a day ahead as guests of Quigley Publications.

Round Table In Pictures

Folks out Chicago-way were treated to the sight of an old-fashioned bar, which was set up in the lobby of Warner's Avalon Theatre by Marlowe Conner for "Destry Rides Again." Figures of leading characters in the picture were blown up to life size, mounted on compo board and placed against the bar in various attitudes. For further atmosphere beer kegs were planted.

Playing "Balalaika" coincidently with Valentine's Day, at Loew's Valencia, in Jamaica, Tom Rogers conceived elaborate lobby setpiece illustrated above, left, consisting of cutouts of Massey and Eddy in large flitter background heart. In addition tieup was made with five-and-ten whereby boxes of powder were given to all women attending Valentine's Day show.

For street attention that tied into the rest of the comprehensive campaign for "Mice and Men" at the New York Roxy, the colorful float here reproduced was used by the theatre under the supervision of Homer Harman, ad head, to traverse the important traffic arteries in different sections of the city. Giant book made up the center display with life-size cut-outs and balloon copy for identification of the main characters in the story.

As a means of building up the picture's comedy angles, a "truth machine" was planted in the lobby of Loew's Granada, Cleveland, as advance for Johnny Newkirk's "All Women Have Secrets" engagement. Female contingency was invited to sit at the machine, holding lever, and answer questions put to them by their escorts, machine answering as detailed in photo.

SPRING FASHION REVIEW PUT ON IN KANSAS CITY

McManus Works with Merchants on Civic Tiein; Added Current Reports Detailed by Members

Spring style shows, corsages, Valentine Day ideas, contests and other sprightly items of immediate boxoffice note come to attention in the numerous tieins reported on current and prerelease dates and confirmed as bringing added interest to the situations concerned.

In Kansas City, it was Johnny McManus, at Loew's Midland, who bowed in with the first showing of women's Spring styles on a hookup with the merchants' association. The fashion shows were held on two successive mornings, as a civic enterprise, the theatre facilities furnished free of charge and admission charged. Over 3,500 women attended the first showing, with Grand Duchess Marie brought from New York to supervise the proceedings. Local socialites serving as models assured wide publicity in the press, the theatre receiving mention throughout, plus credits in all co-op ads.

Zinn Presents Niven Corsages

Gardenia corsages had the folks talking on the ingenious flower stunt effected by Charles Zinn and George Tharp, for "Eternally Yours," at the Century, Minneapolis. Florist was tied in to furnish the blooms distributed by messenger boys to society editors, business women, teachers and housewives. Each corsage was accompanied by a personal card with hand-written best wishes from David Niven and a note about the picture, theatre and date. Idea broke the leading newspaper columns.

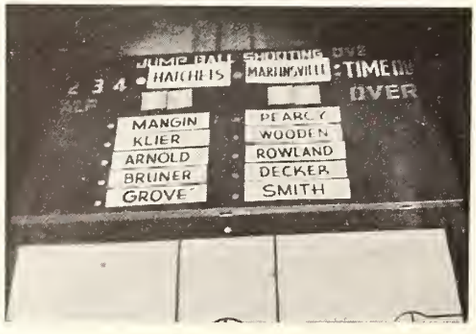
Bell Holds Lamarr Valentine Contest

For "I Take This Woman," Ray Bell dug into his local papers and radio stations for the usual good results, outstanding being a newspaper contest wherein male readers were invited to plead with Hedy Lamarr to be their valentine. College football player was the winner which brought extra publicity in a popular sports column. Adapted from a pressbook idea was an inquiring-reporter tiein with another daily wherein Miss Lamarr was said she thought men were most attractive between 35 and 55.

On the radio, Bell arranged for leading Washington women to speak and be interviewed by the women's editor on the star's beauty after a screening of the picture. "Coin a phrase which will appropriately describe Hedy Lamarr" was the basis of another radio tiein that ran four days. For Spencer Tracy plugging, cards were mailed to all local doctors on the date.

Exploiteer Doubles for "Raffles"

Readers of the Milwaukee News-Sentinel, invited to find "Raffles" on the city streets on a four-day tiein with the picture at the Warner, were really searching for Art Catlin, United Artists Chicago territory exploiteer, who acted as the hunted man. Cash prizes and theatre tickets were awarded those most successful, making proper identification by tapping Catlin with a copy of the paper saying, "You Are Raffles." Much publicity was forthcoming.



Whether Jack Dempsey in his prime could beat Joe Louis, was the topical angle reported by Edgar Goth, Staten Island Fabian Theatres publicity head, for attention to a combination booking of the old Dempsey-Willard pictures and those of the recent Louis-Godoy fight. An aggressive advance campaign was effected to sell the thought and day after the opening a one-column full was run with opinions of local sportsmen who had seen the show. Campaign was planned by Harry Black, district manager, John Firnkoess, manager, and Goth.

Another click on the Dempsey-Willard pictures was put across by Gene Curtis, at the Paramount, Syracuse, by tiein with a local jeweler, a personal friend of Dempsey, who paid for a two-column ad to announce free distribution of 500 children's tickets, paid for by the merchant, to youngsters bringing the ad to the store, from where they paraded in a body to the theatre. Photos of the donor and the former champ were run by the dailies.

Celebrating the event in the traditional manner, Stan Andrews handed out the cigars on the occasion of "A Child Is Born" at the Capitol, Guelph, Ontario. The smokes were attached to small cards reading, "We guarantee you say congratulations, a swell show, when you see," etc. Limited in number and distributed where the crowds were thickest, Andrews reports quite a bit of notice to this unusual angle.

"NORTHWEST PASSAGE" TIED TO SATEVEPOST

Insert in all copies of the Saturday Evening Post for "Northwest Passage" was made with local distributor on date at Loew's Poli, Waterbury, Conn., by Ed Fitzpatrick. Headed by theatre and picture credits, insert read: "This is a picturization of the story which originally appeared in the Saturday Evening Post under the title, 'Rogers Rangers'. Now see it come to thrilling life," etc. Tiein was made for distribution in suburban areas as well as the city.

KALBERER'S PLAY-O-GRAPH BOARD

Beats Basketball Opposition With 'Playograph' Idea

In common with other communities in that sector where basket-ball is tough opposition, patrons of the Indiana, Washington, Ind., were devoting a lot of attention to the home games of the winning high school team, the last contest playing to almost half the city's population, according to Manager Kal Kalberer, who did something about it. The "something" was an electrically operated Play-O-Graph board, six feet wide and eight high, on one side of the stage, that informed patrons of the play-by-play of the team's out-of-town games.

The board, illustrated below, was marked clearly so that patrons could follow the periods, time out and time over, jump ball, team shooting, etc. Names of players of both teams were listed with bulbs next to each which when lighted noted immediately who had the ball and those responsible for scores. Below was laid out a proportionally-correct court on white background with zone markings and baskets. Light bulbs were placed so that progress of the ball could be followed in actual play.

Commentator Relays Game Plays

Special wires direct from the out-of-town games were run to the theatre with local radio commentator phoning the running account of the game to newspaper sports editor backstage, who, in turn, transferred each play as given to the board via push buttons and small switches. Kalberer's projectionists are credited for putting together the apparatus which he reports took a lot of intricate wiring and lighting. Though complicated to build, the Round Tabler found it easy to operate.

Placed on the stage so it did not interfere with the screen program, the board allows the basket-ball fans to watch the game as others view the picture, without disturbing one another. In addition to Kalberer's extra advertising of the unique service, both papers gave the event front-page stories. Put on for the first time recently on a Friday night the theatre man doubled his usual night's grosses with the audience expressing enthusiasm for the extra feature included in the regular program.

Clark Gives Basketball Folders

Metropolis, Ill., is another town where basketball is hot. To cope with opposition, Eddie Clark, of Cluster's Massac theatre, got out an attractive four-page folder distributed at recent high school home game. Outside cover had figure of player shooting with copy: "It Pays to Boost the Trojans." Inside had two panels, one reading if the home team won, the folder and 10 cents would admit holder to theatre. The other panel offered the same if the other quintet was victor. Back page carried line up of both teams.

Ushers distributed folders at the game, and Clark says cost of printing was more than paid for in the extra business from locals and visitors after the battle. The Round Tabler further advises that the idea packed a lot of goodwill buildup.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

ONE MAN DECISIONS

SPEAKING before the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences the other night Mr. Walter Wanger observed:

"Fortunately, and unfortunately, today all eyes are on Hollywood—the racketeers, the self-appointed censor, the political publicity seeker, the scandal monger, the would-be dictator. All see their chance.

"We want a strong Academy—an Academy which will say to these parasites: 'Hands off'."

Mr. Wanger's intent is obviously constructive. But his suggestion that the Academy should make the answers is hardly workable, or probable. The answer on motion picture production has to be made, as Mr. Wanger so well knows, one production at a time, by the one producer concerned at the time.

Significantly interesting was Mr. Wanger's observation: "We want our programs as varied as the book publishers."

Long, long it has been more than apparent that the art and the box office would be well served if Hollywood might abandon its copy-cat cycles. That it will achieve such separate independences of thought is most improbable. There is nothing in the record to promise it.

It is a help, no doubt, to have the problems proclaimed, but they are to be solved only by individuals pursuing individual courses.

Meanwhile initial costs permit book publishers to speculate in terms impractical for the motion picture, where experiments can cost so much.

BLACK & WHITE

MARCH the third was the twenty-fifth anniversary of the opening of "The Birth of a Nation", early and great milestone in the modern career of the screen. It was marked for its producer, Mr. D. W. Griffith, principally by the receipt of a congratulatory telegram from Mr. Seymour Stern and a group of friends of the Griffith tradition.

Out in Colorado a motion picture exhibitor was the while being subjected to fines and a suspended jail sentence for showing "The Birth of a Nation", on the charge that it incited race prejudice, etc., as an attack on the American negro.

New York's Daily Worker says that the picture industry is ruled by Wall Street, and is committed to an anti-negro policy. What the Daily Worker is looking for is a policy.

In Hollywood two days before a negro actress, wearing a vast array of ivory white cape jasmines, received from the motion picture industry, through "the Academy", high honors.

THE Rockefeller Foundation appears to have quite a flair for the nourishment of the Left. The announcement has just been made of a grant to the New School for Social Research for a study of the music in film production. It seems only the other day that the Foundation made a grant for a study of the theatre to be made by Mrs. Hallie Flanagan, at Vassar, in sequel to her contributions to the radical art of the Federal Theatre.

THE LOSS COLUMN

TURNING the news proofs of this issue one discovers a deal of discussion of efforts on the part of sundry exhibitor interests to gain from the "majors" agreements to plans for round-tables and arbitration boards and the like. It might be assumed that the distributors would be in a slightly more plastic mood on trade practises, what with the pending trust trial. It is equally clear, however, that their lawyers are not going to approve any unified action that could be even remotely indictable as too close harmony, or inferentially as an admission of something about the status quo ante.

There does remain, as ever and always, the fact that in an industry so complex, with so many customers, so many potential points of issue, some machinery of adjustment between buyer and seller could serve, and save a lot of court costs, direct and indirect.

The millions that the motion picture industry spends fighting with itself are of no benefit to either stockholder or boxoffice. This is not offered as news.

MODERN ADVENTURE

AT one of those sessions about this-and-that, running from Little America to Finland, the Publisher tilted his chair and leaned back to observe: "As we, the world and the motion picture audiences grow up there is developing a new order of adventure. It used to consist entirely of the affairs of soldiers of fortune, the business of pushing back the horizon or fighting the Indians. .

"Now high adventure for our age may be had in a test tube, a crucible or a clinic. So this 'Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet' is very much an adventure tale, a subject of thrills and daring in a war for humanity quite as real as any fought with gunpowder and bayonets.

"The skill of its telling on the screen, developing this adventure quality, is another demonstration of the greater scope of the motion picture. In no other medium could it have been done quite so effectively."

SALES DRIVE

ONCE upon a time if anyone got reasonably famous in the show world he was likely to have a cigar named for him. Nowadays if one attains status in motion picture distribution it is reasonably certain that he'll have a "drive" named after him. Among contemporary success stories is the career of Mr. Abe Montague, who began as a concert pianist, worked up to a job as usher, and in time became an exhibitor, eventually a Columbia franchise holder and in turn Columbia's sales manager. That's why there's a "Montague Drive" which celebrates his fifteenth anniversary. Columbia celebrates, while Mr. Montague, on one of his rare vacations, drives—just now about 18 holes a day in Florida.

This Week in the News

Gov't Interference

ONE OF THE strongest attacks made on the floor of Congress this session against Administration "interference with business" came Wednesday at the opening of the morning session of the House of Representatives, by Representative John G. Alexander (Rep., Minn.), who, moved specifically by the threatened legislation concerning the motion picture industry, demanded that Congress call a halt to the enactment of business legislation which, he said, "is destroying individual initiative."

"Let the motion picture industry clean its own house," he urged.

Inserting in the Congressional Record a letter sent by Ben Ashe, secretary of Allied Theatres of the Northwest, to W. H. Workman, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, in Minneapolis, charging MGM with staging a motion picture preview in that city for the purpose of influencing attending "outside" organizations to condemn the pending Neely anti-block bill, Congressman Alexander declared that the industry should "rectify its program so as to meet the criticism on the part of the public which favors that bill." Northwest Allied met in annual convention Tuesday and Wednesday, in Minneapolis, and acted on the Neely matter, as reported in the middle column on page 20.

"Why is it necessary to make such business problems matters of legislation?" Representative Alexander asked his Congressional colleagues. "Why do we have to try, and I believe foolishly, to legislate business ethics and principles of business management? It is not only foolish, but it is just another one of the many insidious ways in which we are doing away with individual initiative, contaminating business with politics, and otherwise destroying the sound and fundamental principle of free Government," concluded the Congressman.

Distributors and exhibitors, last year, after years of sporadic efforts, succeeded in formulating a program of self-regulation. The Government's Thurman Arnold, acting as chief U. S. anti-trust prosecutor, prevented adoption of the program, charging it was illegal, and advising the distributors that any program must conform to the letter of the anti-trust complaint in the "key" New York action filed by the U. S. against the industry. This action is now proceeding toward trial, set for May 1st, as reported on page 38.

Meanwhile, various organized exhibitor groups this week set out to reopen negotiations with distributors for some arrangement to solve trade practice problems. Specifically, the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio invited executives of the majors to talk things over "across the table." The majors refused, evidently feeling that any concerted action has potential additional anti-trust troubles. See page 20.

A proposal for a federal bill to take the place of the pending Neely bill, basically aimed at correcting the block-booking abuses but eliminating some of the Neely bill's more drastic features was suggested by the MPTOA in a bulletin sent Wednesday to its members.

Two Los Angeles lawyers, Maurice Benjamin and Alfred Wright, this week sponsored in Washington the motion picture industry's first application for changes in present labor laws and especially from provisions and rulings under the Wagner Labor Act and its agencies. Procedural amendments to the Act were suggested. See page 45.

The lawyers appeared before the House Labor Committee on Monday. Their action was the first official participation of the motion picture industry in such matters since it joined the NRA. Five amendments designed to aid producers and distributors were sought as follows: freedom to discharge for reasons other than union activity; the requirement of "substantial and material evidence" in NLRB decisions; permission for employers to appeal for a certified union election; protection from claims of rival unions after one union has been certified; and provision for NLRB "consent decrees."

Hollywood Hits Dies

HOLLYWOOD talent's first organized expression against Representative Martin Dies's charges of Red infiltrations was wired Tuesday afternoon to Congress by the Screen Writers Guild, and demanded that Dies be removed from the House committee investigating un-American activities. The Guild charged that Mr. Dies sought to make himself "a political censor of motion pictures" and wrote magazine articles which "revealed prejudice and bias" against the industry.

The Guild sent copies of their complaint to the President, Vice-President and to all Congressmen from California. A committee was appointed by the Guild to answer in detail the charges brought by Mr. Dies.

McKenzie to Indiana

MAURICE McKENZIE, executive assistant to Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., has resigned, effective April 1 and will be succeeded in that post by Francis S. Harmon, who has been with the organization in Production Code and related activities for several years.

Mr. McKenzie has been with the Hays organization from its inception in capacities close to the president. He became first associated with Mr. Hays when "the General" was elected chairman of the Republican National Committee in 1918. Their acquaintance was formed in Indiana, when Mr. Hays was the lawyer from Sullivan and Mr. McKenzie was from Crown Point.

Mr. McKenzie is building a new country home at Crown Point, where he plans to turn his life long hobby of gardening into an incidental profession. He recently sold his picturesque and landscaped country place at Lockwood's Corners on Long Ridge Road in Fairfield County, Connecticut. Hoosiers like to go home.

Will H. Hays on Tuesday observed his 18th year as President of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. On March 4, 1922, he left the postmaster generalship, and came to the motion picture business. Since then he's been "the General."

Odlum Dollars

FLOYD B. ODLUM on Tuesday night told a New York forum of security analysts that investment trusts should concentrate their funds in special situations rather than "blue chips" in an effort to do better than the market averages—admitting that his Atlas Corporation investment trust had increased its asset value 150 per cent from 1929 to 1939, while the market averages had declined 40 per cent.

Floyd B. Odlum on Wednesday night told the shareholders of his Atlas Corporation that the investment trust had tucked away in a bulging portfolio exactly $63,074,729.59 worth of securities as of the last count; three of the "special situations"; $3,414,311 worth of RKO, an increase of $981,429 over last year, representing the largest single stockholder; $412,650 worth of Paramount Pictures (no change over last year); $87,000 worth of General Theatres Equipment (no change)—all of which represents Mr. Odlum's holdings of record in the motion picture business; $4,000,000 in films, $59,000,000 elsewhere, in everything from farm machines, sugar, home appliances, etc., etc.

Fined for Classic

ECHOES of the trouble which David Wark Griffith's "Birth of a Nation" caused some theatre owners variously during its 25 years' existence rang through a Denver county court house this week, as Robert E. Allan, former manager of the Jewel Theatre, Denver, was fined $200 for showing "Birth" and thereby violating that city's ordinance prohibiting screening of films "inciting race hatred." Mr. Allan was fined $1,400, the limit, last April, for showing the film seven times. At the time, he was also sentenced to 120 days in jail. The latest penalty, in the county court (which declared the ordinance constitutional) was modified. Judge Lawrence Hinkley suspended half the fine, and allowed Mr. Allan 60 days to pay the balance.

The picture, with the largest gross income in the history of the motion picture business (an estimated $17,000,000), was 25 years old last Sunday. Mr. Griffith, who reputedly received only a small part of the gross, did receive congratulations at his California home this week.

Plots, arrests, virulent written protests, suits, newspaper campaigns—all these the picture has stirred up.

It has been playing at the Sonotone Theatre, Chicago, covered by an injunction restraining the city's censor board from interfering; however, only adults have been admitted. Grosses are said to have been good.

"Gone With the Wind" is also playing at Chicago. Its grosses are also said to be good, $12,500,000 worth, as reported on page 27.

More Product

HOLLYWOOD has not let extended runs, holdovers or moveovers, the war abroad or labor conditions at home interfere to any noticeable extent with its primary business of producing motion pictures, as shown in a survey of product, reported on pages 12, 13 and 14.

A list of some 75 features still to be delivered under 1939-40 contracts which are already complete and "in the can" awaiting release, and an additional 34 pictures now shooting, together with data on 1939-40 films released up to the present, shows that there is no lag in production or any delay in releasing.

Fifty-three per cent of 1939-40 product schedule has been delivered up to the present. By March 8th last year 55 per cent of the season's product had been released. Figures also show that 79 features are finished and awaiting delivery as against 86 at the same period last year. 162 pictures are yet to be made for the current program.

Fair Questions

FILM INDUSTRY LEADERS were approached this week by officials of both World's Fairs with "concrete proposals" for participating at the Treasure Island (Cal.) and Flushing Meadows (N. Y.) expositions. Last year motion picture participation at both fairs was confined to the showing of a special film, "Land of Liberty."

Harvey D. Gibson, chairman of the board of the New York Fair and a director of Paramount Pictures, presented a plan to the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America under which the Fair structure known last year as the Textile Building would be rented to the industry. Stanton Griffis, chairman of the board of Paramount, is said to have worked out preliminary plans with Mr. Gibson, Major Leslie E. Thompson, president of RKO theatres, heads the film committee which was to report on the proposal to the MPPDA before the week-end.

Industry leaders will be asked to decide whether participation in the Fair would be advisable and, if so, what type of exhibit would be most suitable. A Hays official said Wednesday that, "if 'the boys' intend going into the Fair, they had better act quickly with the opening date only two months away." It was further pointed out that the film company heads would indorse no plan which would offend exhibitors, many of whom look upon the Fair as a competitor. John Manheimer, executive secretary of the Independent Theatre Owners Association in New York, sent a protest to the MPPDA Tuesday against "any free exhibit at the New York World's Fair by the motion picture industry."

Film Fair proposals now receiving attention include the establishment of a film museum, or a "Street of Theatres" where four small theatres would show by decades the progress of the motion picture from 1900 to 1940. Other plans advanced include a preview theatre to show each day a new film, have personal appearances of stars and a sound stage for actual production.

Meanwhile the San Francisco Fair is reported to be negotiating with Walt Disney to establish a cartoon-studio and theatre on Treasure Island.

16th Political Ban

The March of Time, on Monday, counted the 16th political banning of its monthly magazine-reel, which Henry Robinson Luce's Time-Life-Fortune interests make for RKO distribution. "Canada at War," released this week, was refused exhibition by the provincial censors at Ontario, "because of political pressure forced by Premier Mitchell Hepburn, according to Louis de Rochemont, producer.

Canadian Press wire service reported from Toronto that Premier Hepburn described the film, which tells a story of wartime Canada, as "nothing but pure political propaganda for the Mackenzie King (Dominion) Government," which is of different political faith than Premier Hepburn's party. Both sides are preparing for general elections on March 26th, and the Premier said Tuesday that the ban on March of Time might be lifted thereafter.

The ban in Canada followed 15 similar actions on previous March of Time subjects for various reasons, all political. Vol. 1, No. 3, was banned in April, 1935, by the late Huey Long, because he didn't like the subject: "The Story of Huey Long." Vol. 1, No. 7 was banned in October, 1935, by Chicago and Ohio censors; they objected to Hitler anti-Jewish scenes in "The Rise of Hitler in Germany." The April, 1937, issue was banned by the Kansas State Censor Board, who felt that remarks by Senator Wheeler were unfriendly to their Governor. Vol. 4, No. 6, was banned by Chicago censors in January, 1938, on the ground that scenes in "Inside Nazi Germany" were unfair to the German Nation.

"Permanent" prohibitions on the March of Time are in effect in Russia, Manchukuo, Germany, et al.

In every instance the banning was followed by much headline attention and platform expression, all of which melted down into the publicity pot, helping the March of Time to march on: 1935, there were 468 theatre accounts in the United States, two in two countries abroad, circulating in one language; 1940: 7,400 accounts in the United States, 4,300 in 38 countries abroad, circulating in five languages.

NO RELEASING DELAY, 53% OF PROGRAM DELIVERED

Of 500 Feature Commitments for Season, 259 Have Been Delivered; 79 More Ready, 162 to Be Completed

Holdovers and moveovers given "Gone With the Wind" and the many other high-caliber productions of recent date may have caused some local interferences with the normal flow of product from first-runs to subsequents, as reported last week, but they have not drastically slowed down studio commitments to their distribution affiliates, nor distributors' commitments on releasing.

As the 1939-40 film season—September-to-September—this week entered its second half, the ten large companies stood near normal with numerical requirements, as witness the following comparison of production and distribution activities for the same date one year ago:

	1939-40 No.	%	1938-39 No.	%
Features Promised (a-b)	500	100	479	100
Actually Delivered to March 8th (b)	259	.53	263	.55
Completed for Release After March 8th (b)	79	.16	86	.18
To Be Completed (b)	162	.31	130	.27

(a) Features Promised: 1939-40: Minimum, 500, Maximum, 512; 1938-39: Minimum, 479, Maximum, 493.
(b) Including Western Features.

With all the big productions coming along, at least a score of them arriving since January last, "Wind," "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," "Pinocchio," "Northwest Passage," among them, Hollywood, at this halfway mark of the season, has completed 68 per cent, a total of 338 of the 500 features promised, compared with last year's 70 per cent, or 349, or a total of 479 promised.

Guide for Exhibitors

A guide for exhibitors appearing later in this analysis of 1939-40 product, lists the titles, stars and supporting players of 75 features completed and "in the can", and for 34 other features actually shooting—giving the identities of material and talent for more than three-quarters of the product still to come.

On actual releases, the ten large distributors have delivered 53 per cent of the 1939-40 commitments, a total of 259, compared with 55 per cent, a total of 263, of last season's programs released up to this time.

Completed and "in the can" for release subsequent to this week are 79 pictures, or 16 per cent; last year in March there were 86 completed, representing 18 per cent.

Although Hollywood is committed to furnish 162 features, representing 31 per cent of the total promised, compared with 130 still to film at this time last year, it must be considered that the 500 features promised for 1939-40 are 21 more than the distributors were committed to the year previous.

Shooting Full Blast

Regardless, the studios have been shooting full blast, averaging between 30 and 35 in work. This week there were 35 shooting, 21 in preparation and 57 in the cutting rooms, a total of 113, the bulk of which are intended for 1939-40, only a comparative few being held for next season. Six features were completed in the past few days and seven new ones were started, as The Hollywood Scene reports on page 39.

The usual reduction in total commitments is particularly in sight this season, due to the trend in Hollywood toward longer and costlier productions, and to the marked move away from "B" pictures.

EXHIBITORS LOOKING UP, SAYS SKOURAS

Spyros Skouras, operating head of National Theatres, who returned to New York from the coast this week after a five week survey and conferences with division managers, reports that a definite feeling of optimism is prevalent in the theatre business.

Mr. Skouras also said that from the information he obtained while conferring with production heads on the coast the major studios are planning to deliver about the same number of pictures next season as in the current season. He said that from all reports exhibitors may expect "a fine crop of pictures" in the next few months.

vorably with last year, advance release dates pegged at this time are at a four-year low, as witness:

Distributor	Future Release Dates Set Beyond Mar., 1940	Mar., 1939	Mar., 1938	Mar., 1937
(Westerns are included in all instances)
Columbia	2	7	9	4
MGM	4	13	6	11
Monogram	5	10	5	—
Paramount	13	15	8	3
Republic	—	3	6	9
RKO	9	6	8	8
Fox	7	8	4	22
UA	3	2	3	3
Universal	8	7	4	7
Warners	2	2	9	10
Totals	53	73	62	77

While the "Wind" and other big-picture holdovers and moveovers have had no real effect on a normal flow of releases, it would seem from the foregoing that there might be a slowing down of releases in the next few weeks, with 20 fewer advance dates set at this time than in the first week of March, 1939, nine fewer than in 1938; 24 fewer than in 1937.

Advance releases set by Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox, United Artists, Universal and Warners stand at this time at about the same as last year, differing only by one or two either way. Columbia, however, has five fewer advance dates set, MGM has nine fewer, Monogram, five, Republic, three.

Warner Brothers' and Fox's policy of keeping well-stocked vaults of advance negatives places those distributors far ahead of all others in this connection, with only six pictures each to go in filming, of 48 promised by Warners and 52 by Fox.

Paramount has only ten to finish, of 58; but Monogram has 20 to go, of 46; Universal, 20 out of 58; RKO, 24 out of 58; Columbia, 26 out of 58; and Republic, 30 out of 50.

With 34 productions completed, and from 44 to 52 promised on its usual elastic commitment, MGM has from 10 to 18 to complete, and United Artists, the only other company with an elastic schedule, has between 10 and 14 to film of the 28 to 32 promised. Westerns are included in all instances.

Following is a studio-by-studio guide for exhibitors to the identities of material and talent of 75 features completed and "in the can," and 34 additional pictures now shooting, all for delivery between now and the remainder of the season, on 1939-40 commitments:

$16,000 is Bid For Films of Grand National

Various independent distributors and others interested have bid up to $16,000 for Grand National Pictures' films, it was learned at a hearing, in Federal Court, New York, on Monday, before Referee Peter B. Olney, under whom liquidation proceeds, in obsequy.

At the hearing, Referee Olney deferred action until March 27th. At that time, he said, written inventories of the defunct company's assets will be distributed. More bids are then expected. He ordered Joseph Dannenberg, for the trustee, to confer with people of experience in the motion picture industry, so that an accurate presentation of the assets of the company could be made, and an "intelligent" bid submitted.

Dino Rossini, Far Eastern film distributor, made the highest bid, on Monday. Nat Saland's bid was next highest; he offered $15,000 outright, or $10,000 and 30 per cent of the first $100,000 received on the films, plus 50 per cent of the money in excess of this amount.

Educational Protests

Educational Film Studios protested the listing of 44 short subjects, made in 1932, as assets. The company asserted ownership of these. Mr. Dannenberg agreed to elide the shorts from the list, until a conference to determine ownership, set for March 23.

George Blake, acting for a bidder, declared that existence of certain contracts listed as assets should be proved, before making of bids. Mr. Dannenberg was told to produce the contracts.

C. J. Tevlin, vice-president of Astor Pictures Corporation claimed existence of more liens than noted, charged that 140 negatives were missing, and that certain other information was unreliable.

On Tuesday, Referee John E. Joyce appointed James E. Davidson, the present receiver, trustee for Educational. He also disallowed, temporarily, a claim of $964,000 filed by Harry Fromberg, Grand National trustee.

The referee, meanwhile, was studying the GN claim, based on a charge that Educational had violated a contract with GN, under which it had purchased 1,100,000 shares of that company's stock, in return for the transfer of Educational's assets.

Mr. Fromberg asserted that the actual Edusational assets given to GN totalled only $46,000 in value. His claim of $964,000 represents the alleged difference between the nominal value of the stock and the value of the Educational assets turned over to GN.

Mr. Fromberg last Thursday nominated Sidney Abrams for trustee. Other creditors, Electrical Research Products, Inc., Lloyd Wright, and the law firm of Snider, Duke, and Landis, nominated Mr. Davidson. The claims of the above group total $450,000.

They also asked for an order disqualifying GN's claim.

On the same day, last Thursday, there was a GN hearing, with Mr. Dannenberg, for the GN trustee, examining George Blake, Edmund V. Halley, Sidney Abrams, and Harold Saxe, former comptroller of the company.

Attack Asset List

The list of assets submitted by the GN attorney to Referee Olney at Monday's hearing, the list which was attacked as incomplete, was ordered by the Referee last Monday, after prospective bidders asserted that they had been unable to find data upon which to bid.

In Hollywood, last Thursday, bids totalling approximately $50,000 were received, at the close of the auction sale of Grand National's equipment. Electrical equipment brought offers of $20,000; cameras, $13,000. MGM was chief bidder for both these categories. Republic offered $7,200 for trucks. Furniture and stockroom material brought about $10,000 in offers.

Among the bidders, besides those mentioned were RKO, Monogram, and Globe Productions, James Roosevelt's new producing company.

Meanwhile, one company is using the space formerly occupied by a Grand National exchange. The Pittsburgh Republic exchange has leased the former GN quarters in that city, for inspection, shipping, and storage departments.

Mexicans Hope For Union's Aid

by JAMES LOCKHART
in Mexico City

Great aid for Mexican pictures in several Spanish-American countries is counted upon by the national cinematographic workers' union as a result of the establishment of relations with their colleagues in those lands.

Mexican producer-distributors have now become the mark for demands for higher pay and other costly concessions to labor, which seemingly has become convinced that it has got about all it can from American distributors. These demands are very much in the hair of the domestic industry, so much so that three of the most important producer-distributors threaten closure.

The federal government has been asked to act.

Mexico's first sound studios, La Nacional in Mexico City, which has been running for nine years, has been condemned by the municipal government because it is on land required for the establishment of a new boulevard. The owners have been compensated.

Mexican producer-directors have streamlined production. Raul de Anda made a record in finishing "El Charro Negro" (The Black Cowboy"), 325 scenes and 30,000 feet, in 11 consecutive working days.

Production has started in Mexico City on Tito Guizar's second made-in-Mexico feature, "Alla en el Tropico" ("Down in the Tropics"). Fernando de Fuentes, who made "Alla en el Rancho Grande" ("Way Down on the Rancho Grande"), biggest of all Mexican films, is the producer-director.

Miguel Zacarias completed in Mexico City a talking short enacted by leading players who donated their services, in propaganda for the national census which starts this week. The picture was made in Chapultepec Castle, historic residence of the presidents of Mexico.

Standard Oil of New Jersey, with its highly competent broadcast of the Louis-Godoy argument, which delighted numerous Mexican fistic fans, irked the federation of workers and farmers so much that it asked the federal government to forbid other radio broadcasts by this company. The federation contends that the Standard, whose Mexican subsidiaries were expropriated, is an arch enemy of Mexico's government. The federation objects principally to publicity for Standard products that was woven into the fight picture.

Highlights of Mexican history, presented by a selected company of Mexican professionals, is featuring the Theatre of the Air which the federal government is presenting semi-weekly from its radio stations, XEDP and XEXA, Mexico City.

20th-Fox Budget Is 30 Millions; Universal Turns to 1940-41 Plans

With virtually every studio in Hollywood now in the last stages of filming for 1939-40, as reported starting on page 12, several are turning to the new season, Twentieth Century-Fox and Warners last week giving first attention to sales conventions and programs, and Fox this week deciding on a $30,000,000 budget for 52 features and 52 shorts.

Twentieth Century-Fox Spending More

Herman Wobber, general sales manager of Twentieth Century-Fox, told a district managers' conference in New York Friday that the company is spending much more than for the same number of pictures this season. Three or four are to be in color.

The sales convention will start April 15th in Chicago.

"Grapes of Wrath" this week is playing in about 300 theatres, on single bills, Mr. Wobber said.

Improved Canadian business was reported by James O'Loghlin.

RKO Production Plans

RKO production developments include the designation of Lee Marcus to handle six important films on the 1940-41 schedule, the signing of James Hilton, author, to write the script for "Water Gipsies"; the purchase of "Wrapped in Cellophane" from Vina Delmar, "Sanda Mala" from Maurice Collis, "Two On An Island," Elmer Rice's current comedy on Broadway, and "The Unbreakable Doll," by Grace Perkins. Carole Lombard is to star in this.

The company last week acquired an associate interest in Mayflower Pictures Corporation, Ltd., of which Erich Pommer and Charles Laughton are chief owners.

Warners Setting Spring Plans

Hal Wallis, Warner Brothers production executive, conferred with Jack L. Warner, at the studios, to set the company's spring program.

Warner Brothers will expand its provincial branch offices in England, at Manchester, first, Leeds, Newcastle, Liverpool and Birmingham.

Joseph S. Hummel, general foreign sales manager, returned from a four-month survey of Latin America, with the observation that companies have little prospect of a business increase there because of war stringencies and allotment of more playing time to native product.

Warners, he said, has no plans to produce or distribute Latin-American films. Whether the company will build theatres in Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires depends, he said, on whether the company obtains adequate distribution.

UA Expects 28 to 30 Films

The 11 producers on United Artists' expanding list will make from 28 to 40 pictures for 1940-41, Lynn Farnol, director of advertising and publicity, said after a visit to the coast.

Mr. Farnol said the producers and partners of the company believed that pictures should be bigger, to offet the losses in the European market.

Fox West Winners

Charles Thall of the San Francisco metropolitan district; Richard Dickson, southern district division manager and Nick Turner, northern division district manager for Fox West Coast Theatres have received the awards in the circuit's new business drive. Herman Kerster and George Watters tied for first in the exploitation contest.

$20,000 for Two-Year Film Music Research

The Rockefeller Foundation has made a grant of $20,000 for a two years' study in music in film production to the New School for Social Research. The study, said to be the first of its kind, will be conducted under the direction of Professor Hanns Eisler, German composer, with the cooperation of the Radio Corporation of America and members of the Philharmonic Orchestra. Among the subjects for study will be to examine the possibilities of new musical forms and materials of instrumentation, the relation between music and dialogue, use of song and chorus, sounds and noises and other problems of orchestration and dramaturgy.

Hanns Eisler will compose each year a sequence of from 40 to 50 minutes in length applying the new principles as they are worked out to existing pictures of outstanding artistic quality. Documentary, cartoon and feature films will be treated. The new scores will be recorded by RCA and the final report will be published.

New Fair Theatre

In line with the 1940 New York World's Fair policy of emphasizing entertainment, the Ford Motor Company announced this week that a new theatre was under construction at its exhibit at the Fair for varied shows to be presented daily without charge.

DISTRIBUTORS TURN DOWN OWNERS' REQUESTS FOR TRADE PRACTICE TALKS

Attorneys Fear More Suits from Concerted Action; Allied and Myers Say They're Ready to Reopen Arbitration

The settling of trade practice matters in dispute in distribution-exhibition by arbitration or conciliation boards emerged abruptly this week from a year's sleep to become again the subject of wide, if not promising, discussion, with all the overtures coming from exhibition, and negative receptions from distribution.

Already enmeshed in a net of anti-trust prosecutions woven by the United States Government, and independent exhibitors, the distributors are reluctant to participate in any new proposals for a new industry-wide system, fearful, on the advice of counsel, that their concerted action on such a matter would bring fresh governmental anti-trust attacks, remembering, too, that Thurman Arnold, of the Department of Justice, last year flatly rejected the trade practice code which the distributors and exhibitors had devised, the rejection being made by Mr. Arnold on grounds of its illegality.

Openly Petition Distributors

Apparently motivated by a continuing lack of relief from certain practices, and with court prosecutions and "relief" legislation moving slowly, important exhibitor groups on both sides now are openly petitioning distributors to reopen discussions from which some kind of arbitration or conciliation machinery might evolve.

Last week, the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, on the eve of its annual convention at Columbus, petitioned the large companies to participate in "across the board" discussions, with the thought that the many trade problems confronting the independent exhibitor might be adjusted or finally clarified. The majors rejected the proposal.

Abram Myers, chairman and general counsel of Allied States Association, told the large companies from the Ohio ITO convention floor that his national organization stands ready to renew negotiations on arbitration. The week before, acting on resolutions formulated at its national directors' meeting at Washington, Allied sent to each major a formal notification of its desire for arbitration.

While the nature of the distributors' replies to Allied, if any, were not disclosed, some majors in New York said unofficially that there was little likelihood of renewing negotiations, due to the anti-trust possibilities already mentioned, among others, including the preoccupation of virtually their entire legal staffs in the preparation for trial of the Government's "key" New York anti-trust case, May 1st.

Tuesday night, a bulletin sent out from headquarters of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, in New York, over the signature of Edward L. Kuykendall, president, pointed up the importance at this time of establishing some system of adjudication.

As if climaxing these proposals by different sides in organized exhibition, for establishing arbitration or conciliation boards, word came last week from Canada that two "test" conciliation boards, in Ontario and Nova Scotia, had proved successful, and that the 14-year-old arbitration boards operating in Canada through the Canadian Film Boards of Trade, had disposed of 4,363 cases.

ALLIED GROUP HITS "MISREPRESENTATIONS"

Northwest Allied Theatre Owners' Association, convened in Minneapolis in a two-day special session, Tuesday and Wednesday, charged major producers and distributors with carrying on a campaign of misrepresentation in their dealings with independent exhibitors.

Statements attributed to distributors that cancellation privileges up to 20 per cent were being permitted were described by speakers as untrue. They claimed reports of member exhibitors showed such privileges were not being granted.

Statements, also attributed to the distributors, that independent exhibitors were not being forced to purchase newsreels and short subjects as a condition for obtaining features were also assailed as not founded in fact.

The association also reiterated its support of the Neely Bill, and urged individual members to continue efforts in its behalf.

Attending the meeting were 150 independents from Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Wisconsin.

For the first time in 25 years, W. A. Steffes, president, did not preside at a meeting of the organization. Mr. Steffes is ill in Washington, D. C. Ben Ashe of Minneapolis, association secretary, presided in his absence.

Majors Reject Request For Trade Practice Talks

With the thought that the various problems of distribution and exhibition confronting independent exhibitors could be discussed "across the board" with a view to final clarification or adjustment, P. J. Wood, secretary of the Independent Theater Owners of America, sent invitations to, and received regrets from, key executives of the major distributing companies. Included in the request to participate were: Abe Montague, Columbia; William F. Rodgers, MGM; James R. Grainger, Republic; Edward Golden, Monogram; George Schaefer and Ned Depinet, RKO; Sidney Kent and Herman Wobber, Twentieth Century-Fox; Neil Agnew, Paramount, and William A. Scully and Nate Blumberg, Universal.

Ohio Senator Robert A. Taft, and Governor Bricker, of Ohio, also were asked to be present. The former was detained by official business, and Governor Bricker was absent on a speaking engagement. "A very special invitation" also was extended to James Roosevelt, who was unable to accept.

One of the convention highlights was a report on a questionnaire sent to the majors to determine where they stood on cancellations, forcing of shorts or newsreels with features, and on score charges. Replies stated that score charges and forcing of shorts are out, that cancellations generally ran from 10 to 20 per cent. (The replies, company-by-company, were detailed in last week's first report on the Ohio ITO's convention, in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, pages 12 and 13.) Also reported was the address made by H. M. Richey, exhibitor contact for RKO, who declared that attacks on the industry are costing box offices $15,000,000 annually.

Many Problems Aired

During an open forum at the convention many problems were aired and some of the legal aspects ruled upon by Abram S. Myers, general Allied counsel. The discussion brought to light several alleged inequities in the distributor ranks, claimed to be contrary to the definitely expressed sales policies, which were outlined by the major producing companies in answer to the questionnaire circulated by Mr. Wood prior to the convention.

Despite the majors' statement that score charges had been eliminated, certain exhibitors claimed they were paying these charges on their 1939-40 contracts for percentage pictures, without a guarantee. Others pointed out that the score charges were "buried" in the price for flat rentals, that the score charges had been added, resulting in a higher rental accordingly.

It was pointed out that producers and distributors were forcing shorts and news reels, regardless of their written statements to the contrary. Shorts and newsreels were being forced, either separately or added to feature contracts, it was claimed.

Mrs. Hoy Russell, who operates the Opera House, the only theatre in Millersburg, Ohio, stated that her theatre has not played newsreels, and MGM and Paramount had sold their feature products without newsreels for more than three years. However, Twentieth Century-Fox recently refused to do this, and sold their product away from Millersburg to a competitive situation because of refusal to buy the newsreels. A resolution was made to communicate with the distributors, calling attention to their failure to adhere to their stipulated policies.

During the open forum, exhibitors brought out that Twentieth Century-Fox had sold "Grapes of Wrath" away from them when they refused to agree to extra playing time for the feature.

Double Feature Problem

The problem of double features came in for considerable discussion. The consensus was opposed to duals, but the delegates contended that they were literally forced into this policy by affiliated theatres pursuing duals in their houses, which left no alternative for the smaller independents.

The question also was asked how a percentage payment could be computed when a 35 per cent picture was played on a double bill with a flat rental picture. Abram Myers pointed out that the percentage was figured on the program as a whole, there being no method of determining how much of the business had resulted from the percentage picture. Certain exhibitors felt, however, that this could be equitably pro-rated since the flat rental picture, possibly being the weaker of the two, would have resulted in proportionately less business if played separately, basing their statement on past experience.

Earnings of the industry as a whole do not warrant an increase in current film rentals, said Mr. Myers. He reiterated that while Allied is ready to renew negotiations on arbitration of trade disputes, all grievances must be included and not only a few. He expressed the hope that the distributors would be willing to discuss such problems with Allied.

"Unreasonable clearance, arbitrary allocation of pictures, overbuying, oppressive exercise of chain buying power, withholding of product—all these call for amicable adjustment within the industry, now," Mr. Myers asserted. "The larger issues may not be finally settled for a number of years. In the meantime, Rome is burning."

Attacks "Slot Machine" Films

Martin H. Smith, president, of Toledo, dwelt at length on the potential menace from the reported tieup between James Roosevelt, of Globe Productions, with the Mills Novelty Company, to "dispense" pictures through nickel-in-the-slot machines.

"There are approximately 18,000 places licensed to sell beer and liquor, not to mention similar commercial and recreational rendezvous, numbering into hundreds of thousands in the total figures, which are fertile avenues of installation and operation of these machines. It does not require a great stretch of the imagination to visualize the disastrous results that could accrue to the theatre from this avenue of competition."

Charles L. Casanave, general manager National Screen's newly formed unit, Advertising Accessories, Inc., outlined the purpose and policies of his organization.

"We are," he said, "authorized poster renters, and, instead of increasing prices, we hope to reduce them. Producers are in the business of making pictures, not creating and distributing advertising. That's where we come into the picture as a distinct help to the theatre man. Our representatives, under a national policy, are authorized to write a five-year contract with a guarantee against higher prices for the term."

Rentals and Sales Taxes

Darrell Greek, of the law firm of Dargusch and Greek, representing the Ohio independent unit in the mandamus proceedings of John V. Bostwick, a taxpayer, against the State Tax Commission, challenging the authority of that body to exempt film rentals from sales tax, pointed out the danger confronting the industry if plaintiff should win the suit.

He explained that, since plaintiff was trying to enforce collection of the tax since the inception of the law five years ago, the accumulated liability to date was considerably over $2,000,000, and said an exhibitor paying only $100 weekly film rental has a potential liability of $1,000.

Max A. Rosenberg, president of the Independent Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia, presented a resume of activities in his area.

Officers reelected were: Martin G. Smith, Toledo, president; F. W. Huss, Jr., Cincinnati, and Robert C. Menches, Akron, vice presidents. Hoy Simons, Washington Court House, was elected treasurer, succeeding M. B. Horwitz, Cleveland, who resigned last year. Directors reelected were: Henry Greenberger and John D. Kalafat, Cleveland; Nat B. Charnas, Toledo; Harild Bernstein, Norwood; Max Stearn, Columbus; Caldwell H. Brown, Zanesville; L. F. Eick, Martins Ferry; Dwight Jones, Jackson; J. W. Trunk, Youngstown; Joseph Stern, Ironton and Jerome M. Steel, Oberlin. Charles Deckman, Cleveland, was elected a director to succeed Mr. Horwitz, and Leo Kissel, Lancaster, to succeed J. Real Neth, Columbus, who was forced to resign on account of ill health. P. J. Wood will be reappointed secretary by the board of directors.

Members were requested to send telegrams of good wishes to W. A. Steffes, ill in a hospital in Washington, D. C., and John A. Schwalm, in a Miami clinic because of a heart attack. It is expected that Mr. Steffes will be able to leave the hospital the end of next week.

NON-THEATRICALS UP IN PENNSYLVANIA

A continual rise in the number of non-theatrical showings of sound films, both commercial and otherwise, has been noted in Pennsylvania. Churches, civic organizations and schools show films at meetings and special student activity programs.

A check of newspapers in Wilkes-Barre and nearby Hazleton reveal the following: A chapter of the Officers Reserve Corps meeting featuring three films on army subjects; a booking of "See America First" by a Lutheran church organization; high schools listing programs of various film dramas, including "Clarence," "The Buccaneer" and others; a Rotary Club showing "Flagships of the Air" at a meeting; travel pictures by the Civic Forum Club, and other showings by the YMCA, Delta-Cooperative Farms of Mississippi and others.

MPTOA Turns Again To Conciliation

Trade practices and problems again were brought out for an airing this week, along with the necessity for some form of machinery of adjudication, by the MPTOA, in a bulletin from New York headquarters, signed by Ed L. Kuykendall, president.

The Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Exhibitors Mr. Kuykendall cited "as an experiment in organized local conciliation," advising all local exhibitor organizations to watch these experiments closely.

"Mediation and conciliation do not require binding agreements, balanced boards to render arbitrary decisions, nor strong-arm enforcement," he remarked.

It was suggested that many trade practice reforms can be dealt with in the distribution contract, with no question of anti-trust law violation, and that contracts should include a 20 per cent cancellation clause; a cancellation clause for locally offensive pictures; an option to change percentage pictures designated for preferred playdates; a provision that no score charge be added to film rental; a note that prices for each picture be fixed by the distributor not later than the date of availability; and a provision for the rejection of pictures on selective contracts within 21 days after notice of availability.

The statement calls "aggressive promotion by 16 mm. salesmen, of the exhibition of 16 mm. sound films . . . a serious menace to an increasing number of small theatres," and suggest "vigorous" complaints with each distributor whose picture is used in 16 mm. version; calls the Neely Bill, now in Congress, "imminent" and remarks that the pressure for it is "being increased"; calls the Bill a "fake" and urges that its exposure as such be pressed among other than industry group because "it is out of the hands of the people of the industry"; suggests that "if there must be a 'block booking law,' it might be in the form of a simple statute" for cancellation of "one picture out of each group of five in the order of release, without liability"; calls the "Pot o' Gold" radio giveaways an indication of a "dangerous trend towards the use of money prizes by radio advertisers as a direct inducement to keep people away from theatres," and suggests ignoring the program.

Canadian Conciliation Boards Claim Success

The Canadian motion picture industry's report on the operation of local conciliation boards in the provinces of Ontario and Nova Scotia holds peculiar interest to the American film industry.

The conciliation boards in Canada are a part of the trade practice code there.

At the recent convention in Washington of directors of the Allied States Association, arbitration machinery again was urged upon the industry, but without response from the majors, from whom it was indicated that any untoward and voluntary steps might be construed, in the present situation, as illegal.

The Canadian report on operation of the conciliation boards emphasizes their success, and suggests they are "no longer an experiment."

The Canadian method was taken from that of the MPTOA and was given first trial with the establishment of a local board in Toronto, on May, 1938, for grievances of all Ontario exhibitors. A second, Nova Scotia, board was instituted in Halifax, in April, 1939.

The first report on the two boards' activities covers 30 cases; all except one were disposed of by the boards.

The boards' conciliators are drawn from panels nominated by local exhibitors' organizations and Film Boards of Trade (distributors). Two representatives of each serve in rotation for specified terms. The decisions are not enforceable.

Among the complaints handled are overbuying, inability to obtain product, unfair clearance, "cut-throat" competition in the form of "leaders" and inducements.

Of the Toronto cases, the only one not settled was the two-for-one complaint of the Paramount Famous Players-Canadian theatre against the Royal George, Toronto.

In another case, that of the Circle and Beverly theatres, on a priority complaint, no decision could be made, because the priority was in the contract. That of the Ioala against United Artists, on a contract run, had to be referred to arbitration, because it, too, involved a contract.

All cases handled by the Halifax board resulted in settlements.

All the cases settled involved concessions by one or the other parties; in such matters as reduction of clearance, giving up of some product to the opposition, and raising of admission prices.

Good-Will Rally Set

The second annual industry "Good-Will Get-Together" of main line exhibitors and film sales representatives will be held April 3rd at the Penn Alto Hotel in Altoona, Pa. The committee in charge of the affair consists of F. D. "Dinty" Moore, George Elmo, George Tice and Jack Judd. Burt Bishop will be master of ceremonies.

See Hollywood First, Biased Censors Told

Studios Holding to Standards, Says Pennsylvania Chairman

by M. H. ORODENKER
in Philadelphia

"There would be a more intelligent and efficient censorship of motion pictures if the censor heads in the respective states would take time out for a personal visit to Hollywood and get first-hand observation of what the industry is trying to do." This is the opinion of Mrs. Edna R. Carroll, chairman of the Pennsylvania State Board of Motion Picture Censors, who returned to Philadelphia this week after a three-week stay at the film capital.

For Educating Censors

Despite the fact that most censors are individuals with deep-rooted educational and teaching backgrounds, a visit to Hollywood for a personal contact with the picture industry is "the best form of education for them, or for censors who are business men or women," she said.

"Like everyone engaged in film censorship, I had preconceived notions of the industry and suggestions as to how it should be run. But after visiting the studios and seeing for myself what their problems are and how they are earnestly endeavoring to solve them to make for better pictures and a better industry, I have no doubts now that the industry is making a serious effort to understand the problems of state censors and conforming to the standards desired by the general public.

"My trip gave me a new and fresh slant on the industry. And it was certainly encouraging to hear from the man responsible for censorship on every lot there that they are as much interested in our problems of censorship as we are in their problems. The existence of such a mutual understanding comes about only by personal contact and it is both a good thing and a healthy thing for the industry.

States' Particular Problems

"Each state has its own particular censorship problems and a responsible executive at each studio should be made aware of those things. For instance, here in Pennsylvania, which once had the reputation of being the 'worst' as far as the censorship of pictures is concerned, is now being given credit for having 'an intelligent point of view.' I was glad to see that manifestation of interest on the part of the studios, and I am certain that it would go far in creating a better understanding with the censor boards in the other states if personal visits were made to Hollywood."

From the beginning, Mrs. Carroll had been against the Neely Bill to bar block booking. After personal observations, her opposition to the bill is now even deeper and keener, so much so that she plans to take to the speaker's platform before the women's clubs throughout the state to propound her arguments against the bill.

"I have found that there is a genuine desire on part of the industry to handle its own affairs, and I am now convinced more than ever that it would be an ill-advised day if the Neely Bill ever got on the statute books.

"One thing that impressed me greatly was the fact that motion pictures is an industry of youth. The executives I met at each of the major studios were all young men responsible for investments that total millions of dollars. I have found them all to be liberal and imaginative. And whatever faults they may have, I am firmly convinced that governmental restriction is not the corrective measure.

"I am convinced that whatever good may be derived from the Neely Bill, although I cannot see how such a measure could ever be applied without calling a halt to the entire industry, the bad features of the bill considerably overweigh the good it contains.

"I have spoken to countless number of exhibitors and I am sympathetic to their problems and complaints. Of course, there is much that must be done to meet these situations, but I hardly think the Neely Bill will ever do that. It is my earnest conviction that if the bill should pass, the exhibitors would be the first to raise up a howl that it be wiped off the statute books. And from our practical experience with the prohibition amendment, we know that once it became law, we would have to spend almost a lifetime to effect its repeal.

Closer Harmony Urged

"If there were closer harmony and organization of exhibitors, I am quite sure that they themselves, by their economic force, could achieve for themselves what they think the Neely Bill will give them without subjecting the industry to governmental shackles. I think it unfair that many exhibitors are deluding the womens clubs, who are earnestly interested in improving the industry as a matter of civic pride, and getting their support by leading them to believe that 'block booking,' which the bill would eliminate, is the cure-all. I aim to go before the women's groups and speak to them to correct false interpretations."

As for manifestations of Communism and all other anti-isms, as charged by the Dies committee against the motion picture industry, Mrs. Carroll found none.

"Seeing the machinery of motion picture making, I cannot see how a few people who may have anti-leanings can get their ideas across in pictures. I think it would be a good thing for the industry if the Dies committee would go through with its proposed investigation. From what I have seen and heard during my stay there, I don't think they will find anything."

Behind the Scenes

While the publicity giants in Hollywood have done a tremendous job in creating a greater box-office value for the stars, Mrs. Carroll feels that Hollywood is falling down in its job to publicize the people off stage.

"Another thing that amazed me is the number of jobs that go into the making of a motion picture. The publicists scream in big headlines about a 'million dollar production' and after the picture is exhibited, there arises a cry in various sections of the country about the 'big waste' in Hollywood. You cannot blame the public for harboring such a false impression. Instead of 'waste,' if the publicity gentlemen would make the public aware of the number of jobs that went into a 'million dollar production,' I feel certain that there would be a deeper appreciation for both the picture and the picture industry.

"Instead of 'yes men,' I found 'workers' on every lot. And what appears to be 'confusion' has behind it all good business sense and acumen."

Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, of New York, would find no sympathetic support from Mrs. Carroll in his plea to bring the industry East.

"I think," she said, "it would be a lot cheaper to import LaGuardia."

City Loses Censor Case in Virginia

The supreme court of appeals of Virginia this week held that a city has no right to censor a picture after it has been approved by the State Board of Censorship. The case was that in which the city of Lynchburg was appealing from a decree of the corporation court of Lynchburg in favor of Dominion Theatres, Inc., operators of theatres in Lynchburg, who booked "The Birth of a Baby" to be shown there.

The City Manager of Lynchburg had notified the company that the picture could not be publicly shown because it violated certain city ordinances which prohibited the showing of indecent and obscene pictures. Dominion sought an injunction to restrain the city from interfering with the showing of the picture.

"The statutes," the court said, "vest that power exclusively in the division and provide a uniform means for the inspection of films and the issuance of permits for their exhibition. There is no language in the statutes which authorizes the city of Lynchburg to share this jurisdiction."

Other Censorship

Ohio censors ordered 30 eliminations from a total of 459 reels reviewed in February, compared with 51 eliminations from 644 reels in January. Figures for February, 1939, were 525 reels and 13 eliminations.

Lieutenant Harry M. Costello, police censor of Chicago, reports that 126 films were inspected in January. The total footage was 642,000 feet. Twenty-three cuts were made and six pictures were marked for adult trade only. No film was rejected in its entirety in January.

Mrs. Claudia Williams, police matron of Birmingham, Ala., has recommended that the film, "Nudist Colony," be banned in Birmingham. She reviewed the film for the police department.

The Seattle city council license committee, headed by Councilman Robert H. Harlin, has requested the city's corporation counsel to draw an ordinance revoking the license of the Rialto theatre. The request followed a report of the Board of Theatre Censors, charging that the stage shows at the Rialto were "lewd, indecent and immoral." The theatre was closed on one former occasion for the same reasons.

Lieutenant Costello in Chicago this week rejected "The Living Dead," described as a "smuggled German film."

The Lieutenant, also this week, arrested Boles Patzkoski, independent exhibitor for the showing of a 16 mm. film, "The Invasion of Poland by Hitler." The performance, under the sponsorship of the Polish-American Citizens' League, was given without a police film permit.

TELEVISION ACTS TO COMMERCIALIZE, ON APPROVAL OF THE GOVERNMENT

Commission Refuses to Set Standards and "Freeze the Art"; Theatremen See Competition in Fall

The Federal Communications Commission has granted to television a limited commercial basis, beginning September 1st. At the same time the Government body, in its decision announced Friday, refused to set standards and "freeze the art" at its present state of scientific development.

Sees Serious Competition

Some theatre men believe that television will begin to be serious competition in the fall when it will have sponsors like radio and will be seeking a share of the advertiser's dollar. The only limitation on television commercial programs after September is that only the actual cost may be charged and the stations will not be allowed to make a profit.

Several companies have announced they will have large screen television available for theatres some time this year. In some cases television may be an added attraction in theatres but at present motion picture interests are viewing television as severe competition.

The decision of the FCC on television partly satisfies the Radio Corporation—National Broadcasting Company interests and the smaller groups led by DuMont, in which Paramount has an interest. RCA-NBC wanted limited commercialization and fixed television standards. DuMont, Philco and other companies opposed establishing standards at this time. RCA plans a big drive on television sales and Zenith and Don Lee see in the order an opportunity for expanding television service. Meanwhile NBC's television station in New York presented the first current Broadway play and announced other outstanding "coming attractions."

Sums Up Engineers' Studies

Receiver manufacturers seeking to fix standards for television were told by the FCC that their action was premature and that the time has not been reached when radio picture equipment can be tied down. At the same time, however, the commission held that the point has been reached when television stations should experiment in the financial field, and a decision was announced that limited commercialization will be permitted beginning September 1st, next.

The orders of the commission came as a leap-day present to the industry in the form of a report summing up the studies of FCC engineers, the testimony adduced at hearings held in January and the results of visits of the commissioners to a number of television laboratories last month.

The report announced that, with some revision, the recommendations of the FCC television committee, made last November, would be adopted. However, it was stated, no changes would be made in the frequencies allocated the service until after the hearings this month on aural broadcasting on frequencies above 25,000 kilocycles. Frequency modulation (FM) broadcasters have requested more space.

For Class II Stations

Under the commission's plan for limited commercialization, certain stations will be permitted to use advertising in connection with programs the cost of which is borne by sponsors. These will be the socalled Class II stations, which are to experiment in program production and technique; Class I stations will carry forward technical investigations and will not be allowed to broadcast sponsored programs.

TELEVISION PROGRAM QUALITY IMPROVED

One expected effect of the FCC order opening the way for sponsored programs beginning September 1st will be the presentation of better television programs. Through the winter months the quality of the programs, with the exception of films which the large companies refuse to lease to television, have gradually improved. The weekly play is a popular feature. Experimental work in presenting sports events has expanded to include prize fights, hockey, basketball, track meets and field hockey.

NBC will strive to improve further television program quality, according to observers, so that the public may be encouraged to buy receiving sets. The company hopes to build up the television audience through good programs so that when advertisers may sponsor programs the television public will be large enough to warrant the expense.

The greater part of the commission's report was on the technical development of the art and, in refusing to accept any standards of engineering performance, it was held that "research should not halt and scientific methods should not be frozen in the present state of the art."

"Actual demonstration to members of the commission indicate the need for further improvement in the technical quality of television," it was observed. "The evidence before the commission reveals a substantial possibility that the art may be on the threshold of significant advances."

The commission pointed out that research is now being conducted which involves changes in both the number of lines and number of frames per second, in developing the retentive quality of screens, improving the mechanics of scanning and methods of propagation and reception, and in the use of screens of various sizes.

Other Studies

Other studies underway cover polarization and the related question of antennas, synchronization and the use of higher frequencies.

To adopt standards under these conditions, the report pointed out, would have a tendency to stimulate activity on the part of both manufacturers and the public in the sale and purchase of receivers for home use, with the certainty that this commercial activity would cause an abatement of research and "to a greater or less extent the art would tend to be frozen at that point."

More important, it was held, nothing should be done to encourage a large public investment in receivers which might become obsolete in a relatively short time.

"The commission has not overlooked the significant sums invested by pioneers in making possible our present knowledge of television, and it is not unsympathetic with their desire to recoup their investment in the process of bringing television's benefits to the public," the report commented. "It will be realized, however, that the loss to the public by premature purchase in a rapidly advancing field might in a relatively short period exceed many times the present total cost of research. Such an economic loss in the long run can rebound only to the harm of the industry."

Advises Industry

Not only did the commission refuse to adopt standards, but it urged that the industry itself refrain from such an attempt at this time because of the danger of raising the same problems which would develop under official standardization, but it was promised that such standards would be set as soon as the art is felt to be in a position where they would help rather than hinder.

"It is important that nothing said by the commission herein be construed as an expression of lack of confidence in the future of television," the report emphasized. "It is a mighty achievement. The pioneers in the field have made great advances. We feel that potentially television is of tremendous value to the public generally. Even now, there is no reason apparent why those members of the public to whom regular television programs are available, who are conscious of the fluid state of the art, and who are willing to assume the financial risks involved for the obvious benefits of current programs, should not acquire receivers.

"Nor is it suggested that television broadcasters should be barred from going forward in program production and sponsorship. The progress made by the industry is worthy of recognition, and the present state of the art renders appropriate the further steps permitted by the rules being established."

DuMont Approves FCC Order

Allen B. DuMont, head of Allen B. DuMont Laboratories of Passaic, N. J., said that "the commission has made it possible for receivers to be designed and sold which will be sufficiently flexible to be used 20 and 30 years from now, rather than becoming obsolete." He pointed out that the DuMont receiver can be adjusted to receive 441, 625 or 881 line pictures.

The FCC order also "made possible the adaptation of television to the uses of the theatre and all other arts where instantaneous pictures will be valuable," according to Mr. DuMont. It was also indicated that the commission's refusal to fix standards would be an impetus to investigation of methods of using frequency channels in such a way that overcrowding will be eliminated.

Another executive of the DuMont television company said, "It is a fine thing for television not to have any standards established until the art is more fully defined and until commercialization is possible."

Zenith Sees Expansion

The Zenith Radio Corporation, which operates the television station W9XZV in Chicago, hailed the decision of the FCC as one that would help the development and expansion of the television art. E. F. McDonald, Jr., speaking for the corporation, said, "The Federal Communications Commission report and revision of the regulations on television represent a fair and far-sighted analysis of existing conditions and of steps necessary to encourage sound television development in the public interest.

"This action of the Commission assures the completion of essential experiments affecting television standards and also opens the door to broader program development. Both these factors will benefit the art this year and may attract broader public participation but will not encourage speculative activity that could damage the long range picture. The findings of the commission are so fair to all serious participants in today's controversies that they should receive universal support."

Farnsworth Plans Development

The Farnsworth Radio and Television Corporation is ready to expand its activities as a result of the FCC television order. E. A. Nicholas of the Farnsworth Company said, "Another milestone on the road of television progress is passed as the FCC by its recent action opens the door to commercial television operations with programs sponsored by advertisers. The Farnsworth company is ready to play its part in the new stage which television now enters.

"Our research and engineering facilities have been expanded during the past year and while we are now operating on a broad front in electronics the development of television remains our primary objective. Encouragement by Governmental agencies and recognition of the achievement thus far accomplished naturally give new impetus to our efforts. Our television activities will proceed with increased momentum."

RCA Plans Sales Drive

RCA, although not 100 per cent pleased with the FCC order, is planning to conduct a sales drive preliminary to a campaign to sell advertising next summer for the sponsored programs which may begin September 1st. It was said that all receivers sold can be converted at small expense if the FCC sets standards at variance with the present 441-line pictures used by RCA.

The first step in the sales program is to cut the price of receivers and advertise. There has been almost no attempt to sell television receivers since shortly after regular programs began in New York early last Summer. At present there are said to be 2,000 receivers in the metropolitan area. It is expected that potential sponsors will demand a much larger audience before they will accept television as a medium of advertising.

Experimental Programs

NBC's television station W2XBS has been using a number of experimental advertising programs. In the first eight months of television 67 advertisers sponsored 148 programs. The FCC order gives formal approval to the NBC practice of presenting a limited commercial type program when the sponsor provides the talent. Beginning September 1st program television stations (Class II) will be able to receive payment from sponsors for programs presented by the station.

RCA may also be expected to inaugurate relay television. Briefs submitted by RCA attorneys to the FCC said, "If limited commercialization is permitted, RCA will begin the construction of facilities for the automatic relay of television programs between New York and one or two other cities. If limited commercialization is denied, there will be no support for such an undertaking."

The annual report to the stockholders of the Radio Corporation of America gave considerable space to television. Attention was called to the fact that NBC, using the RCA system, inaugurated regular public television service in the United States on April 30, 1939, and RCA-Victor receivers were put on the market. The report also listed what it called two important developments. These were the RCA television relay system and large screen television "of a size and clarity suitable for theatre presentation."

$688,369 TO MAYER, SEC REPORT SHOWS

Loew's, Inc., paid $688,369 to Louis B. Mayer, vice-president in charge of production, in the fiscal year ended last August 31*st, according to the corporation's report to the Securities and Exchange Commission, which was made public this week at the New York Stock Exchange. It was noted that* $541,119 of the total represented a share of the profits.

When the Treasury Department reported a list of persons who received salaries in 1937, Mr. Mayer topped all with $1,161,753. In the list for 1938, published in January, it was said that a technicality temporarily had kept out all Loew's figures.

The SEC requires information as to the three highest paid employees and all those who share in the profits to the extent of $20,000 or more. Wallace Beery, actor, received $355,000 in the fiscal year, and Hunt Stromberg, producer, $328,818, including a $68,818 *share in the profits. Other profit sharers were Nicholas M. The SEC also reported that Universal paid $196,000 to John Stahl, director, in the fiscal year ended October 28*th last. Other Universal salaries were: Deanna Durbin,* $174,916; Irenne Dunne, $150,000, and Bing Crosby $150,000. The company paid $91,000 to the Standard Capital Company for the services of J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the Universal board.

Universal salaries for 1938 also were missing from the January listing.

Hollywood's W6XAO, operated by Thomas Lee, has adopted a "full speed ahead" program following the announcement of the FCC order for limited commercialization. Officials of the station, which is the only television transmitter West of Kansas City, indicated that they would seek a class II license to allow the station to have sponsored programs.

Harry R. Lubcke, director of television at W6XAO, predicted sometime ago that limited sponsorship must be ultimately expected. Don Lee Broadcasting System which is affiliated with the Mutual System is rushing work on the new television transmitter on Mount Lee, 1,700 feet high. W6XAO officials expressed a desire to "ease into" the new field of sponsored programs in a way that would not disrupt existing advertising forms such as radio.

The FCC order immediately caused a flood of inquiries from agents, actors and others who would like to be in television. Requests were made for details on terms and conditions in the new set-up. The sale of receivers is expected to increase sharply.

Philco Conducts Experiments

The Philco Radio & Television Corporation has been conducting experimental television with a 605-line picture and what is said to be an improved receiver. The Philco company demonstrated to the FCC plug-in television with reception based on vertical wave transmission to permit built-in loop antennas. The "plug-in" receiver is also said to reduce interference.

William H. Grimditch, vice-president in charge of Philco's engineering laboratories, said that "one big problem yet to be solved is better, simpler, stronger and more reliable synchronizing to prevent slippage before television becomes practical." He also said, at the time of the FCC tour and preliminary to publishing the report, that "a gross injustice would be done to the public if present television standards are commercialized and frozen. Television is still in the laboratory."

The decision of the FCC did not set standards but permits limited commercialization. Although Philco began television work back in 1928 up to now the company has made no effort to sell its receiving sets. The Philco stations, W3XE and W3XP, are the only television transmitters serving Philadelphia. At the present the stations transmit about ten hours of television programs a week.

Telecast Broadway Play

NBC's television station in New York, W2XBS, presented last Sunday night the play "When We Are Married" by J. B. Priestley which is running at the Lyceum theatre. The regular cast appeared in the television version of the first current Broadway play to be televised. In England the same play was telecast directly from the stage in 1938.

"When We Are Married" was directed for television by Thomas L. Riley of NBC. The complete play was presented but a number of changes had to be made in the stage business to keep the actors within the scope of the television cameras. With but a few exceptions the compressed action did not interfere with the viewing of the play.

The television production of a play blends the stage and screen techniques. Living players perform for the television audience but the television camera makes use of motion picture methods.

Robert Henderson, director of the play, arranged for the telecast and secured the necessary permission of Actors Equity. Max Gordon had intended to present over television a dress rehearsal of the musical "Very Warm for May" but Equity demanded a full-week's salary for all performers. It was reported that because "When We Are Married" has a small cast working on a minimum salary and co-operative basis, Equity's terms could be met.

Rocky Mountain Construction

The estimated cost of new theatre construction in the territory west of the Rocky Mountains for 1939 is $3,850,000, while the cost of remodeling houses was estimated at $2,420,000.

Altec Service Corporation has opened an office in Seattle with Barclay Ardell as manager. The staff includes O. M. Overmire and J. S. Briggs.

The Schine circuit has renewed service contracts with Altec for 110 theatres in New York State, Ohio, Maryland and Kentucky.

Wood, business manager of the I.T.O. of Ohio, protested that small town theatres are being discriminated against in the matter of dates for "Wind," he was told that dates are being held up on account of a shortage of prints. At present 350 prints are in use.

MGM's "Northwest" Grosses

"Northwest Passage," the picture selected to follow "Gone With the Wind" at the Capitol in New York, was held over in all 13 of its first key cities engagements, according to MGM. How Bookshop Killed Games for Theatres

Merchant Matches Theatre's Prizes; Judge Says "Lottery"

by JAMES SCHRADER
in Buffalo

"If the theatres are allowed to run lotteries," the judge said, "so should anyone else."

After Mr. Rubeck was found guilty and given a suspended sentence, Adolph Newman, attorney, went with his client to the office of the police commissioner to make a written complaint with regard to what took place in court.

Attorney Newman said he saw no reason why, if Rubeck was guilty of running a lottery, theatres should be permitted to operate bank nights. He charged the system employed by both were alike. The Commissioner, within a few days, took the complaint up with the district attorney and then the trouble started.

"Certificates of Insurance"

Police Officer John J. Regan took the stand and testified that Mr. Rubeck's store, known as Ye Olde Towne Booke Shop, was raided, several photographs of the place, bank night tickets and receipts being placed in evidence. He said he was permitted to register in Mr. Rubeck's bank night game after purchasing a second-hand magazine for ten cents. He said two days previous he had registered his name in the bank night at Shea's Seneca theatre. For this privilege, he added, he paid nothing.

Mr. Regan said he understood that if his number was drawn in the theatre entitling him to a cash prize that amount of money would be duplicated by Mr. Rubeck in that he held one of the Rubeck store's "certificates of insurance."

At this point Judge Summers intervened, asking Mr. Regan if he paid to gain admittance to the theatre. He was answered in the negative, Regan making some mention of "knowing the manager."

"Of course," the judge said. "I forgot that policemen never pay to get in."

Many in the Buffalo territory, and many outside, have been wondering of late why theatre owners have been subjected to such vigorous attention by local authorities for their chance game activities. The how and why of no games in Buffalo may be traced to a most unusual beginning.

It was only a tiny South Buffalo bookshop with a handful of patrons, but because its proprietor was found guilty of running a lottery, theatre games and bank nights in this city slumped and finally fell under withering fire.

This was three years ago and was the starting gun for consistent police and court action against the games. Buffalo was one of the first cities in the country in which such theatre schemes were labeled "lotteries."

Raided by Police

In finding Albert J. Rubeck, the book man, guilty of running a lottery, the late City Judge Robert J. Summers said the man is "just as guilty" as proprietors of theatres which run "bank nights."

Rubeck's place of business had been raided by the police anti-gambling squad when a complaint was received from a neighbor that a lottery was being conducted there. Mr. Rubeck issued certificates to his patrons in return for purchases of any nature amounting to at least ten cents. If a person holding one of these certificates happened to win a cash prize on bank night at Shea's Seneca theatre, located just around the corner, Mr. Rubeck would duplicate that amount of money.

During trial, it appeared for a time that theatres in Buffalo running bank nights were the object of the inquiry, not Mr. Rubeck. Judge Summers said the man apparently wanted the same privilege granted motion picture houses, that of running bank nights. He branded these "a plain lottery."

Calls Both Guilty

The officer then was asked how attendance at the theatre was on bank nights, if it were greater than on other nights.

"The drawings are on Wednesday and Saturday nights," Mr. Regan replied. "Yes, they have big crowds."

"The schemes employed by both Rubeck and these theatres," Judge Summers said, "are both in violation of the law.

"One is just as guilty as the other. Bank nights are obviously a gambling device."

Attorney Newman then came forward to cite decisions of other courts upholding the legality of bank nights. Judge Summers interrupted to say he had given his opinion and that "right or wrong, I've had my say." He said if a higher court wished to reverse his decision, that was up to them.

Newman said he couldn't see why his client should have been arrested while theatres are permitted to carry on their bank night drawings unmolested.

The trial was featured by arguments between Assistant District Attorney Weatherbee and the judge, the latter dwelling more on theatre bank nights than the one conducted by Rubeck and the former asking that Rubeck's case be considered, not someone else's.

The result of the session found Attorney Newman seeking a test case on bank nights and the Police Commissioner brought into the investigation by virtue of the complaint filed with him.

STOCK DEALS BY OFFICERS OF FILM COMPANIES LISTED FROM SEC BOOKS

56 Officers and Directors and Large Stockholders Show Dealings in Shares of Their Companies in 12 Months

Stock dealings of 56 company officers and directors of 13 film companies for 1939 made public by the U. S. Securities and Exchange Commission at Washington, indicate that the motion picture industry continues free of "inside" stock operations by company officials and also reveal the comparatively limited extent of holdings by board members and executives in the motion picture companies which they serve, except in one or two cases.

Officers and directors of motion picture companies traded only 325,000 shares of their own companies' securities during 1939, it is disclosed by returns filed with the Commission during the year under the provisions of Section 16 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.

The General Picture

There was very little stock acitivity by officers and directors in the following companies: Columbia, Consolidated Film Industries, General Theatre Equipment Corporation, Keith-Albee-Orpheum, Loew's Boston Theatres, Pathe Film Corporation, Trans-Lux Corporation and Universal. David Bernstein and J. Robert Rubin, Loew's Inc., both increased considerably their holdings in that company, Mr. Bernstein from 780 to 22,220 shares and Mr. Rubin from 14,155 to 30,015 shares.

There was activity in the options for common shares in Monogram Pictures with W. Ray Johnston disposing of options on about 85,000 shares of common and Trem Carr and Scott R. Dunlap both acquiring options for common totalling 22,823. Several Paramount officials purchased common stock in the company.

The Chase National Bank, controlling stockholder in Twentieth Century-Fox, sold 1,000 shares of common during the year, reducing its holdings to 221,158. In 1938, 114,100 shares were sold. This bank sold none of its 671,916 shares of preferred stock. Joseph M. Schenck reduced his common holdings about 8,000 shares to 110,043 and his preferred holdings from 23,284 to 15,284. Darryl F. Zanuck transferred 30,000 shares of common to an irrevocable trust, reducing his holdings to 93,130 shares. William Goetz reduced his common shares from 184,643 to 178,343.

The principal activity by Warner Brothers officers was the disposing of 40,000 debentures during the year by Sam E. Morris.

Under the law, every person who is directly or indirectly the beneficial owner of more than 10 per cent of any class of any equity security which is registered on a national exchange, or who is a director or an officer of any corporation with securities so registered, must file a report with the SEC of every acquisition or disposition which he makes of the corporation's securities.

Prompt Reports Required

Such reports must be filed with the commission within ten days after the close of any month in which such transactions take place, but need not include any transactions made by a corporation officer or director in the securities of any company other than his own. The purpose of the law is to prevent officers, directors and large stockholders from benefiting by the "inside" information available to them by reason of their connection with a corporation, and Section 16 provides that the issuing corporation may bring suit to recover any profits made through the use of such information; the section also prohibits the "short" selling of the corporation's securities by officers or directors.

The curbing of evasions of the law is sought by a requirement that officers and directors must report all securities of which they are the beneficial owner, regardless of whether they are carried in the name of the corporation official or not.

Since the law requires that any person becoming an officer or director of a corporation shall file a report showing what securities of the corporation, if any, he holds, directly or indirectly, at the time of his election, the commission is able to maintain a check of his transactions thereafter.

To enable the public to keep a watch upon the stock-trading activities of officers and directors of corporations in which they have investments, the reports filed by corporation officials are made public in summaries which are issued by the commission twice a month.

The 24 summaries issued by the SEC for the calendar year 1939 show the transactions of officers, directors and beneficial owners of stock in motion picture companies, are recorded in the following list which also gives the approximate number of outstanding shares of the company.

U. S. JUDGE INDICATES POSSIBILITY OF SETTLING "KEY" N. Y. TRUST CASE

Trial of Two Other Anti-Trust Actions Starts; Film Leaders Are Witnesses on Pre-Trial Examination

Federal Judge John C. Knox surprised film company attorneys Monday by referring to the possibility of a settlement in the Government's suit against the large motion picture companies. The reference to the motion picture suit came in a written opinion in a song plagarism suit.

The hint that the trust suit might be settled came in the judge's words, "If it be, as has been suggested, that the case of the United States against Paramount Pictures, Inc. (the equity suit against Paramount and the other majors) will be disposed of without trial of the issues, this suit (referring to the song plagarism suit) can be tried May 15th. If the Paramount case goes to trial May 1st, trial of this action will have to await its conclusion."

Federal Judge Henry Goddard on Tuesday in the Department of Justice's New York anti-trust action, ruled out a Government application for an order to regulate the appearance of its witnesses lest they be intimidated. He asserted the Government had failed to prove that its witnesses would be coerced.

In postulating that he was anxious to protect the witnesses of both sides, the judge told Paul Williams, special assistant attorney general, that he could "tell independent exhibitors that this court will do its utmost to protect them."

At a pre-trial conference the Government is expected to ask defendant attorneys to sign a 49 page stipulation setting forth the history of the suit, the alleged general conditions in the motion picture industry now, and certain facts of business practice. Agreement before trial on definitions would simplify the trial, the Government attorneys feel.

Last Thursday, the Department attorneys, in explaining where statistical data to be presented during the trial will be obtained, cited the Quigley Publications' Motion Picture Almanac. The defendants' attorneys were informed that at the proposed pre-trial conferences, they will be asked to admit the accuracy of figures obtained from the Almanac.

"Routine", Says Knox

Industry attorneys who are working on the majors' defense of the Government suit said that they knew nothing of any move to settle the case out of court. Attorneys for the Government also declared the case was being prepared for trial and no word had been received about a settlement.

Judge Knox said that the statement of the possibility of settlement had been included as a routine matter so as to cover that eventuality in determining a date for the plagiarism case.

It was reported that Judge Knox had received word from Washington in reference to the film suit before giving his opinion on the song case, but no verification could be obtained.

Everyone Registers Surprise

The reference to the possibility of a settlement came when Schwartz & Frohlich, counsel for the defendants, Harms, Inc., NBC and CBS, told Judge Knox that they must be free to defend Columbia in the film case. The statement that the film case might be settled was a complete surprise to them.

In Washington the Department of Justice also expressed surprise. One official said, however, that it was possible for the case to be settled at any time, even after it came to trial on May 1st. He said the Department of Justice always would listen to any proposals for settlement of the case which the film companies might offer.

Herman Finkelstein of Schwartz & Frohlich said Judge Knox had not intimated knowledge of a settlement but, on the contrary, had stressed the fact that he did not wish to delay trial of the suit. Other attorneys speculated that Judge Knox's impression that a settlement of the suit was possible must have been derived from Government sources.

Depinet, Balaban Examined

Ned E. Depinet, vice-president of RKO in charge of sales, testified in a pre-trial examination on Monday, and Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, was questioned on Wednesday.

Mr. Depinet gave details of negotiations for RKO film sales in each of 36 key cities listed by the Government. He also gave the names of the first-run houses in each city. The connection between the RKO producing company and the RKO theatres was discussed by Mr. Depinet. He said that the producing company was on an equal status with outside concerns in selling product and that the producing company had no knowledge of the terms of exhibition contracts made between RKO theatre companies and other producers.

Continuing his testimony, Mr. Depinet on Tuesday cited the advantages accruing to RKO Pictures and the RKO theatres in "cooperation." The latter have been ready to aid the picture company's efforts to "pioneer" and have helped raise grosses by good showmanship, he said.

Barney Balaban, president of Paramount Pictures, testified on Wednesday that many independent theatre owners obtain films at a lower rental than Paramount circuit theatres.

More answers were filed last Friday by Warner Brothers, RKO, Twentieth Century-Fox and Loew's Inc. Most of the answers were confidential, including information on affiliation with theatres and other figures.

Warner Brothers answers that were not confidential included the stateemnt that the company employs 9,776 persons; that the company has not shared theatre profits with companies with which it has star and other personnel exchange agreements. Norma Shearer was the first star borrowed by the company, according to the answers. The date was 1923, the year the company was organized.

Trust Suits in the Field

The trial of the Gary Theatre Corporation against Balaban & Katz and Warner Theatres and major companies will begin this week in the Chicago Federal Court. Judge William Holly will preside. The Gary theatre is being represented by Gavit & Richardson and the defendants by Mayer, Austrian & Platt. The attorneys for both sides refuse to disclose what witnesses they will call.

Edgar Eldredge, master in chancery, has not notified attorneys for the Government and defendants in the Chicago suit against Balaban & Katz and the major companies for an alleged violation of a consent decree if oral arguments will be heard on the case.

The Warner theatre circuit and the 12 major distributors filed answers which denied all allegations in the suit brought by the Admiral theatre in the United States District Court. The suit was filed January 3rd by Irvin A. Winegrad, attorney for Rubin Shapiro and the Harub Amusement Corporation which operate the Admiral. Triple damages of $225,000 under the anti-trust laws were asked. Morris Walf is representing the Warner theatre circuits.

Bob Lynch, manager of the MGM exchange in Philadelphia, filed a separate answer to the charge that he had reneged in a deal to purchase the Admiral from Frederick Gladdeck, his son-in-law, as "straw man." Counsel for the Admiral theatre alleged that Mr. Lynch virtually forced the return of a $5,000 deposit "by reason of his position with the distributor Loew's Inc. and other vague premises." No date has been set for the hearing.

The question whether J. B. Dubley, Oklahoma attorney, can represent the Griffith Amusement Company in the $4,500,000 anti-trust action brought by A. B. Momand against the Griffith company and the majors has not been settled yet. Federal Judge Alfred P. Murrah referred the matter to a grievance committee consisting of J. C. Monnet, Jr., Roy C. Lytle and Charles E. France. The first two men disqualified themselves and the Judge appointed Mr. France head of a new committee with Charles B. Pierce and Ned Looney. However, Mr. Pierce declined the appointment because he represents an insurance company which handles business for the Griffith company.

March 25th has been set for final hearings on the suit of the Landis theatre, Vineland, N. J., against the Stanley-Warner theatre circuit and 12 major distributors. The hearings are before Judge William H. Kirkpatrick. He granted a temporary injunction last November 6th but on February 9th the United States circuit court of appeals vacated the injunction and referred the matter back to Judge Kirkpatrick.

ANTI-TRUST SUITS ATTACKED BY LABOR

The American Federation of Labor this week attacked the anti-trust prosecution of building trades unions, one of the many trust suits including motion picture cases which now are being handled by Thurman Arnold, assistant United States attorney general. Mr. Arnold was promised "the damnedest fight he ever had" over the union actions. The indictments were termed "ruthless, brutal, inconsistent, damaging and destructive to the principles of organized labor." Mr. Arnold invited labor representatives to a conference. Labor unions plan to appeal to Congress and accused the Department of Justice of practicing "reactionary doctrine."

Mr. Arnold defended his position in a speech at Duke University. He said that competition must be restored through the anti-trust law or the last obstacle to industrial autocracy will disappear and Americans will be on the way to a German type of economic government. Corwin D. Edwards, chief economist in the anti-trust division of the Department of Justice, said last week that anti-trust laws are necessary for the preservation of opportunities for industrial progress.

U.S. FILES 550 NAMES TO TESTIFY AGAINST MAJORS

The United States Government on Wednesday filed with the clerk of the Federal District Court of the Southern District of New York a 310-page consolidated answer setting forth, for the first time in its 18 months of preparation for prosecution, specific instances of claimed monopolistic coercion by the major companies named defendants in the "key" New York anti-trust action, and also filed the names of 550 independent exhibitors and producers whom the Government intends to call upon to substantiate its charges of monopoly.

The Government named its witnesses only after failing in a move to obtain a court order requiring the defendants to conform to rigid regulations in questioning the witnesses.

The consolidated answer contained several hundreds of alleged instances of coercive methods employed by the defendant distributors against independent exhibitors. It set forth 1,040 individual franchises and licensing agreements between the majors and exhibitors with which it expects to prove monopoly. It listed three separate groups of prospective witnesses: (1) those in key city territories; (2) those operating in or around small towns; (3) independent producers. The witnesses:

Publishers, Book Critics Guests at AMPA Luncheon

Representatives of publishing houses, book critics and others in the publishing field were guests at the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers' luncheon at Jack Dempsey's Restaurant, New York, on Thursday.

The establishment of an annual award by the publishers for the best film taken from a book was to be announced as a means of bringing the two fields of entertainment into a closer relationship.

Other guests scheduled to attend the luncheon were Brian Aherne, Joan Fontaine and Henry Hull.

M. G. Shackelford, formerly salesman for Monogram, has joined the sales force of Columbia in Kansas City.

Departing Critic Gets Fond Adieu From AMPA

Frank S. Nugent, first run critic of the New York Times, was guest of honor at an Associated Motion Picture Advertisers luncheon last week just prior to his departure for Hollywood to fulfill a newly signed writer's contract with Twentieth Century-Fox. More than 125 advertising and publicity men, fellow critics and the speakers—especially the speakers, featuring Arthur Mayer and Mr. Nugent's compatriots from the Times—came to bury, not to praise. The Twentieth Century-Fox advertising and publicity department was absent, unanimously.

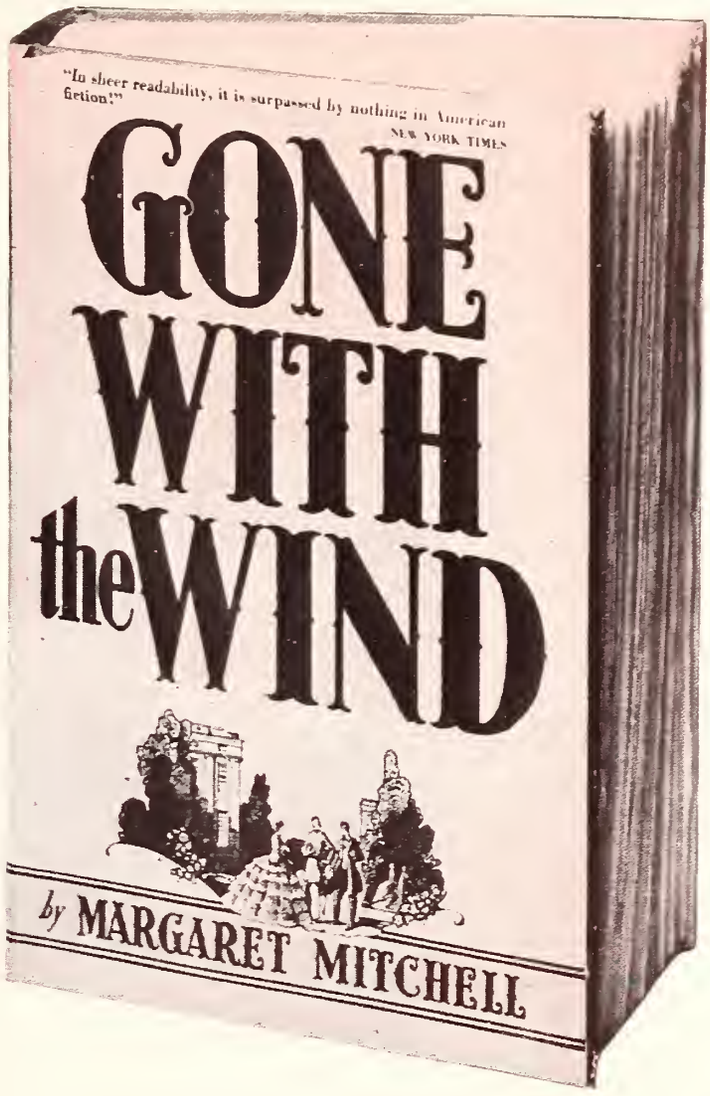
"Thanksgiving Day" Speech

Mr. Mayer took as the text of his Thanksgiving Day speech a paraphrase of Longfellow which began, "Lives of critics all remind us," and ended, "And departing leave behind them Roxy ads in the New York Times."

It was particularly appropriate, Mr. Mayer thought, for him to make the principal speech at Mr. Nugent's farewell party. "Readers of bloodthirsty literature," he said, "must have read his reviews of Rialto pictures and know how unflaggingly he has wielded the lash on this old, gray Mayer."

The occasion should be marked, Mr. Mayer continued, by dancing in the streets and banners flung to the Broadway breeze but, introducing a note of doubt, he wondered what effect Mr. Nugent's promotion would have on his fellow travelers.

"Will the absence of Loew advertising from the Herald Tribune," he said, "indicate that Howard Barnes is about to leave for Culver City? Or will one star in the Daily News for a big U epic indicate that Kate Cameron is about to join the new, new Universal?



Quotes Reviews

"I was formerly under the impression," Mr. Mayer continued, "that the way to become a scenario writer was to take a correspondence course, write an unsuccessful Broadway play, or be a third cousin of a producer. But now it seems there is another way—to write reviews of Twentieth Century-Fox pictures like these." The Rialto impresario here quoted verbatim from Nugent reviews of "The Bluebird," "Rose of Washington Square," and others.

"I am waiting," he said, "for that first picture carrying the Nugent credit. I want to see how Ben Crisler reviews it in the Times and what Terry Ramsaye has to say of it in MOTION PICTURE HERALD. I want to see if Frank comes east wearing a pink shirt, no hat and yellow spats looking like an expurgated edition of Boris Morros. All I ask is that the picture be brimming with murder, mystery and menace. We cannot permit your first born to lay an egg in the Roxy or the Music Hall. It belongs in the Rialto where it will break that long record which you yourself described as 'no runs, no hits, just terrors'."

Leading off for the Times staff, Mr. Crisler took a sad view of Mr. Nugent's departure for fields where the harvest is more golden and presented to him for the staff, a yellow polo shirt bearing an embroidered eight ball emblazoned with the Zanuck name. Bosley Crowther painted a vivid picture of a scene in which Mr. Nugent first goes on the Fox lot and meets Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, Shirley Temple and the Ritz Brothers, about all of whom he has been particularly bitter in print. Thomas Prior, third member of the staff, contented himself with a sardonic, "Yes, Mr. Nugent."

INDUSTRY ASKS "FAIR" WAGNER ACT; COAST WAGE ARGUMENTS CONTINUE

Hollywood Petitions Congress for "Employer Rights"; Studio Unions Make New Demands in 10% Payments Issue

Hollywood studio unions this week faced the resumption of wage-readjustment negotiations with the producers, with the flat declaration that they would not relinquish the ten per cent wage increase they gained last fall, unless the producers proved that their losses from the European War make the move necessary and could prove they had economized in top salary brackets.

Basic Points for Discussions

The unions met with the producers two weeks ago, as originally agreed when they gained their wage rises. Entering the conferences with essentially the same attitude, they remained unconvinced by the statistics that the producers had assembled; and, after two days of haggling, the meeting adjourned, so that both sides could obtain "more specific data."

Officers of the studio unions, comprising the Conference of American Federation of Labor Studio Unions, and including about 10 unions in the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, these embracing 13,000 studio craftsmen, late last week established these points as basic for further discussion.

It was further remarked by a spokesman that "complete airing of long-standing demands for an adjustment of many problems of various crafts must be had, and satisfactory negotiations must be completed to clear up many new aspects of hours and working conditions embodied in the existing agreements."

While neither side was under definite obligation to set a time for resumption of the negotiations, it was expected to come this week. The unions, especially, since the deadlock at the last conference, had pressed for early resumption.

The matter is expected to go to the American Arbitration Association, if the impasse is maintained. Union leaders have agreed to do so, though William Bioff, West Coast IATSE leader, now out on bail in Chicago and facing a Federal income tax trial in May, said that the unions would not consider rescinding the wage increase, if the producers did not prove their losses and their economies.

Split Over Extras

A recent decision of the directors of the Screen Actors Guild to give "extras" a separate charter and complete autonomy, has caused a rift between the board, composed of top-position actors, and the Class B Council, composed of extra and bit players, which heretofore handled extras' affairs.

The Council went on record last week in opposition to the move, and stated that it had not been consulted.

The autonomy question is to be given to a vote of Class A and B members, according to preparations of Kenneth Thomson, guild secretary.

Mr. Thomson charged that "certain members" of the B Council in actions have "made it clear that they thought they could run the guild better than the board of directors now runs it."

Meanwhile, petitions were circulated through Hollywood in an effort to stop the guild board's decision.

Talent Agents To Sign

Talent agents in New York who book vaudeville acts accepted contracts with the recently revivified American Guild of Variety Artists.

I. Robert Broder, attorney for the Artists Representatives Association, with over 100 members, including the larger talent agents, said, last Thursday, that, if current negotiations were successful, the agreements would be signed "within ten days."

The agreements will be one more notch in the stock of the AGVA, which is undertaking to embrace all the estimated 15,000 vaudeville, night club, and hotel performers who were members of the American Federation of Actors which it replaced as a vaudeville union for the Associated Actors and Artists of America, parent actors' group.

The agreements provide that no agent shall handle a performer not a member of the guild. This will help the guild also in the unioniza-

BIOFF ARREST? . . . GREEN SAYS "AMEN"

Willie Bioff, West Coast International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees leader, now in Chicago under arrest for non-completion of a 1922 Chicago jail sentence, whose hearing on a habeas corpus writ began Wednesday, and who is facing an income tax trial on May 28th, last week received the "brush-off" from his theoretical chief, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. Mr. Green, who has insisted, when under fire for alleged racketeering of AFL international union heads and aides, that his suzerainty is merely theoretical, maintained it again, last week, in Atlanta. But he did add, regarding Bioff, if the court decreed: "Let him be punished. We say amen to that."

Meanwhile, J. W. Buzzell, executive secretary of the Los Angeles Central Labor Council, who has concerted with Bioff in many of his industry affrays, was acquitted last week by the County grand jury, of criminal responsibility for a fatal traffic accident, but he may still be prosecuted on a charge of reckless driving.

John P. ("Big") Nick and Clyde Weston, deposed head and business agent of the St. Louis projectionists' Local 143, on Tuesday were ordered by St. Louis Circuit Judge Ernest F. Oakley to pay the union $16,500 collected from theatre operators in 1936 and 1937. Mr. Nick has been acquitted of one extortion charge but he and Weston remain under indictment for extorting $6,500 from exhibitors in 1937. The memberships of 50 men admitted to Local 143 by Nick from July, 1935, to April, 1939, were invalidated by Judge Oakley.

Lawyers Petition Committee for Amendments Providing Protection for Employers under Rulings of Labor Board

The motion picture industry's first application, in Washington, for changes in the present labor laws, especially as enforced by the Wagner Labor Act and its agencies, was etched in the hall of Congress this week by the pleas of two Los Angeles lawyers, Maurice Benjamin and Alfred Wright, who suggested procedural amendments to the Wagner Act.

Before House Committee

The lawyers appeared before the House Labor Committee, on Monday. Their action was the first official participation of the motion picture industry in such a question, since it joined the formation of the "Blue Eagle" Code, formed its local arbitration and code boards, and stringently regulated wages and work, under the short-lived National Recovery Act.

The two men said they sought five amendments, to aid producers and distributors, as follows:

That the employer may discharge employees for any reason other than union activity.

The findings of the National Labor Relations Board as to facts, shall be binding on the courts only if supported by "substantial and material evidence" rather than by "some evidence."

The employers should be given the right to petition the board to certify a proper union when there is a conflict between two or more unions.

If an employer agrees to deal with a union on board orders, he shall be protected against demands by a rival union.

The board should be given power to hand down "consent decrees," where an employer agrees to discontinue unfair labor practices.

Asks Fairer Cooperation

Mr. Benjamin disclaimed any attack against the Wagner Act; the amendments did not aim at it—they were designed to make it operate more fairly, he said.

Motion picture employers encounter hardship in discharging an employee for "legitimate" reasons, he noted, and additionally asserted that if an employee complains to the NLRB that he was discharged for union activity, the Board usually takes the man's word.

Charles C. Pettijohn, of New York, general counsel for the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, who accompanied the two Los Angeles lawyers at the hearing said, at the close, that all the proposed amendments were "clarifying amendments, devised to making the law better understood and more easily workable."

He said the suggested changes did not constitute an attack on labor's rights, but merely sought to base the law upon experience gained that the labor categories of the motion picture industry were considered and settled upon in handling the industry had a good labor record, as good as that of any other industry; and the industry record must be good, he concluded, because it naturally reflects upon the screen.

Mr. Benjamin told the committee that he spoke for the following companies: Twentieth Century-Fox, Warner Brothers, Paramount Pictures, Columbia Pictures, Samuel Goldwyn, Universal Pictures, Loew's, Inc., Hal E. Roach Studios, Globe Productions, RKO Radio Pictures, and Walter Wanger.

ASK LABOR LAW CHANGE

tion of the large first run vaudeville houses on Broadway, the Loop, and other centers of variety. The guild is already negotiating with the Broadway first run houses, with stage shows.

Code Not Pressed

The guild established a "code" several months ago, but, during winter doldrums, while executive personnel was shifted, did not press it. The code is long, is a union contract, comprehensive, and limits agents' fees.

The agents' group was organized four months ago. It will be recognized, it is said, by the variety artists guild, as the sole bargaining unit for agents; however, there was noted this qualification, that independent vaudeville agents may deal with the guild, if the agreement is signed, if they conform to ARA standards.

Meanwhile, the Four A's, responsible for the organization of the variety artists' unit, and components of which have loaned the unit much money, is planning an entertainment and ball for funds, on April 12th, in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria, New York City. One thousand stars, Four A members all, are expected to attend, including a large contingent from Hollywood, members of the Screen Actors' Guild. Lawrence Tibbett, president of the American Guild of Musical Artists, is honorary chairman for the ball.

Writers License Agents?

The Screen Writers Guild may license agents in a manner similar to that employed by the Screen Actors guild, it was said in Hollywood on Tuesday. The writers' guild is drafting such a plan. The directors have appointed a committee to prepare and present it to the membership.

It was added, however, that final form of the idea may require some time. The writers are surrounding the idea with secrecy to prevent opposition to it, such as that which sprang up among coast agents when the Screen Actors Guild franchising was made known.

It is understood the writers, like the Actors Guild, will require that each agent obtain a license from the Writers Guild, in order to represent its members.

Unions in the Field

Local 572, IATSE projectionists, of Staunton, Virginia, negotiated with Jeff Hofheimer, of Norfolk, Virginia, for operators in the latter's new Visulite Theatre, in Covington, which opened this week. The local now furnishes operators for theatres in Harrisonburg, Staunton, Lexington and Clifton Forge, all in the state.

According to John Gatelee, international representative of the IATSE, operators of all theatres in Springfield, Mass., except the Paramount and the Rifkin chain, have signed with Local B-84, for "front-office" employees.

Organize Coatroom Workers

The Wardrobe Checkers' Local 65, of the Building Service Employees International union of the American Federation of Labor, is attempting to organize the coatroom checkers in Buffalo theatres, hotels and meeting halls.

In the same city, the Theatre and Amusement Employees' union has renewed a two-year collective bargaining contract with the Buffalo Theatres, Inc., according to Owen J. Kavanagh, union business agent.

Two year agreements have also been signed with Century Theatre Enterprises, and with the Dipson-Basil circuit. The agreements, covering matrons, maintenance employees, porters, cleaning women, and the like, provide varying minimum weekly wages, two week vacations with pay, and other things.

The second annual dance of Local 702, Laboratory Technicians, of New York City, will be held on April 6th, at the city's Hotel Edison.

After picketing for two days last week, the CIO Theatrical Display Card Workers' Union, Local 1030, of Philadelphia, won a closed shop agreement, improved working conditions, and wage increases for 32 employees of the National-Penn Printing Company, a poster concern headed by Simon Lebros, former president of the dissolved National Poster Renters' Association.

The preliminary report of the Carrier Corporation for the year ended December 31st, subject to audit, shows a net profit of $69,099, after the usual deductions. This compares with a net loss of $1,133,021 in 1938.

The board of directors of Twentieth Century-Fox has declared a cash dividend of 37½ cents per share for the first quarter of 1940 on the outstanding preferred stock of the corporation, payable March 30th to stockholders of record at the close of business March 15th.

The board of directors of Trans-Lux Corporation has declared a dividend of 10 cents a share, payable March 15th to stockholders of record March 5th.

Dowling Resigns Equity Post

Eddie Dowling, actor-producer, withdrew Tuesday his acceptance of a post on the council of Actors Equity. His appointment had been criticized by some members on the ground that he was a producer. Mr. Dowling said last week that he had accepted the position without full realization of the demands it would make on his time.

BRITISH QUOTA DELAY AWAITED

Indefinite postponement of new British quota legislation was authoritatively forecast in London this week.

It was indicated that the institution of a new quota with a monetary instead of a footage basis, as suggested is extremely unlikely. At the same time, suspension of other phases of film legislation, such as block booking, is anticipated.

At the beginning of the war, the Government decided to continue the present quota for six months, from October 1st to March 31st.

It is believed that, pending a final decision, the interim period will find either the retention of the present quota or some sort of retroactive legislation. This would take care of unfilled quotas as a result of the virtual cessation of British production because of the war.

Harriscolor Films Reorganization Set

Harriscolor Films, Inc., has been reorganized to the satisfaction of creditors and stockholders, according to Emil K. Ellis, attorney. Mr. Ellis said this week that a decree will shortly be presented to the chancery court at Wilmington, Del., to discharge the company from receivership. The company entered the color film field on the coast about eight years ago and discontinued operations four years ago when it entered receivership.

The company was founded by Joseph B. Harris, Sr., who died last December. J. B. Harris, Jr., is now president.

Frank Muto in Helsinki

Frank Muto, formerly a motion picture magazine photographer in Hollywood, is now attached to the Finnish Relief Fund in Helsinki. Until recently he was a cameraman for International News Service on the Finnish front, after covering the Polish invasion. Mr. Muto is a brother of Anthony Muto, Movietone News representative in Washington.

Martin Starr, former film commentator for radio station WMCA, New York, has joined Columbia Pictures becoming a special exploitation representative. Mr. Starr is said to be working on an idea which calls for the making of behind the scenes recordings of what goes on in the pre-production stages of a motion picture. The recordings are to be used on local radio stations just prior to the arrival of the film at local theatres.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Mr. Joseph Polley, up to recently our correspondent in Scranton, Pennsylvania, is ambition personified. He wants to work a whole year without any pay.

Mr. Polley, holding forth in the home city of Frank Walker's large Comerford Theatre Circuit, has begun a year's leave of absence from his Quigley Publication correspondenceship and also the city editorship of the Scrantonian-Tribune, to work on dailies and magazines in the New York area for the purpose of attaining more experience and journalistic worldliness, after 10 years with newspapers. Polley, who is 30, has been Scranton city editor for the past 18 months. Previously he served nearly four years as sports editor and five years as reporter and feature writer for the Scrantonian-Tribune and its predecessors.

He served on the Scrantonian-Tribune staff while winning a bachelor's degree at the University of Scranton, where he was director of publicity during his four years there as a student. In his newspaper experience he has covered every beat on the staff and has been correspondence and telegraph editor.

Polley plans to spend his year as a holiday of labor—offering his services gratis to newspapers and magazines for the experience he may gain in return.

Here's a tip to all autograph-hounded actors, actresses, politicians, prizefighters, authors and other celebrities who wear out their good right—or left—arms on signatures or handclasps. Michigan's Governor, Luren Dickinson, no mean shakes at copping publicity, has appointed a Secretary of Autographs. He picked out Velma Jean Spotts, 19 and attractive, as his glad-handing secretary.

Wherever the Governor goes there will go Velma. She will hand out pretty little autographed cards, signed by the Governor at leisure, embellished, what's more, by the State seal of Michigan. She also will help to greet visitors, doubling for the Governor on the hand-pumping business.

A late model, streamlined corset is among lost articles still unclaimed at the Fox Theatre in San Francisco, according to Chase Sanborn, (no relation to Charley McCarthy's radio coffee sponsors), in charge of lost property. Sixty-five per cent of all feminine losses, which were were 90 per cent of the total, were gloves! Sanborn said greatest number of articles in any month was 238 in January. By December a low of 63 was reached, probably, says Sanborn, because there were fewer things left to lose.

H. Ehrenreich, a leading marriage broker in New York, seemed most anxious the other morning to be interviewed by the news press, to bemoan his falling business because there are "too many husbands hanging around and not enough girls" He offered figures to show that there are 3,500,000 more marriageable men than girls in the United States.

Marriage broker Ehrenreich purposely used the phrase "too many husbands" at the instigation, insistence and influence of one Al Sherman and one Jose Schorr, two press agents for Columbia Pictures in New York, from where attention now is being directed to a motion picture entitled "Too Many Husbands."

HOW TO DESIGN POCKETS that don't bulge on gentlemen's suits has always been a fanatical fetish of the Fifth Avenue, New York, department store of McCreery. Descending unexpectedly on some illustrous gentlemen about town, the McCreery Inquiring Reporter, dispatched by the McCreery advertising copywriter, cornered the illustrious ones at their clubs, their bars, their offices, asked them to show what they park in their pockets, their bulging pockets. Accommodatingly enough they emptied their pockets and let Mc's I. R. count the contents.

First illustrious gentleman to empty was Lowell Thomas, of radio and Fox Movietonews. Mr. Thomas carried in his pockets, his bulging pockets: A Deputy Sheriff's card from Dutchess County; a two-year-old pass from Mike Jacobs-Lee Shubert to the Jai-Alai at the now defunct Hippodrome; a De Soto owner's identification card; a Lake Placid Winter Sports Press Pass; Explorer's Club membership card; seven passes from seven newsreel theatres; a two-piece silver Napoleon dollar that contains a pocket knife; a 500-year-old bronze Inca soldier mascot; uncashed checks a month old from Powel Crosley, B.B.D. & O., NBC, Funk & Wagnalls, Sun Oil Co.; San Francisco to New York railway ticket (the end of which he didn't use, since he got off and flew back from Cleveland); membership in oldest Masonic Lodge in America, St. John's Lodge, Boston; notes for a talk on aviation; street addresses and telephone numbers of eight young ladies (he has eight secretaries); fountain pen, comb, nailfile (all in his right hand trouser pocket); gold badge of Policeman's Benevolent Association; combination to a safe; cards from the Amateur Ski Club and the Royal Geographical Society of London.

Second illustrious gentleman to empty was Paul Whiteman, emptying at the end with a rabbit's foot, another rabbit's foot, two handkerchiefs, both scented, addresses of four restaurants and two reducing gyms.

The Civic Pride of Florida still is something to behold, all counter-claims of the competitive California Chamber of Commerce notwithstanding.

Wives of New York motion picture executives, returning from Miami and thereabouts, this week, related that they threw shopkeepers down there in a dither when they asked for the very latest in warm clothing, in keeping with the coldest weather in Florida in 25 years. The merchants very indignantly denied any existence, for example, of such things as flannel "nightie" pajamas.

My Son, My Son

(United Artists-Small)

Study in Paternity

Wholehearted response of a case-hardened Hollywood preview audience to this strikingly unusual and brilliantly handled subject stamps it outstanding entertainment on any basis of judgment.

Howard Spring's best selling novel of a coddled son's malevolent influence upon the life of the father who has sought to give him all the benefits of wealth and culture denied his own youth is by no means typical screen material. As performed by this cast and directed by Charles Vidor, it is superlative in every one of its 115 minutes.

The unfamiliar scene of the story is Manchester, England, later London. Lenore Coffee's finely proportioned screen play takes the hero from the despair of slum poverty to the deeper despair of self-won luxury minus filial loyalty. The principal character, played with impressive sincerity by Brian Aherne, devotes his life to supplying his only son with advantages he has lacked. The son learns early that he can obtain any end by imposing upon his father's affection, and finally becomes his rival in love. When the woman of the triangle chooses the father instead, the boy achieves vengeance by betraying the daughter of his father's best friend, who kills herself. The father disowns the boy, and death in a Flanders field brings an ending more satisfactory to picture audiences than the grimmer one told in the novel.

Louis Hayward's performance as the vicious son is a finer character portrayal than any he has achieved in heroic roles. Madeline Carroll is splendid as the young woman both men desire, the father honorably and the boy otherwise. Laraine Day gives a memorable delineation as the actress wronged by the son, and Henry Hull is capital as her father.

The production is doubtlessly Edward Small's finest work. Whether or not it turns out to be the box-office equal of his famous "Count of Monte Cristo," it is more expertly filmed, more powerfully directed and more proficiently dealt with in every respect.

Strange Cargo

(M-G-M)

Mystical Melodrama

Clark Gable's first film since "Gone With the Wind," therefore a box office quantity of foreknown proportions, is a lusty and sometimes lustful melodrama threaded with mysticism. Gable, most consistently present of stars in MOTION PICTURE HERALD'S annual poll of money personalities, plays the roughest and toughest of several convicts who escape from a penal island into various adventures and qualifying experiences. The physical incidents involved are typical of prison-escape pictures, fights, flights, pursuits, sell-outs, and are more forthrightly and convincingly presented than commonly. It is the mystical aspect of the picture that remains in memory longest, however.

The story, based on the book, "Not Too Narrow, Not Too Deep," by Richard Sale, introduces into the running narrative, without identification save by name, a convict whose services to and influences upon his depraved associates are analogous to those of Christ during His earthly manifestation. This character, portrayed by Ian Hunter, walks out of the narrative in similarly unexplained manner, leaving the audience to conclude, guided by symbolic suggestions and by dialogue, whatever it may choose to decide.

Gable's role is he-man stuff and Joan Crawford has a she-woman assignment immediately opposite him, both letting go at their roles full tilt. Peter Lorre makes a stool-pigeon role seem properly odious. Albert Dekker, Paul Lukas, J. Edward Bromberg, John Arledge, Frederic Worlock and Eduardo Ciannelli also handle strongly emphasized characterizations forcefully.

Production by Joseph L. Mankiewicz and direction by Frank Borzage are characteristically thoughtful and effective. Lawrence Hazard composed the screen play. It is adult material.

Too Many Husbands

(Columbia)

Marital Comedy

The first picture of Wesley Ruggles, producer-director, for Columbia, is a frivolous and frothy treatment of the "Enoch Arden" theme, filmed in the glossy Ruggles manner. Something like 90 per cent of the camera attention is upon the three stars who portray the wife and her husbands, netting showmen a neat trio of live names for marquee display and justifying exploitation pressure in their behalf.

The story, a W. Somerset Maugham play, adapted by Claude Binyon, recounts raffishly the indecision of a young woman whose supposedly dead husband turns up alive six months after she has married his best friend. As she has waited only a half year before marrying him the situation has an immediacy not paralleled in the "Enoch Arden" case. It also has flippancy, urgency, and a reasonably decorous veneering of the emotional factors involved. It is, nevertheless, a shade mature for minors.

Jean Arthur, Fred MacMurray and Melvyn Douglas share entertainment responsibilities evenly and about equally well. Harry Davenport makes a suitable fourth and Dorothy Peterson has a potent part in the introductory footage, vanishing thereafter.

Withers-Autry Novelty

The pairing of Jane Withers and Gene Autry, box-office personalities of long endurance in separate fields, has resulted in a film as novel as any readily remembered. The Withers talent is undulled by comparison with the singular Autry talent, both profiting by the teaming. It's a fast and flippant comedy drama, made simply and exclusively to amuse.

John Stone produced the picture and Alfred E. Green directed, using an original screen play by Lou Breslow and Owen Francis. It has to do with the filming of a western picture, written around a frontier hero, on the scene of the factual story. The hero's descendants are continually engaged in a feud with the descendants of those contemporaries who didn't believe he was a hero, wherefore the feud and consequences thereof impede the production unit until it is decided to employ the hero's grandson as the hero, after which the confusion becomes even more confounding. A real bank robbery provides the final excitement.

Mr. Autry's handling of the four songs in the picture is something a lot of persons who haven't seen or heard him are sure to find stimulating. He is also aces in the saddle, on the draw and in the other ways a top cowhand is supposed to be so.

Isle of Destiny

(RKO - Fine Arts)

South Seas Adventure

"Isle of Destiny," a color tale of adventure, of aviation, gun running and U. S. Marine life in the South Seas, is the first of three pictures Franklyn Warner's Fine Arts Pictures will produce for RKO release. Overlong for its material, the plot has strong basic action, taken from a pulp magazine story by the prolific Allan Vaughn Elston. Given a fine mounting by the producer, who in addition to his RKO releases will make an extensive program of pictures for his own distribution setup, the film was photographed by the Cosmo color process, which makes its debut in feature length production, and the prints were processed by Cinecolor.

Elmer Clifton directed from a screenplay by Arthur Hoerl, M. Coates Webster and Robert Lively.

"Thornton" and "Barnes," Marines stationed on a South Seas island, both fall in love with "Miss Allerton," daring aviatrix, who stops off on a world trip to visit her brother, commanding officer of the post. She is kidnaped by the leader of a gun smuggling ring to keep the Marines occupied searching for her while guns for China are being taken off the island. The pair rescue her after a fight with the band and their native helpers. "Miss Allerton" and "Thornton," who leaves the Marines, marry.

The House of Seven Gables

(Universal)

Period Melodrama

Nathaniel Hawthorne's grim novel of early 19th century New England is thoughtfully and effectively presented by associate producer Burt Kelly, director Joe May and their co-workers, among whom Jack Otterson rates special mention for providing settings and backgrounds which add much to the realism. Harold Greene, adaptor, and Lester Cole, screen playwright, have handled the Hawthorne story material respectfully, and his intricately plotted narrative moves smoothly to a gratifying climax.

George Sanders and Margaret Lindsay give powerful performances, a large cast and able support. Alan Napier does a particularly impressive job as the aging postman whose changing appearance keeps the audience aware of the time elements involved.

Although the story deals with such things as family curses and their influence, no attempt is made to use the subject as a spook theme. On the contrary, realism is stressed throughout, a firm hold on interest being sustained.

Puppy Love

Many a film currently showing pleads one special cause or another, but in this case the cause is that of a boy who wants a dog. As such it is screen fare of a completely satisfying nature. The boy gets his dog, in fact, gets a house full of dogs of all types and descriptions. Additionally, being a rather typical boy, he gets involved in many activities which involve broken windows.

As satisfying as the story is its portrayal by a cast which includes John Sheffield in the leading role; Ernest Truex as his father; Dorothy Tree as his mother; Ann Todd, young feminine friend who understands what it is to want a dog; Daisy Mothershed, the long-suffering colored cook, and Ray Turner, her tippling husband, definitely not devoted to dogs.

Adopted from Booth Tarkington's novel, the screen play was written by Lynn Root, Frank Fenton and Robert Chapin. It was directed by Ray McCarey, who showed the same understanding of the story as did its authors. Lee Marcus was executive producer, with William Sistrom producing.

Horror Film

Following the pattern of its "Frankenstein" and "Dracula" pictures, Universal here has cast Boris Karloff and Bela Lugosi together in a tale of a doctor who transplants the brain of a gangster to a college professor, in order to save the educator's life.

As the doctor, Mr. Karloff is properly frightening in the role of a scientist whose interest in his theory of brain transplantation takes precedence over human values. Mr. Lugosi is equally sinister as a gangster, while Stanley Ridges provides an outstanding performance in the role of the professor with a part-gangster brain.

The original screen play was by Kurt Siodmak and Eric Taylor, with Arthur Lubin directing and Burt Kelly associate producer, all combining to turn out a picture which sustains its mood with no wasted footage from start to finish.

Technological Novelty

Dale Van Every, producer, and Ernest Schoedsack, director, are reported to have been long in planning this primarily technological novelty in which a mildly mad scientist devises a means of reducing mice, men and other mammals to miniature dimensions. The feat is accomplished with nicety and in color, the end product of the enterprise being an extremely unusual film, perhaps most explicitly described as a melodramatic "Gulliver's Travels," with bone and sinew talent substituted for drawings.

Tom Kilpatrick wrote the original screen play, which reveals the world's greatest biologist conducting experiments with radium deep in the Inca country and summoning a trio of specialized scientists to his aid. When they refuse to depart without learning the nature of his discovery he reduces them to toy dimensions and then, discerning that they are growing and will one day regain their stature, sets out to destroy them. Two of the five die, but the other three destroy the scientist and, regaining normal size, decide to keep their adventure secret.

Although handled altogether seriously, the experiences of the abruptly dwarfed characters drew laughs from some present at the Hollywood preview. Although dramatic, it is not a horror picture and does not seek to shock.

Previewed at the Paramount theatre, Los Angeles, late in the afternoon to an audience composed in about equal parts of profession and public. The response was spotty.—W. R. W.

Canada at War

The March of Time cameras move closer to home in the newest release. Viewing the activities of their "good neighbors" across the Canadian border, screen gatherings in this country may realize, as they never have before, the nearness of the European martial situation. The material is devoted chiefly to a consideration of civilian, industrial, agricultural and military resources for aid to the motherland. Particularly significant are the scenes of recruiting and training volunteers.—Running time, 19 minutes.

FIGHT IN INDIANA ON SCHOOL FILMS

The board of directors of the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana has instructed its counsel to institute legal proceedings against the Sunman, Ind., school board in an effort to prohibit use of school property for other than school purposes.

The association charges that the board is presenting films in the school each Saturday night with admissions at 10 and 15 cents and in addition has offered cash awards to induce increased attendance.

"This is one of the first test cases entered by the association," the directors said in making the proposed action public, "and if successful may have considerable bearing on similar situations throughout Indiana."

Night Descends on Treasure Island

(MGM)

FitzPatrick Traveltalk

In this inspection of the night spectacles staged at the Golden Gate International Exposition in San Francisco of last year, the material is presented in a static and unvaried style, except the colored panels of spraying fountains and fair buildings. A shift is made midway in the miniature to examine some of the masterpieces of art that were featured at the exposition's Palace of Fine Arts.—Running time, nine minutes.

Home Movies

(MGM)

A Beauty of a Benchley

This time Robert Benchley is taking up the hobby of the amateur cinematographer. Using himself as the horrible example, Mr. B indirectly demonstrates some important points of what not to do in shooting parlor scripts. It is a laugh riot.—Running time, nine minutes.

Puss Gets the Boot

(MGM)

Ising Cartoon

In this Rudolf Ising pigmented pen point of a cat and mouse game, the little rodent comes out of the fray victor over his feline tormentor. How the victim turns the tables on his tormentor results in a gay, brightly tinted and sketched bout. Especially clever is the portrayal of the smug superiority of the cat dictator.—Running time, eight minutes.

Stuffie

(MGM)

Canine Sob Story

Pete Smith presents the case of man's best friend, as he did so well and eloquently in "Wanted-a-Master" back in 1937. "Stuffie" lead a dog's life in the style that only a well fed and loved canine pet can pursue. His only peeve is a big hound next door on the order of a St. Bernard breed. "Stuffie," after taking a healthy bite out of his annoyer's tail, makes himself scarce. He finally finds his way home, only to learn that his young mistress has adopted his pet peeve. When a fire breaks, "Stuffie" arouses the family, is trapped, but is rescued by his rival, at the cost of his big benefactor's life. Dog lovers will find the picture especially appealing.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Northward Ho!

(MGM)

The Making of a Movie

The subject may serve a twofold purpose, a trailer announcement for the feature "Northwest Passage" or an entertainment and educational exposition of how a motion picture is made. The picture example is the Kenneth Roberts novel of historical adventure. From the initial step in the purchasing of the work for screen transcription through the preparations expended in preliminary work, such as research and location investigations up to the point of actual shooting, the history of a picture in work is fascinating.—Running time, nine minutes.

What's Your I.Q.?

(MGM)

Another Movie Quizzer

Pete Smith, who has been telling audiences the answers to everything for some time, reverses his procedure and asks them the questions. The procedure is to offer some bit of Pete Smith humor and situation, pose the question, offer choices and finally sound the correct answer. The brain tinglers range from questions concerning the Statue of Liberty up to a typically Smithian query as to the year at which the War of 1812 started.—Running time, 7½ minutes.

To Act on Resignation

The board of directors of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America will act March 25th at the organization's annual meeting in New York, on the resignation submitted by United Artists six months ago. The resignation has not been withdrawn. While United Artists said the resignation was effective March 1st, it must be officially accepted by the MPPDA directors. Producer members of UA continue as members of the MPPDA, however.

Play Backing Not Related To Films, Says Einfeld

The backing of such stage plays as "Romeo and Juliet" by Warner Brothers is purely a financial venture and has no relation to its film producing activities, S. Charles Einfeld, advertising and publicity director, said Friday in New York before leaving for the Coast. The company's legitimate production department is preparing to stage the Shakespearean play on the Coast with Laurence Olivier and Vivien Leigh the leads. Neither player is under contract to Warners.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Production Slack

Dropping slightly from the level of the week before, Hollywood this week completed six pictures, as against seven of last week. The studios started seven, compared to the eight of the previous period, and had 35 shooting, 21 being prepared and 57 editing, which stacks up with the 34, 19 and 64 in the same groups last week.

Finished were "The Doctor Takes a Wife" and "Offenders of the Law," Columbia; "Covered Wagon Trails," Monogram; "You Can't Fool Your Wife," RKO Radio; "On Their Own," Twentieth Century-Fox, and "It's a Date," Universal.

Republic started three: "Grandpa Goes to Town," "Young Buffalo Bill" and "In Old Missouri." Monogram began work on an as yet untitled Renfrew film, Paramount on an untitled Henry Aldrich subject, RKO on "Tom Brown's School Days," and Twentieth-Fox on "Rogue of the Rio Grande."

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer continued to have the greatest number before the cameras, with "Two Girls on Broadway," "Dr. Kildare's Girl," "Edison, the Man," "Waterloo Bridge," "Pride and Prejudice," "And One Was Beautiful," "The Mortal Storm," "Twenty Mule Team," "Susan and God" and "Andy Hardy Meets a Debutante."

Shooting at Columbia was "The Man Who Would Not Die"; at Monogram, "Son of the Navy"; Paramount, "Destiny" and "The Ghost Breakers"; Principal Productions, for United Artists release, "Our Town"; RKO, "The Saint Takes Over"; Hal Roach, for United Artists, "Turnabout"; Edward Small, for United Artists, "South of Pago Pago"; Twentieth-Fox, "Lillian Russell" and "Maryland"; Universal, "Sandy Is a Lady," "If I Had My Way" and "La Conga Nights," and Warners, "Sea Hawk," "All This and Heaven, Too," "An Angel from Texas," "Torrid Zone" and "Flight Eight."

While no short subjects were finished, three were started and nine being prepared.

Virginia City

Latest in the localized premieres lately so popular with the Hollywood gentry is that set for March 16th in Reno and Virginia City, for the Warner picture, "Virginia City."

Bound to surpass its "Dodge City" junket of last year, the Warner contingent arranged for a "Virginia City" special train to carry the 250 stars, executives and press representatives to the location, where a tripartite reception is to be tendered by the Governors of Nevada, California and Wyoming. A parade will precede the showing of the picture, to be held in three Reno theatres and one Virginia City house with a total seating capacity of 4,400.

FAITH, HOPE AND CHARITY

To one Faith Barton, if she can be found, some of the gold she so hopefully came to Hollywood to earn 16 years ago has now fallen due, coming to her not from Hollywood but from her home in San Jose.

Revealing the story is the Screen Actors Guild. Its Hollywood office has been asked to help find the girl in order that she might get the more than $2,000 waiting for her at the Trust Department of the Bank of America, San Jose branch, which is administrating her father's estate.

Leaving San Jose in 1924 to come to the film capital in search of work in pictures, Faith's letters home gradually decreased, finally stopped altogether. Now the records of Central Casting and the Guild show no trace of her. Many of the statistics were discarded in 1938, when the list of extras was cut from more than 20,000 to less than 7,000. Nor have directories or police department records shown any sign of her whereabouts.

Highlights already arranged include such diverse items as coverage by 40 stations of the Mutual Broadcasting System, a costume ball, a presentation of local entertainment, called "Schnitzer's Beer Garden Revue"; a spelling bee presided over by Miriam Hopkins, and a quarter mile race between Indian braves and the train bearing the participants.

Nevada residents have raised $25,000 to finance the trip.

Business Doubled

Warner Brothers has doubled its business in Mexico in the last three years, according to Oscar Brooks, assistant manager at the company's branch in Mexico City, who arrived in Hollywood on a vist this week. Other companies too have added to their revenue considerably in recent years.

Mr. Brooks attributed the increased revenue to stimulation of Mexican film appetites by production of the native industry. These, however, are not of sufficient number to supply regular programs and American pictures benefit from the increased demand.

Mexico is badly underseated, he added, and eventually a building boom will create many more outlets for American made pictures.

J. C. JENKINS DEAD AT 82; WAS HERALD COLUMNIST

Weekly Reports as Field Representative Grew into Homely Philosophies of "Colyum"

Jaysee is dead.

J. C. Jenkins, early motion picture theatre operator, known as the Sage of Neligh to friends by the thousands, scattered across the territory which he covered for MOTION PICTURE HERALD and for which he himself set the limits "from Pennsylvania to the Pacific and from Canada to Mexico," died quietly Tuesday morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Marjorie Jenkins Bradley, in Neligh, Neb. He was 82 years old on February 28th.

Mr. Jenkins began writing his Colyum for the EXHIBITORS HERALD, predecessor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, shortly after he became field representative for that publication in April, 1926. For thirteen years he traveled through the middle and far west, stopping in every town where there was a motion picture theatre, making friends with those few exhibitors not already numbered among his intimates.

He was born in Berrian County, Michigan, February 28, 1858, between Niles and Dowagiac. At the end of the Civil War his parents moved to northern Indiana and after finishing at a local school he attended the Central Indiana Normal College at Danville, Ind. In the fall of 1884 he moved to Neligh, Neb., where he kept his home all the rest of his life.

A few years after becoming a Nebraskan he was elected county clerk of Antelope County. After four years in that office he became a dealer in real estate and later opened the Auditorium theatre, using road shows at first. Later he was among the first theatre operators to play motion pictures in Nebraska.

Shortly after the World War he served a term as mayor of Neligh and then was appointed state game warden. Soon after this he turned over the operation of his Moon theatre in Neligh to his son-in-law, Walter Bradley, its present operator.

The weekly Colyum in the HERALD began in 1926 after Mr. Jenkins had resigned as game warden to become the magazine's field representative. His writings had a homely touch with much of the rural philosophy exemplified in the stage and vaudeville characters depicted by Chic Sale with whose family he had been acquainted in Indiana and with whom he renewed the friendship on a visit to Hollywood in 1925.

In 1929—July 8 to 15—Jaysee was toasted as the guest of honor at a convention of contributors to "What the Picture Did for Me" at Detroit Lakes, Minn.

In the fall of 1938 he rented his home in Neligh and went to San Fernando, Cal., to spend the winter with his daughter, Ruth. Returning to Nebraska in February, 1939, he lived at the Nehoco hotel until three weeks ago when he was stricken with a heart attack.

Besides his two daughters he is survived by a son, Meryl, train despatcher for the Burlington Railroad at Casper, Wyo.

"JAYSEE" J. C. JENKINS

". . . Don't trust to luck, for there is no such animal in this business. Luck stepped out of the exhibition picture when the producers stepped in."

". . . We met a bunch of fellows in the hatchery (Wisconsin) who told a lot of fish stories that sounded pretty good for novices, but when we opened up on 'em they all had to give in and admit that the fish they had caught would only make good bait for us. . . .

". . . Eventually sound service will come down to a level where you can operate with it. . . . There is a lot of difference in the price of an article, whether the buyer is out looking for the seller or whether the seller is out looking for the buyer. . . . If that isn't good logic you can take the mules back home at your own price."

". . . Well, it's time to slop the shoats and milk the cows, so let's quit and call it a day. With the best of good wishes. . . ."

(Excerpts from Jaysee's Colyums in Exhibitor's Herald - World and MOTION PICTURE HERALD)

Russell McEwan Dies

Russell McEwan, a Brother in the Society of Atonement at Graymoor, Garrison, N. Y., died of pneumonia there at the age of 23. Mr. McEwan was connected with Quigley Publications for more than four years and before entering Graymoor was a member of the editorial staff of MOTION PICTURE HERALD. Funeral services were held at the seminary at Garrison on Tuesday, February 27th.

S. E. Gordon, 56, Dies in Baltimore

Solomon Engel Gordon, 56, president of the Jefferson Amusement Company and East Texas Theatres, died in a Baltimore, Md., hospital February 27th. Funeral services and interment were held in Beaumont, Tex., his native city, March 1st.

Mr. Gordon, an usher in the old Kyle theatre in Beaumont in his school days, and J. C. Clemmons, in 1918, formed the Jefferson Amusement Company with headquarters at Beaumont. Eight years later he organized the East Texas Theatres, which operates more than 70 houses over an area in Texas extending from the Gulf as far north as Greenville and Marshall. Mr. Gordon's son, Julius, is expected to continue the operations.

Mr. Gordon was also senior member of the legal firm, Gordon, Sharfstein, Bell and Weinert. The first prominent recognition in the legal profession came to Mr. Gordon in 1913 when he was named assistant attorney general of Texas in the prosecution of the General Film Company under the anti-trust laws and won the case.

He was associated in the prosecution of the case with William Fox, founder of the Fox Film Company. It was through this association and with the knowledge gained through prosecution of the case that Mr. Gordon became interested in the business.

In the era of the NRA, Mr. Gordon was active in a code which affected theatres and he attended hearings in company with some of the important amusement industry figures.

William Yoost Dies; New York Exhibitor

William Yoost, 60, New York City exhibitor, died March 4th at Miami Beach, Fla., where he was vacationing. Mr. Yoost was born January 3, 1880, in Brooklyn. In 1914 he acquired the Novelty theatre and four years later began building his own theatres. They included the Amphion, Royal, Chaloner, Superior, 34th Street, and Regent. He also acquired the Circle. Mr. Yoost was president of individual companies operating the theatres.

Frank Murphy Dies on Coast

Frank N. Murphy, 55, former head of Warner Brothers studio's electrical department, died February 28th in Hollywood of a heart ailment which followed a long illness. Mr. Murphy retired from his Warner Brothers post two years ago. He joined the company shortly after 1920 and with the late Sam Warner and Major Nathan Levinson helped in the improvement of early sound equipment. His associates credited him with persuading manufacturers to build huge incandescent lamps to replace the sputtering, noisy arcs so long in use.

Philip Wood, Actor, Dead

Philip Wood, 45, actor of the stage and screen and co-author of the comedy, "Lend Me Your Ears," which was presented in New York in 1936, died in Hollywood March 4th of a heart attack. Mr. Wood had recently finished playing the part of the organist in the film version of Thornton Wilder's "Our Town," and had signed a contract to act in a new picture, "Brother Orchid."

Curtain Call

(RKO Radio)

Plays and Players

As its title implies, "Curtain Call" deals with the stage, more particularly with an amateurish play purchased by a Broadway producer in hopes of making his star remain with his company by threatening to make her play in it. The star thinks the play is fine, the amateur playwright believes her work finally and successfully launched.

The complexities finally are ironed out by a cast which has Barbara Read, last in "Married and in Love," as the aspiring dramatist; John Archer, of "Career," playing the home town boy who wants to marry her; Helen Vinson as the temperamental actress; Alan Mowbray, the stage director, and Donald MacBride, the producer.

Based on an original story by Howard J. Green, the screen play was written by Dalton Trumbo, whose work includes "Career" and "A Man to Remember." Both Howard Benedict, the producer, and Frank Woodruff, who directed, embarked here on their first film effort. Woodruff had directed both radio and stage plays previously.

Release date: April 26, 1940.

ONTARIO GETS $201,000; NEW CANADIAN CENSOR

New Corporation Tax in Dominion Brings Heavy Levies on Film Companies

Preliminary figures presented by Premier M. F. Hepburn in the Ontario Provincial legislature in connection with the 1940-41 budget indicate that the Government's revenue from film censorship and theatre licenses during the fiscal year ending March 31st will amount to $201,000. The total last year was $206,088. Estimated expenses for the present fiscal year were placed at $34,331. The new budget provides for 1940-41 expenditures for censorship and theatre inspection of $45,525.

Corporation Tax Imposed

Incorporated film companies, including theatres, exchanges and equipment firms, are hit by heavily increased taxation in the adoption of the Corporation Tax Act of 1940. The levy on business incomes has been increased from two to five per cent, retroactive to January 31, 1939. The bill when first introduced provided for a taxation increase which would have covered company income for both 1938 and 1939 but in the face of strong objection it was amended to include only 11 months of 1939. The profits tax was largely devised as a substitute for the proposed provincial amusement tax which netted the Goverment $2,000,000 a year before it was abolished in 1937.

New Censor

Fulgence Charpentier, former newspaperman, has been appointed chief of Federal censor, succeeding Claude Melancon. He will have jurisdiction over films and radio as well as the press. Mr. Melancon has been transferred to the Bureau of Public Information to cooperate with Col. J. A. Cooper, acting National Film Commissioner, in the making of official films.

With the appointment of G. Herbert Lash as director of public information, succeeding Walter Thompson the Dominion Government has launched a film production program under the sponsorship of the Bureau of Information and the National Film Board.

One picture will be released each month dealing with Canada's wartime activities. The official series will include "Private Lives," depicting the activities of the Canadian troops now in England, and "Atlantic Patrol," dealing with the naval and air force along the Atlantic seacoast.

To Film Altmark Incident

It has been reported in Montreal that the Altmark incident in which British sailors rescued more than 300 British seamen imprisoned on a German ship, will be made into a propaganda feature film.

Pioneers Club Formed

Clair Hague, Universal representative at Toronto and in the film business since 1901, has been made chairman of the Canadian Pioneer Film Club, membership in which is restricted to those who have been in the trade for 25 years or more.

Included on the committee are: Louis Rosenfeld: Columbia; James P. O'Loghlin, Twentieth Century-Fox; H. M. Masters, United Artists; Leo Devaney, RKO; Oscar Hanson, Empire; E. H. Wells, Canadian Film Board of Trade; and the following exhibitors: Sam Sternberg, Herbert Allen, Jake Smith, Ben Cronk, Charles Stephenson, Frederick Pursel, Sidney B. Taube and Ray Lewis, acting secretary.

$500,000 FIRE AT PARIS STUDIOS

Fire in the Pathe studios southeast of Paris this week destroyed seven sound stages causing damages estimated at $500,000. Pathe officials attributed the blaze to a "technical accident." In the stages of production at the studio was "Hitler Told Me," which is based on the Hermann Rauschning's book, "The Voice of Destruction."

Navy Film Budget

Rejecting an appeal by the Bureau of Navigation for an additional $50,000 for the leasing of motion pictures, the House of Representatives' Appropriations Committee last week reported the Navy Department supply bill for 1941. It allocated only the usual $85,000 for showing films to enlisted men on fighting ships and at shore stations.

Robert J. Horner, general manager of American Pictures, announced in Hollywood this week that his company will produce four top-budget Spanish pictures for the Latin-American market. The first, "Sabotaje," with George Negrete and Julian Rivero, goes before the cameras October 15th. Mr. Horner is negotiating for the services of Amanda Varela, of Argentina.

Adopt Dual Shows

Lucas & Jenkins Paramount theatre in Atlanta has adopted a double feature policy, becoming the first downtown Atlanta theatre to do so. The same circuit's Capitol theatre is adopting a policy of stage and screen four days over the weekend, and following with a picture for three days. The Roxy theatre, an independent, will do the same.

Three Features in Censor Difficulties

"Hitler, Beast of Berlin" continued to run into difficulties with the censor board this week while a more recent picture imported into this country, "Life on the Hortobagy," was banned in New York State.

Aaron J. Levy, New York supreme court justice, banned exhibition of "Life on the Hortobagy," upholding the New York Board of Censors. The picture, imported from Hungary, depicts the foaling of a mare, one of the scenes to which the censors objected. Jack Haupt, who imported the film, argued that it portrayed pictorial news.

In Atlanta, Ga., "Ecstasy," the motion picture which last May was enjoined, was brought up again when John H. Carter, Brookhaven theatre manager, sought a writ of certiorari on contempt of court charges. Carter was fined $200 and sentenced to 10 days in jail after showing "Ecstasy" at a midnight show. The writ of certiorari asks for a review of his trial by the supreme court.

Meanwhile, Chicago's censor board for the third time banned the showing of "Hitler, Beast of Berlin," despite cuts and changes in the film title.

RCA NET RISES 9%; LISTS RKO HOLDINGS

Gross Billings of NBC and Columbia Broadcasting Increase; Mutual Shows Gain

Radio Corporation of America, parent of RCA Communications and of the National Broadcasting Company radio and television units and half owner of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation this week reported a consolidated net profit of $8,082,811 for 1939, an increase of $670,739 over the preceding year. The consolidated gross income was $110,494,398, an increase of $10,526,288.

All subsidiaries, including NBC, RCA Manufacturing, RCA Communications, Radiomarine Corporation of America, and RCA Institutes, operated on a profitable basis for the year, the report said, but gave no breakdown of figures.

Equals 35 Cents a Share

The profit was equivalent to earnings of 35 cents per share on outstanding common stock, after payment of all preferred dividends. Manufacturing provided 50.7 per cent of RCA's gross income, broadcasting 36.9 per cent, communications 7.9 per cent, and all other sources, 4.5 per cent.

Total current assets amounted to $44,358,951 at the end of 1939, compared with $41,931,924 for 1938. Liabilities were $18,612,686 as compared with $13,259,860.

The report called attention to two new television developments which are now technically ready for public service. The radio relay system for a television network is the first and large screen television is the other. About the latter, the report said:

"The other new television development is the improved projection of a large screen television image, of a size and clarity suitable for theatre presentation. Large screen television will permit the showing of current events and other programs to large audiences. The relay system described offers a practical means for distributing television programs to theatres, whether in a single locality or in the several cities of a television network."

RCA this week announced a quarterly dividend on the outstanding shares of the $3.50 cumulative convertible first preferred stock of 87½ cents per share and $1.25 per share on the outstanding shares of the "B" preferred, payable April 1st to stockholders of record March 11th.

RKO Holdings and Applications Listed

Radio Corporation stockholders became apprised of the corporation's holdings in RKO in the annual report. As a result of RKO's reorganization completed last January, RCA's investment in RKO, in place of the securities shown on the balance sheet, is now represented by the following securities of the reorganized company: 44,757 shares of 100 par value 6 per cent convertible preferred stock (annual dividends of $268,542 are cumulative after February 1, 1940), 316,328 shares of common stock, and 555,254 option warrants. Each warrant entitles (but does not obligate) RCA during the next 10 years to buy one share of RKO common stock at $15 per share, or, during the next five years, to buy one-half share at $10 per share.

In the protracted RKO reorganization proceedings, applications for allowances and disbursements totaling $97,786 were filed in United States district court, New York, last Friday, by Ernest W. Stirn and five attorneys who represented him.

John S. Stover, New York lawyer, who acted for Mr. Stirn in his attempted appeal to the Supreme Court from the order confirming the reorganization plan, has not filed any application.

Mr. Stirn, a holder of 1,234 Class A shares of RKO stock, remarked, in his application, that he helped reduce a claim of Rockefeller Center, Inc.

The Stirn attorneys who filed were H. William Ihrig, of Milwaukee, for $4,122; Arthur M. Gleason, of Utica, for $7,418; Saltiel and Saltiel, of Chicago for $21,025; Harry J. Allen, of Milwaukee, for $4,503; and Lines Spooner, and Quarles, of Milwaukee, for $10,718.

J. & W. Seligman & Company, depository for RKO debentures during the reorganization, applied in the same court, on Monday, for a final allowance of $8,750. The company functioned in the said capacity from 1935 to this year.

Last week, in New York federal court, Neil P. Cullom, attorney for the United States National Bank of Denver, filed an application for a final allowance of $1,500 in the RKO reorganization. The bank had acted as trustee for bondholders of the Denver Orpheum Company.

Other applications, filed last week and before, were those of the Chemical Bank and Trust Company, of New York, trustees for RKO, for $25,000 for its services; of Wright, Gordon, Zachry and Parkin, bank attorneys, for $38,125 in addition to disbursements; of Florence J. Sullivan, attorney, for $14,500.

Applicants have until next Friday to file for allowances.

Attorneys for Atlas Corporation asked Federal Judge William Bondy for an extension to March 25th.

In Los Angeles, meanwhile, Joseph Ermolieff's $1,042,500 suit against RKO, for breach-of-contract, was transferred, last week, from that city's Superior, to Federal court.

NBC and CBS Radio Billings Soar

Gross billings at NBC continued their upward trend in February with a 10.2 per cent rise over the same month last year. Billings totalled $4,132,084 for both the Red and Blue networks. The total gross revenue for the first two months of this year was $8,537,292, an increase of 9.7 per cent over $7,782,595 for the same period last year.

The Blue network billings rose to $905,101 for an increase of 17 per cent over February, 1939, while the Red grossed $3,226,983, an increase of 8.5 per cent over February, 1938.

Gross time sales by broadcasting stations and networks of the United States last year amounted to an estimated $171,113,813, an increase of 14 per cent over the preceding year, according to the 1940 Yearbook of Broadcasting Magazine. The actual net income, after deduction of cash and frequency discounts but not deducting agency commission, totalled $130,800,000, a 12 per cent rise. Of the gross, the three major networks accounted for 48.5 per cent, local times sales for 27 per cent and spot broadcasting for 24.5 per cent.

CBS and Mutual billings showed gains in February. CBS grosses rose 31 per cent over the same month last year, while Mutual jumped 22.1 per cent. In February, CBS billings were $3,330,627, compared with $2,541,542 last year. Total for the first two months were $6,919,616, a rise of 32.7 per cent over $5,215,599 for the same period last year.

Mutual's February gross was $337,649 against $276,605 last year.

First-Run Problem For Chicago Operators

Aaron Jones, of the Jones, Linick & Schaefer circuit in Chicago, operating the Oriental theatre, was in New York last week seeking additional first-run product for the Oriental when "Gone With the Wind" completes its run. Mr. Jones conferred with major company officials in the hope of getting "Grapes of Wrath," "Pinocchio" and other such films.

Balaban & Katz, however, was to open "Grapes of Wrath" for showing at the Chicago theatre March 1st and the RKO Palace is expected, in Chicago, to play "Pinocchio" when its release date for Chicago is announced.

Muzak, "Wired Music," Gets 73 More Outlets

Muzak, purveyors of "wired music" to hotels, bars, restaurants, and the home, last week acquired 73 New York City outlets, formerly serviced by its competitors, Tele-Music and Tele-Programs.

There had been reports of the latter's absorption by Muzak, but this was not confirmed. Wholesale Radio had been operating Tele-Music; while Muzak is a subsidiary of Associated Records.

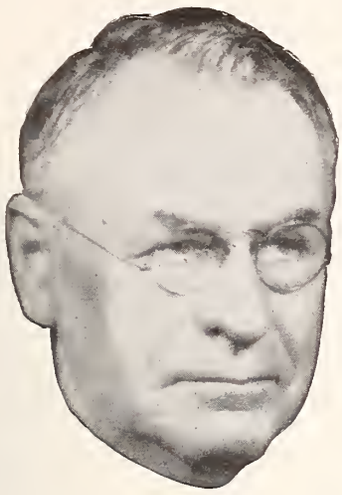
Hebert in Exploitation Post

William Hebert, former advertising and publicity director for Selznick-International, has been signed to handle special exploitation on the next feature cartoon from the Fleischer Studio. The deal was set by Robert Gillham, Paramount advertising and publicity director, under whom Mr. Hebert will work. The studio has several stories under consideration.

Rice an Arbitrator

Elmer Rice, playwright, has been placed on the national panel of arbitrators of the American Arbitration Association, to serve in theatrical disputes. The organized motion picture industry is a member of the Association.

Connecticut Fire Ruling



Exhibitors in the New Haven territory have been advised by the Connecticut police that they may not operate vaudeville shows, if their theatres are not built with solid fireproof proscenium construction and lack asbestos curtains. To this ruling is attributed cessation of vaudeville in Madison, Saybrook, Plainfield and Plainville.

Hits Film Gangsters

E. P. Coffey, chief of the technical bureau of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, criticized the motion pictures for portraying gangsters too handsomely, in an address before the Philadelphia Cinema Club Tuesday. Another guest speaker was Harry Goldberg, director of exploitation for Warner Brothers' theatres.

Change Opening Days

Three of the four large theatres operated by Fanchon & Marco in St. Louis have changed opening days. The Fox will change programs on Saturdays, the St. Louis on Wednesday, and the Missouri on Saturday. The Ambassador will continue to open on Friday.

40 TO 50 PROPAGANDA FILMS SET IN BRITAIN

New Chief, Sir Kenneth Clark, Adopts Elastic Policy and Trade Collaborates

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Losing no time since his appointment to direction of the Film Section of Britain's Ministry of Information, Sir Kenneth Clark already has made his impress on the British industry, met its leaders, developed plans for a wide use of the screen in national propaganda, already put a select number of films on the floor and obtained the collaboration of the trade in nationwide showing of them.

Liaison Committee

Sir Kenneth a few days back invited leaders of all trade sections to a meeting at the Senate House, London University, in whose chaste and sacrosanct walls the Ministry of Information holds constant court. Present were chiefs of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, the Kinematograph Renters Society, the Newsreel Association and of the shorts producers' group. What is in effect a trade consultative committee now exists for liaison between the Ministry and the industry.

The committee consists of David Griffiths and Frank Hill, president and secretary, respectively, of the K.R.S.; E. J. Hinge and W. R. Fuller, president and secretary of the C.E.A.; Bruce Woolfe, of the Shorts Producers Association, W. J. Gell, Sir Gordon Craig, and Castleton Knight of the Newsreel Association, Michael Balcon and Paul Kimberley of the Producers Group, and F. Hoare and R. J. Horton of the Sub-Standard Association.

Production at the Ealing Studios of three short films aimed to educate the public to the need of discretion in conversation in wartime has already been noted. By arrangement between the KRS and the CEA, the three pictures, distributed by Metro in this country, will be shown free in every cinema in Great Britain.

More Shorts Commissioned

These do not, however, exhaust the production program of the Ministry. Nor do they represent, either, what already has been achieved. Other short films of documentary type have been commissioned by Sir Kenneth, some of them already made. Practically every one of the more responsible documentary groups is either at work on Ministry of Information films or will be soon.

Sir Kenneth's policy is elastic. In some instances films are being made to his order with the Ministry footing the bill. In other instances subjects proffered to him and approved have his material backing. Others have the Ministry's paternal benison but their own finance. In all cases so far the films concerned are shorts, in the main of the documentary variety.

40 to 50 Shorts Already

Already a program of realist or documentary shorts in prospect reaches a total of between 45 and 50. The GPO Film Unit, the Realist Film Unit, Film Centre, all of which have taken a practical part in such productions, already would seem to be the logical production channel for such films. To Sir Kenneth, however, any organization suitably equipped and presenting production possibilities will be open to aid in the process.

It is the Ministry's determination that any films made either directly or indirectly under its sponsorship shall be essentially entertainment films, calculated to obtain the widest showing on their box office qualities. Such films would go out through normal commercial channels.

Producers independently aiming at the production of films which might have a propagandist appeal can canvass the blessing of the Ministry which will be ready if it seems politic to pass on to the Treasury, or the appropriate Government department, recommendations for material aid.

It will be difficult, ultimately, for either the public or the foreign market to identify which films have the Government benison and which not. The Kenneth Clark policy is deliberately to avoid any suspicion of propaganda which might hamper distribution.

Closer collaboration with the newsreels is another of Sir Kenneth's policies. No question of censorship, certainly no extension of the present system, is considered.

At the moment of writing a comprehensive scheme of co-operation is being worked out by the trade committee. It will be discussed with Sir Kenneth Clark.

Production Stimulus Seen

An early stimulus to British production and improvement of film supplies is foreseen in the annual report of the CEA.

The CEA General Council commends itself to the war-time achievements, the development of excellent relations with the Home Office, the settlement of booking disputes with distributors, and the "quick and effective work" on the reopening of theatres after the declaration of war.

The blackout is described as the one remaining "insurmountable" obstacle.

New Contract for Extras

A new standard contract to govern the employment of extras in British studios has been obtained by the Film Artists Association.

A steadily growing improvement in films is hailed by the Public Morality Council, English body, in its report on the year 1939.

"The sexy film has disappeared," says the Council, "and a larger proportion of films for the family are being shown. Murder dramas are decreasing to some extent and Westerns are increasingly popular."

Michael Balcon has resigned as president and a member of the British Film Production Association.

Libel Suit Dismissed

Historical characters whose lives are a matter of public interest lose their rights of privacy, Judge Norman V. Atkinson ruled in Houston, Texas, this week in dismissing the $1,000,000 suit brought by General Andrew Jackson Houston against Interstate Theatres, Republic and others for alleged libel of his father, Sam Houston, in the film, "Man of Conquest."

Drop Plagiarism Suit

Discontinuance of a $10,000 plagiarism suit brought by Select Theatres Corporation against Warner Brothers Pictures was filed Friday in federal court in New York. The action charged plagiarism of a literary composition, "The Audition," by the film "Ready, Able and Willing."

Try F&M Suit In St. Louis

Trial of a suit filed by Fanchon & Marco, Inc., and two of its subsidiaries to regain $42,200 paid in legal fees to John S. Leahy, attorney, and two of his partners, was started this week in circuit court in St. Louis. The company is endeavoring to show that Mr. Leahy insisted on the filing of an anti-trust action even after he learned that F&M had effected a settlement of their difficulties with the film distributors in New York.

Attorney General Roy McKittrick, called as a witness for the plaintiff, testified he would not have filed anti-trust and injunction suits against the major film distributors if he had known the film controversy had been settled. He said that Mr. Leahy did not tell him at the time he filed the suits that a settlement had been made. The anti-trust suits were dismissed.

The Fanchon & Marco Service Company and the St. Louis Amusement Company are among the defendants in a $50,000 damage suit filed in circuit court in St. Louis by Harold Toman, a picket at the Granada theatre, which is owned by the St. Louis Amusement Company, a subsidiary of F&M. The plaintiff charges false arrest while picketing the theatre.

Altermans Win Suit

A decision in favor of the defendants was handed down this week in New York supreme court in the $250,000 suit brought by William Isensee against Louis Alterman, Jack Alterman, Long Island Motion Picture Company and Coy Operating Company. Mr. Isensee, a majority stockholder of the Long Island Motion Picture Company, owner of the building in which the Savoy theatre is housed, charged that the Altermans, minority stockholders, had leased the theatre to themselves under the name of the Coy Operating Company and have been operating it since 1929 without his knowledge. He also charged that insufficient rental was paid the realty company.

Kaster Gains Verdict

A verdict for the defendant has been rendered by a jury in New York court in the suit of the Esco Operating Corporation against William Kaster. Filed in 1938, the suit charged that Esco, a subsidiary of the Cocalis Circuit, and part owner of the Manhattan theatre, was overcharged by Mr. Kaster, also an owner, on alteration costs.

Entitled to Patent

The right of the Kinestone Patents Corporation to a patent for a new method of printing film involving an ultra violet system was upheld this week in an oral decision by Judge Oscar Luhring of the federal court in Washington, D. C. The decision was rendered in favor of W. D. Foster of New York, head of the Patents Corporation and was directed against the Commissioner of Patents.

File Damage Suit

The Ten-O-Win Amusement Company of San Francisco has filed a $100,000 damage suit against the Casino theatre, owned and operated by P. H. Markowitz, charging infringement of patents and copyrights. The plaintiff claims the theatre, after using Ten-O-Win three months, substituted a brand new game called "States," using equipment similar in all material details to the Ten-O-Win equipment.

FIGHTING 69th, THE: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, George Brent, Jeffrey Lynn, Alan Hale, Dennis Morgan—Excellent business witb this percentage picture. Cagney a good draw here and tbe story was duck soup for Jimmy. Absence of women in the war saga unnoticed. This is strong meat, roasted to a turn by timeliness, savored by typical dougbboy humor. ON YOUR TOES: Zorina. Eddie Albert. Alan Hale, James Gleason, Gloria Dickson—This first one of curvaceous Zorina, ballerina, is disappointing all the way around. WE ARE NOT ALONE: Paul Muni, Jane Bryan, Flora Robson, Una O'Connor—A beautiful, artistic picture in the class with "Goodbye, Mr. Chips", tbis grand Hilton story did only average business. SHOP AROUND THE CORNER: Margaret Sullavan, James Stewart, Frank Morgan—Played this exactly one week after Universal's "Destry Rides Again" and business was about the same the first night and off fifty per cent the second night. We couldn't see wbere there was much entertainment in this one, although a few said they did like it. Give us James Stewart in action pictures and be will be a big star but he never will get anywbere around bere witb such as "Sbop Around the Corner". Running time, 100 minutes. Played February 21-22.—I. F. Bobbitt, Stearns Theatre, Stearns, Ky. Mining and small town patronage.

STAND UP AND FIGHT: Wallace Beery, Robert Taylor, Florence Rice, Helen Broderick, Charles Bickford—A picture dealing with tbe growth of an early railroad and the opposition given by a stagecoach line. Beery and Taylor turn in a performance that leaves nothing to be desired. Heard no unfavorable comments and some came back to see this picture the third time so it must have pleased. Running time, 97 minutes. Played February 16-17.—John E. Moore, Star Theatre, Coronation, Alberta, Canada. General patronage.

STAND UP AND FIGHT: Wallace Beery, Robert Taylor, Florence Rice, Helen Broderick, Charles Bickford—Great picture. Metro always comes through for us. Running time, 78 minutes. Played February 28-March 1.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

TELL NO TALES: Melvyn Douglas, Louise Platt—Just fair. Business off on this one.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

THUNDER AFLOAT: Wallace Beery, Chester Morris, Virginia Grey—Good action picture. Wallace Beery very good in a plausible story. And speak of stories, we surely have had some pretty thin stuff coming out of Hollywood this last year. I don't blame people for staying home.—C. V. Schofield, Blackhawk Theatre, Lansing, Iowa. General patronage.

THUNDER AFLOAT: Wallace Beery, Chester Morris. Virginia Grey—A mighty good picture for the men. Bad weather only could hurt it. Played February 6-7.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. General patronage.

WIZARD OF OZ, THE: Judy Garland. Frank Morgan, Ray Bolger, Bert Lahr, Jack Haley. Billie Burke, Margaret Hamilton—Liked by the kids. Adults gave it the go by. Personally I liked it. Think Metro made a mistake in mentioning "Snow White" with it. If you can get schools to cooperate (which I could not), step on it. Running time, 101 minutes. Played February 18-19.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre. Paris, Ark. General patronage.

Monogram

ROLL, WAGONS, ROLL: Tex Ritter—Not as well liked as some of his others.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. General patronage.

Paramount

BEAU GESTE: Gary Cooper, Ray Milland, Robert Preston, Brian Donlevy—Good picture; fair business. Would have done more business if I had played it sooner. It pleased all who saw it. Running time, 110 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

The death of J. C. Jenkins on Tuesday in Neligh, Nebraska, took a figure beloved by thousands of exhibitors and other readers of "What the Picture Did for Me."

Details appear on page 60.

BORN TO THE WEST: John Wayne, Marsha Hunt—Played to nice weekend business on dual bill.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tulbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

CAT AND THE CANARY, THE: Bob Hope, Paulette Goddard—Did good business considering it was the day after a bad snowstorm and practically all the side roads were blocked. Seemed to please the majority. Played January 14-16.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

DISPUTED PASSAGE: Dorothy Lamour, Akim Tamiroff, John Howard—Lamour miscast. Story badly directed. Only saving grace was Tamiroff. Did not do average business. Running time, 87 minutes. Played February 13-15.—Leo Guerrein, Jr., Hippodrome Theatre, Erie, Pa. Neighborhood patronage.

DISPUTED PASSAGE: Dorothy Lamour, Akim Tamiroff, John Howard—We lost money on this one but it was no fault of the picture. The side roads were blocked and the temperature was twenty below zero. Those who dared to come out were well pleased. Played January 17-18.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

EMERGENCY SQUAD: William Henry, Louise Campbell, Robert Paige—A swell little picture with plenty of action and a different police plot. Running time, 58 minutes. Played February 24-27.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

GERONIMO: Preston Foster, William Henry, Andy Devine, Ellen Drew—This just missed being a big picture. Business was fair. Running time, 90 minutes. Played February 21-22.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

GRAND JURY SECRETS: John Howard, Gail Patrick—Good program picture for double bills. Played with "Renegade Trail". Running time, 68 minutes. Played February 9-10.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

GULLIVER'S TRAVELS: Color Cartoon Feature—Film rental entirely too high for this one. All kid business with few adults. "Gabby" had 'em laughing all the way. Running time, 77 minutes. Played February 11-14.—Roy Heffner, Jr., Key Theatre. Middleboro, Mass. General patronage.

GULLIVER'S TRAVELS: Color Cartoon Feature—A kids show that brought the adults. Played February 15-18.—D. Ratner, White Bear Theatre. White Bear Lake, Minn. General patronage.

HIGH, WIDE AND HANDSOME: Irene Dunne, Randolph Scott, Dorothy Lamour—A little too highbrow for our natives in spots. Business only average. A little too old.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre. Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LAW OF THE PAMPAS: William Boyd. Russell Hayden, Steffi Duna; RANGE WAR: William Boyd. Russell Hayden—These Hopalongs are tops. Wish I could get them in some towns I know of second-run. Why Paramount refuses to sell second-run in towns of 5,000 to 10,000 is a mystery to me, as these size towns are the ones where Hopalong is best liked.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. General patronage.

RENEGADE TRAILS: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, George Hayes—Okay western. Played February 20.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook. N. H. General patronage.

RENEGADE TRAILS: William Boyd. Russell Hayden, George Hayes—Played with "Grand Jury Secrets." This Hopalong series is losing out as far as westerns are concerned. Some action would create more interest in this series. Running time, 68 minutes. Played February 9-10.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

SANTA FE MARSHAL: William Boyd, Marjorie Rambeau, Russell Hayden—Hopalongs still running 100 per cent here. Gave us a very nice business to beat some of the more highly touted productions. Running time, 71 minutes. Played February 24-27.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

STAR MAKER, THE: Bing Crosby, Louise Campbell, Ned Sparks, Linda Ware—Very good picture but for some reason failed to draw them in. Springlike weather. Running time, 94 minutes. Played February 19-21.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

STOLEN LIFE: Elisabeth Bergner, Michael Redgrave—English feature but something decidedly different. My patrons liked it. Business average. Running time, 90 minutes. Played February 23-24.—Leo Guerrein, Jr., Hippodrome Theatre, Erie, Pa. Neighborhood patronage.

WHAT A LIFE: Jackie Cooper, Betty Field, John Howard, Lionel Stander—Jackie Cooper turns in as nice a characterization of the typical American youth as ever Master Rooney conceived. Swell family entertainment and should go over in both rural and urban districts. Jackie plays his role much straighter than Mickey would have, which comes as a welcome relief to patrons slightly tired of mugging histrionics. Running time, 79 minutes. Played February 13-14.—Don Logan, Del Rio Theatre, Los Banos, Cal. Rural and small town patronage.

WHAT A LIFE: Jackie Cooper, Betty Field, John Howard, Lionel Stander—Excellent high school feature everybody liked and told me so. Running time, 75 minutes. Played February 4-5.—Leo Guerrein, Jr., Hippodrome Theatre, Erie, Pa. Neighborhood patronage.

Republic

COLORADO SUNSET: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey, Buster Crabbe—Good old Gene. A real box office stimulant. Well received. Great creditor picture. We can pay one bill when Gene comes to town.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre. Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

DAYS OF JESSE JAMES: Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes—Drew mighty well and pleased. Title had a lot of pulling power, of course. Played February 8-9.—G. Carey, Strand Theatre, Paris, Ark. General patronage.

SABOTAGE: Charley Grapewin, Arleen Whelan, Gordon Oliver—Played this as companion feature to "Little Accident". It is a very timely subject, dealing with sabotage in a small town airplane factory. Has just enough comedy in it to make excellent entertainment. Had plenty of favorable comments from the crowd on this picture. Running time, 69 minutes. Played February 12-13.—John E. Moore, Star Theatre, Coronation, Alberta, Canada. General patronage.

SOUTH OF THE BORDER: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Here is the best Autry of all. Played it on Sunday and did OK. You can't go wrong on this one. What has Autry got that other stars haven't? Running time, 70 minutes. Played February 18-19.—Joe Schindele. Granite Theatre, Granite Falls, Minn. Small town patronage.

VILLAGE BARN DANCE: Richard Cromwell, Doris Day, Lulu Belle and Scotty—One of the best "B" pictures we have played in a long while and that takes in all companies. Will please on any program.

Running time, 72 minutes. Played February 18-20.—Roy Heffner, Jr., Key Theatre, Middelboro, Mass. General patronage.

WYOMING OUTLAW: Three Mesquiteers (John Wayne, Ray Corrigan, Raymond Hatton). Donald Barry—A good western. However, our western fans complain that they change the cast too often. Running time, 56 minutes. Played February 16-17.—Joe Schindele, Avalon Theatre, Granite Falls, Minn. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

ALLEGHENY UPRISING: John Wayne, Claire Trevor, Brian Donlevy, George Sanders—This is not a Sunday picture but consider it an excellent picture for Friday and Saturday. Played February 9-10.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

BACHELOR MOTHER: Ginger Rogers, David Niven, Charles Coburn—Very good. I believe the best that Ginger has made to date with regard to story and acting. Business above average. Running time, 81 minutes. Played January 30-February 1.—Leo Guerrein, Jr., Hippodrome Theatre, Erie, Pa. Neighborhood patronage.

CAREER: Edward Ellis, Anne Shirley, Leon Errol—Nice picture although slow in spots. Errol should be given more feature roles. Running time, 80 minutes. Played February 16-17.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

FIFTH AVENUE GIRL: Ginger Rogers, Walter Connolly, James Ellison, Tim Holt—Good entertainment but not the draw that "Bachelor Mother" was. Played January 21-22.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

FLYING DEUCES: Laurel and Hardy, Jean Parker—Laurel and Hardy should confine their so-called acting to singles. Running time, 69 minutes. Played February 19-20.—John E. Moore, Star Theatre, Coronation, Alberta, Canada. General patronage.

MEET DR. CHRISTIAN: Jean Hersholt, Dorothy Lovett—Our patrons seemed to take quite well to this first of the series. Played January 19-20.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MR. DOODLE KICKS OFF: Joe Penner, June Travis—We had a chance to pass this up but were sorry we didn't. A flop at the BO. The picture is pure silly. Penner is through as far as the screen is concerned. Running time, 77 minutes. Played February 16-17.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

NURSE EDITH CAVELL: Anna Neagle, Edna May Oliver, May Robson, George Sanders, Zasu Pitts—A good picture unlike most. Purely an account of Miss Cavell's actions during the war. Folks liked it better than we anticipated. Many compliments. Played February 7-8.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TIMBER STAMPEDE: George O'Brien, Marjorie Reynolds—Pretty fair action picture for double bill. O'Brien not well liked here so no draw. He must be sort of a sniper man the way he mows them down.—C. V. Schofield, Blackhawk Theatre, Lansing, Iowa. General patronage.

TWELVE CROWDED HOURS: Richard Dix, Lucille Ball—The average run of better program pictures. OK for double bills. Played February 22-24.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

CISCO KID AND THE LADY, THE: Cesar Romero, Marjorie Weaver—Good, though not outstanding in any way. Played February 16-17.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DAY-TIME WIFE: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Warren William, Binnie Barnes—A good society comedy with no small town draw.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

EVERYTHING HAPPENS AT NIGHT: Sonja Henie, Ray Milland, Robert Cummings—Excellent picture. Fair box office. Sonja looks lovely as ever. Ray Milland and Robert Cummings are both fine. Played February 18-19.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ROSE OF WASHINGTON SQUARE: Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, Al Jolson, William Frawley—This one made "everybody happy". Power OK except for unnecessary gum chewing. Alice Faye as pleasing as ever. Al Jolson, well, it certainly did please the men to see and hear him again. Scenes that were outstanding in the eyes of our audience were: Power cuffed to the big Negro when leaving the Grand Central Station for Sing Sing; the drunken heckler and Jolson's singing of "Mammy". As might be expected, the old songs "wowed" the old timers. Running time, 90 minutes. Played February 17.—T. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation. Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SIX MORE REPORTING ON FILM REACTIONS

The week's mails brought reports from six more exhibitors on what the picture did for them at their box offices. The six are:

LEO GUERREIN, JR., Hippodrome Theatre, Erie, Pa.

JOHL LEVECK, P.T.A. Theatre, Benoit, Miss.

D. RARNER, White Bear Theatre, White Bear Lake, Minn.

JOE SCHINDELE, Avalon Theatre, Granite Falls, Minn.

C. V. SCHOFIELD, Blackhawk Theatre, Lansing, Iowa.

J. E. SINGLETON, Tyro Theatre, Marked Tree, Ark.

The first contributions from these showmen appear in the columns of the department this week.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Andrea Leeds, Al Jolson—Boys, this is a small town natural. Advertise it big, then watch the cashier smile. Running time, 84 minutes.—J. E. Singleton, Tyro Theatre, Marked Tree, Ark. Small town patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Andrea Leeds, Al Jolson—Splendid color photography. Good box office results on this one. Besides there were numerous and enthusiastic words of praise for it. Our nearest theatre neighbor was playing a show called "Gone with the Wind". Played February 11-12.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TOO BUSY TO WORK: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Joan Davis—This picture stars the so-called popular Jones Family. It is hard to believe that this family could be popular anywhere. It sure wasn't here. We had the largest number of walkouts for any picture we have ever played. Had another feature playing after this but even that could not induce them to stay. Running time, 65 minutes. Played February 19-20.—John E. Moore, Star Theatre, Coronation, Alberta, Canada. General patronage.

YOUNG AS YOU FEEL: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—A program picture which did fair business on family night. Running time, 60 minutes. Played February 20.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

YOUNG MR. LINCOLN: Henry Fonda, Marjorie Weaver, Alice Brady, Arleen Whelan—We picked this picture for Lincoln's Birthday. Had a tieup with the local Grade schools. Had advance ticket sale which resulted in outstanding business for three days. Played continuous Lincoln's Birthday. This picture is very good. Henry Fonda portrayal of Lincoln was outstanding. Credit is due to Mr. Weld, principal of these schools, for his fine work he did on this picture. Play this one by all means. Running time, 100 minutes. Played February 12-14.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

United Artists

CAPTAIN FURY: Brian Aherne, Victor McLaglen, June Lang, Paul Lukas—A good action picture without much drawing power. Would be all right if allocated in lower brackets. Running time, 101 minutes.—C. V. Schofield, Blackhawk Theatre, Lansing, Iowa. General patronage.

CAPTAIN FURY: Brian Aherne, Victor McLaglen, June Lang, Paul Lukas—Coupled with "Blondie Brings Up Baby". "Captain Fury" a swell action play. We did a good business. Played February 24.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DUKE OF WEST POINT, THE: Louis Hayward, Tom Brown, Joan Fontaine, Richard Carlson—Splendid picture. Much better than many so-called specials. Don't pass it up. Played February 1-3.—M. Bailey, Strand Theatre, Dryden, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

ETERNALLY YOURS: Loretta Young, David Niven, Billie Burke, C. Aubrey Smith, Hugh Herbert, Zasu Pitts—This pleased our Sunday crowd quite well. Played February 18-20.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

FOUR FEATHERS: Ralph Richardson, June Duprez, John Clements, C. Aubrey Smith—Here is a great picture but in our opinion it's too gruesome for the average audience. Too much torture and killing. Beautiful color. It's English made by English stars. Did average business. Running time, 115 minutes. Played February 20-22.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

HOUSEKEEPER'S DAUGHTER: Joan Bennett, Adolphe Menjou—Good clean comedy. Drew a good Sunday night crowd against "South of the Border". Joan Bennett "out-Hedy's" Hedy, and as one of my patrons told me, it would be worth the admission just to sit and look at her. Played February 4-6.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HOUSEKEEPER'S DAUGHTER: Joan Bennett, Adolphe Menjou—Okay comedy. Slow business. Played February 9-10.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

KING OF THE TURF: Adolphe Menjou, Dolores Costello, Roger Daniel—This picture did nice midweek business. A fine race horse picture. Much praise was received.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada.

THERE GOES MY HEART: Fredric March, Virginia Bruce, Patsy Kelly—Very good comedy if anyone wants it as old as it is now. Parts of it will wow any audience. Played February 14-15.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

THEY SHALL HAVE MUSIC: Jascha Heifetz, Andrea Leeds, Joel McCrea, Walter Brennan, Gene Reynolds, Terry Kilburn, Porter Hall—After reading the bitter criticism of three of our exhibitor friends, namely Jacqueline Carter, A. J. Inks and E. Hancock, it seems that the burden of rebuttal falls upon my shoulders. Several important features of the picture have been grossly ignored in their reports. One would think that Heifetz dominated the whole production. Such was not the case. The picture has three important elements which work together for good entertainment, comedy or pathos, romance and suspense. They did not mention the comedy supplied by such able artists as Walter Brennan, Terry Kilburn and the group of women who kept Porter Hall and his legal aides at bay while the children gave their recital. Or of the pathos of seeing the children deprived of the chance to learn more of the music they loved so well. There was romance supplied by Andrea Leeds and Joel McCrea. And there was suspense engendered by the fear of failure of Heifetz to arrive in time to make the concert a success. And then there was beautiful music supplied by Heifetz and the Junior Symphony orchestra.

All these factors made for entertainment. We wonder if these exhibitors were not prompted to write these criticisms from failure of the picture to be box office. Or because they had their eyes on the money box instead of on the screen. I have before me a list of the ten best pictures of the year. One picture of the ten has been a grosser in the smaller towns. Do we pan the other nine because they failed to draw? Are we sore because we played "Goodbye, Mr. Chips", "Dark Victory", "Wuthering Heights" or "The Old Maid" at a loss. I for one am not. I run a theatre in a very small town. Our men and women are not highbrow. They are just plain small town American people who like entertainment with plenty of vim, vigor and vitality.

Personally, I am glad there are still a few people who prefer the violin to the bazooka or the voice of a simple child to the rancous vocalizing of a blues singer. I am glad there are people who still prefer pictures which are basically clean and are not motivated by scenes of debauchery, cocktail parties, beer guzzling and gang murders.

And when the picture faded from the screen I did not hide in some dark corner. For these same people and I, myself, had sat and laughed and cried and were thrilled by the sheer artistry of the Heifetz genius. And, as they left the theatre, I heard them say one to another, "What a wonderful picture."

To tell "What the picture did for me" from a box office standpoint is one thing. To tell what it did to me and my audience artistically and emotionally is something else again.—C. V. Schofield, Blackhawk Theatre, Lansing, Iowa. General patronage.

THEY SHALL HAVE MUSIC: Jascha Heifetz, Joel McCrea, Andrea Leeds, Walter Brennan, Gene Reynolds—Just a very weak program feature with Heifetz thrown in a couple of scenes. If you can do business with that, book it. I starved on it. Running time, 120 minutes. Played February 6-8.—Leo Guerrein, Jr., Hippodrome Theatre, Erie, Pa. Neighborhood patronage.

TOPPER TAKES A TRIP: Roland Young, Constance Bennett, Billie Burke—Some liked it and some didn't. Personally thought it was a fairly entertaining picture. Box office only fair on this. Running time, 80 minutes. Played February 22-23.—A. R. Dakin, Rice Lake Theatre, Bissett, Manitoba, Canada. Mining community patronage.

WINTER CARNIVAL: Ann Sheridan, Richard Carlson, Helen Parrish—Why, oh, why, do they give us all the buildup on this kind of picture and then deliver only program product. There should be a law. Played January 23-25.—Leo Guerrein, Jr., Hippodrome Theatre, Erie, Pa. Neighborhood patronage.

Universal

BIG GUY: Victor McLaglen, Jackie Cooper—Played this one on Family Night with better than average business. Feature has plenty of excitement and is good entertainment. This was different from the past few Coopers we have played and we believe better. McLaglen played the usual role and was good. Running time, 78 minutes. Played February 19-20.—J. F. Bobbitt, Stearns Theatre, Stearns, Ky. Mining and small town patronage.

FIRST LOVE: Deanna Durbin, Helen Parrish, Robert Stack, Eugene Pallette, Leatrice Joy—Good picture but no draw. These Durbins always have a little too much opera and classic music for our audiences. Supporting cast, although little known, were well selected. Played January 28-29.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HOUSE OF FEAR: William Gargan, Irene Hervey—Nice weekend business with this. On a dual bill.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

I STOLE A MILLION: Claire Trevor, George Raft, Dick Foran, Henry Armetta, Victor Jory—Didn't do business. Weather too cold.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LITTLE ACCIDENT: Baby Sandy, Hugh Herbert, Florence Rice, Richard Carlson, Joy Hodges—This picture featuring Baby Sandy will certainly stand up to all the claims for it. The comedy starts right at the start and does not let up until the end. The audience was literally rolling in the aisles at the antics of Baby Sandy. Played it as double with "Sabotage" but it would stand alone in the small towns. Running time, 65 minutes. Played February 12-13.—John E. Moore, Star Theatre, Coronation, Alberta, Canada. General patronage.

MUTINY ON THE BLACKHAWK: Richard Arlen, Andy Devine, Noah Beery—We played this on a weekend and had very good results. Plenty of fighting and different from the usual run of action dramas. Glad to see Noah Beery again in action. Running time, 66 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

OH, JOHNNY, HOW YOU CAN LOVE: Tom Brown, Peggy Moran—Great little picture with plenty of laughs, melody and most everything good. Audience reaction swell. Business likewise. Running time, 65 minutes. Played February 28-March 1.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

THREE SMART GIRLS GROW UP: Deanna Durbin, Nan Grey, Helen Parrish, Charles Winninger, Robert Cummings, William Lundigan—Not so good on this one. Picture is just fair. Played January 25-27.—M. Bailey, Strand Theatre, Dryden, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

TWO BRIGHT BOYS: Jackie Cooper, Freddie Bartholomew—Poor title for a pretty good action movie. Just a bit old fashioned meller-style but okay because the boys are such fine players. Played February 22-23.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Pencook, N. H. General patronage.

UNDER-PUP, THE: Gloria Jean, Nan Grey, Robert Cummings, C. Aubrey Smith, Beulah Bondi, Virginia Weidler, Billy Gilbert—Here is one of the best family pictures we have played in a long while. It has all the elements necessary for good entertainment. Gloria Jean is very good and Billy Gilbert helps along with the comedy. Business off due to very poor title. And titles have spoiled many a good picture. —C. V. Schofield, Blackhawk Theatre, Lansing, Iowa. General patronage.

UNDER-PUP, THE: Gloria Jean, Nan Grey, Robert Cummings, C. Aubrey Smith, Beulah Bondi, Virginia Weidler—No draw but very well liked by those who came. The entire cast were very good. We are looking forward to Gloria Jean's next picture and think it will draw. She sings very nicely. Played February 11-12.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

UNDER-PUP, THE: Gloria Jean, Nan Grey, Robert Cummings, C. Aubrey Smith, Beulah Bondi, Virginia Weidler—A good picture. Miss Jean sings well and was well received locally. Played February 16-17.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

UNDER-PUP, THE: Gloria Jean, Nan Grey, Robert Cummings, C. Aubrey Smith, Beulah Bondi, Virginia Weidler—A nice little picture, Gloria Jean is a coming attraction. Running time, 88 minutes. Played February 11-12.—Joe Schindele, Granite Theatre, Granite Falls, Minn. Small town patronage.

UNEXPECTED FATHER: Dennis O'Keefe, Shirley Ross, Mischa Auer, Baby Sandy—Real good. Business like Shirley Temple used to be.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WHEN TOMORROW COMES: Irene Dunne, Charles Boyer—This picture gave us the lowest gross we have ever experienced on a Sunday change, which was what we expected when we asked to play this on a prize night and were told that we must play it on Sunday. I am confident we could have come out on it then, as the picture is interesting enough for our midweek fans. Irene Dunne and Charles Boyer do not draw our Sunday crowds. Played January 7-9.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

CHILD IS BORN, A: Geraldine Fitzgerald, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George—Just an average picture. We advertised it for adults only and had good business on Bank Nights. Running time, 79 minutes. Played February 13-14.—Joe Schindele, Granite Theatre, Granite Falls, Minn. Small town patronage.

DEAD END KIDS ON DRESS PARADE: "Dead End Kids", John Litel—Good entertainment that drew extra business. There was not a woman in the cast but no one seemed to notice it. Played February 1-3.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

DEAD END KIDS ON DRESS PARADE: Leo Gorcey, John Litel, "Dead End Kids"—A grand picture for young people but the young folks passed it up, so did Ma and Pa, so did the advocates of clean pictures. I didn't enjoy it for worrying about how I'd pay the film rental. The operator didn't enjoy it for wondering if he would get his pay. The ticket girls didn't enjoy it for thinking they would lose their jobs and Michael (he's my dog) didn't enjoy it because he knew there would be no dog biscuit this week, so a good time was not enjoyed by anyone. Leo Gorcey gives a wonderful performance; the cast is good; military academy locale is excellent. Plenty of action, good music but no glamour girls, no jitterbugs, no dancing, no drinking, no romance, therefore no draw at the box office. It is too bad this class of show does not draw but they are poison ivy to the small town. Thank Heaven, I am running "A Child Is Born" this weekend. Running time, 62 minutes. Played February 22-25.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

DODGE CITY: Errol Flynn, Anne Sheridan, Olivia de Havilland, Bruce Cabot, Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, Victor Jory—This was a return date on a Friday and Saturday, after we had run it five days last summer. It drew well, doing a little better than our usual weekend pictures. We well enjoyed seeing this excellent picture again. Played January 26-27.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

GARDEN OF THE MOON: Pat O'Brien, Margaret Lindsay, John Payne—A very old picture but one that has not lost its appeal. I have been going back and picking up some old pictures from Warners and they stack up at the BO better than some of the much publicized new pictures. If you have not played this one it is well worth going back for. Running time, 94 minutes. Played February 9-10.—John E. Moore, Star Theatre, Coronation, Alberta, Canada. General patronage.

GRANNY GET YOUR GUN: May Robson, Harry Davenport, Margot Stevenson—Good program picture which pleased fair business. Lacked star power. Running time, 56 minutes. Played February 23-24.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

NANCY DREW AND THE HIDDEN STAIRCASE: Bonita Granville, Frankie Thomas, John Litel—These Nancy Drew pictures were just beginning to mean extra business at the box office and then the company discontinues them. Wish we could have more of them. This one pleased greatly. Played January 5-6.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

NAUGHTY BUT NICE: Dick Powell, Ann Sheridan, Gale Page, Helen Broderick, Zasu Pitts—Here is a picture that kept the audience laughing from start until the fadeout. Good songs, plenty of comedy and did a nice business. It is not a big picture but a good evening's entertainment. Running time, 88 minutes. Played February 18-19.—Edelstein Amusement Co., Homer Theatre, Hibbing, Minn. General patronage.

PRIDE OF THE BLUE GRASS: Gantry, Edith Fellows, James McCallion—A dandy little picture which, if made in color and given a conspicuous cast, would have been a big picture. We received a lot of compliments on this one. Played February 16-17.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold. Iowa. General patronage.

PRIDE OF THE BLUE GRASS: Gantry, Edith Fellows, James McCallion—Pretty fair racing and horse picture that drew pretty well and seemed to please. More like a biographiçal sketch of the horse than a story. Hardly big enough for single unless used with lots of shorts. —C. V. Schofield, Blackhawk Theatre, Lansing, Iowa. General patronage.

PRIDE OF THE BLUE GRASS: Gantry, James McCallion, Edith Fellows—With a little more money and a bigger cast this would have been a wow. A satisfactory picture that pleased. Gantry is great, the cast fair. Struck bad weather as usual this winter. Running time, 65 minutes. Played February 2-4.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon. Kansas. Small town patronage.

PRIVATE LIVES OF ELIZABETH AND ESSEX: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland—A big picture. Business only fair. Not a small town show. Running time, 106 minutes.—J. E. Singleton, Tyro Theatre, Marked Tree, Ark. Small town patronage.

PRIVATE LIVES OF ELIZABETH AND ESSEX: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland—The action is superb, color gorgeous, supporting cast excellent, music grand, patronage zero minus. It is a great picture if you have the class of patronage that is interested in class pictures but the private lives of "E." and "E." were not lurid enough to get them in or keep them after they got there. Running time, 106 minutes. Played February 16-18.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

PRIVATE LIVES OF ELIZABETH AND ESSEX, THE: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland—Having heard so much about costume pictures played for rural communities I was afraid of this one. But although I played this in the worst month of the Winter, it drew better than expected and same was certainly enjoyed by all my patrons. Color good and Davis very good, and lucky to get a good print. Play it in Canada. Running time, 10 reels. Played February 9.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

PRIVATE LIVES OF ELIZABETH AND ESSEX: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Vincent Price—Color and sound were marvelous but why waste it on such a story. The money and stars used would have made several like "Pride of the Blue Grass", which in color and with a cast would really have meant something. Played February 14-15.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

ROARING TWENTIES, THE: James Cagney, Priscilla Lane, Humphrey Bogart, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George—Another Warner small town hit. Running time, 106 minutes.—J. E. Singleton, Tyro Theatre, Marked Tree, Ark. Small town patronage.

ROARING TWENTIES, THE: James Cagney, Priscilla Lane, Jeffrey Lynn, Humphrey Bogart, Gladys George—Good action show which drew the Cagney fans. This is too rough for a Sunday spot. Good story of the prohibition era. However, the film left you with the idea that now that prohibition was over everything was "hunky dory". That guy ought to see the money spent in the taverns instead of at the theatre.—C. V. Schofield, Blackhawk Theatre, Lansing, Iowa. General patronage.

SUBMARINE D-1: Pat O'Brien, George Brent, Wayne Morris, Frank McHugh—This was the second time we played this but it did about double usual business the first night, and then on the second night we encountered the worst snowstorm and as a result had a poor second night. Played January 12-13.—Gordon P. Held, Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO Radio

FIVE TIMES FIVE: Dionne Quintuplets—This picture is a drawing card for women, but men are not very interested in the antics of the Quints. Vitaphone

ALEX IN WONDERLAND: Broadway Brevities—Excellent short. All comedy. Just what the patrons want. Running time, two reels—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ARTIE SHAW AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—The usual jazz, not musical, short. I loathe, that kind of racket so it is hard to make a report, but the young folks seem to like them. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ARTIE SHAW AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—How can such a good orchestra make such a poor short? Running time, 10 minutes.—Joe Schindele, Avalon Theatre, Granite Falls, Minn. Small town patronage.

BILL OF RIGHTS: Historical Technicolor Featurettes—An excellent colored historical subject. Play it by all means.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

ICE FROLIC: Eleanor Gardner—Eleanor "Snooky" Gardner took the boys by storm in this one, as did "Snooky's big sister" with her acrobatics on the ice. The comedian skater who flopped so expertly all over the rink brought plenty of laughter at his antics. Running time, 20 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

JERRY LIVINGSTON AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—The musical trio very good, but the rest of the reel just a lot of noise. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

MR. AND MRS. JESSE CRAWFORD: Vitaphone Varieties—Was very disappointed. Had looked for a delightful organ reel, but not very much organ, and the male singer turned this into a comedy. My audience just laughed out loud, and the dancers—what stuff to have to show rural audiences. Some real popular numbers would have made a good reel with popular entertainment. Running time, one reel.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

SLAPSIE MAXIE: Broadway Brevities—A poor two-reel comedy. Not for small towns at all.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

J. Prison patronage.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

RESOURCEFULNESS

"Today, with the big organized distribution companies and their high powered exploitation departments, their accessory departments, press agents, national advertising, both press and radio, the average manager has to watch himself or he gets into a rut of inactivity.

"Twenty years ago, a manager operating a theatre largely had to depend upon himself to initiate and develop his own ideas and selling campaigns and because of that he became more resourceful. We need more resourcefulness today—more ingenuity, more showmanship. We need to rely less on ready-made selling and more on our own brains. . . ."

The above is quoted from a letter by Karl Hoblitzelle, president, and R. J. O'Donnell, general manager, to managers of the Interstate circuit.

For the most part, press books are available sufficiently in advance of a picture's earliest dates. When this important information is delayed, the lack often stimulates a resourcefulness that produces as good a box-office, if not better. That would be pointed out currently by a campaign put on by United Detroit Theatres for a Wally Beery Week, told about on a following page.

In describing the promotion, writes UDT's Alice N. Gorham, "A lack of pressbooks is sometimes a handy thing."

THE POINT OF VIEW

"A picture is a first-run for the patron who has yet to see it."

That's pulled out of stock again in answer to a wail from the subsequent who claims only the skim milk of exploitation is left when he gets the product. There was a manager in last week whose ambition it is to find him a last-run house in a fair-to-middlin' section. The lad said he was sure he could clean up with ideas missed on preceding engagements, from first-runs down.

There is also a letter from A. Milo DeHaven, at the Colonial, a subsequent in Detroit. The papers call him "bring 'em back alive DeHaven," because of his success in publicizing revivals and last-runs in general. Well, Milo wants the trade to know there is plenty of milk and a large cupful of cream to be had in the campaigns put across with his staff. So there you are.

It's often in the manager's point of view. The subsequent who approaches his dates, as though they were first-runs, garden-fresh out of the can, is usually too busy cashing in to be squawking about the limitations of his exploitations.

HE LED A USEFUL LIFE

It's easy enough to say, when a man's number is up, he has to go. But words are difficult in the case of Dick Cruciger, late manager of Warners' Columbia, Portsmouth, Ohio, whose sudden and untimely demise at 28 is reported here by his pal and co-worker, J. Knox Strachan. Cruciger's ability was widely known through his frequent and effective contributions to these pages. The place he held in community regard is indicated in the fulsome newspaper comment that marked the Round Tabler's passing.

Dick led a full and useful life. That should be consolation for the many he leaves behind who called him friend.

SCORES BOXOFFICE BASKETS

When half a town turns out to see a basketball game—that's opposition. And in Washington, Ind., where Kal Kalberer writes it happened, basketball is as tough to lick as in any other part of the Midwest. But the Round Tabler went out to give it a battle. He did so by bringing right into the theatre an ingenious and graphic play-by-play account of the home team's out-of-town games. How Kal did it, to double his Friday night grosses, was set down and illustrated in last week's issue.

From Indiana, incidentally, comes that sage political comment, "If you can't beat 'em, then jine 'em".

Though the membership will wish him every deserved success in the new job, it is to be regretted that Paul Binstock leaves exhibition for an outside theatre deal. Showmanship has never been so plentiful that the industry could afford to lose men with his tireless enthusiasm and gilt edge savvy.

Round Table in Pictures

Conceived and executed by Assistant Howard Palmer and artist Paul Lewis is the "Pinocchio" front of the Empire, Daytona Beach, Fla., with two of the staff dressed as characters in picture and wearing masks. Cutouts were spotted around marquee and scene stills planted in easels. . . . Giant compoboard banjo formed background of J. H. Dowdy's "Swanee River" lobby display at the Criterion, Poplar Bluff, Mo. Face of instrument carrying title, playdates and cast was set against river scene of the Mississippi with steamboats plying the water.

Front for date on "Gone With the Wind" at the Capitol Theatre, in Winchester, Ky., as conceived and created by Round Tabler W. A. Sandefur and illustrated above measured 34 feet long by 11 high, with cutout lettering and concealed lighting. Figures of Vivien Leigh and Clark Gable in the doorway stood six feet and were painted in oil in natural colors. Return panels on either side measured six by eight feet with airbrushed background covered with stills and cutouts.

The light fingered and the not so light fingered all tried their luck recently in the lobby of Loew's State Theatre, Norfolk, in an effort to "crack" a safe planted there by Round Tabler Roscoe Drissell as part of his "Raffles" exploitation in advance of that date. Tiein card offered a ten dollar bill to anyone who succeeded in opening the safe.

Five of the largest music stores in Waterbury, Conn., have been tied in with the coming date on "Young Tom Edison" at Loew's, to find the oldest phonographs in town. Merchants are using the relics for window display and later will turn them over to Manager Ed Fitzpatrick to make up an unusual lobby display for the showing.

Lamour Personal Appearance Tops Miami Beach Date

Highlight of campaign on "Road to Singapore" was personal appearance of Miss Lamour on the opening night of the picture through courtesy of Al Weiss of the Olympia where she was playing a four-day engagement. Eddie Cohen, Daily News columnist and critic, interviewed her from the stage. We tied in with the Daily News Homemakers Party to choose the Glamour Girl of 1940, with Miss Lamour as special guest of honor.

Star was also the special judge in a statewide contest to pick Miss Florida here at the Macfadden Deauville pool. Presented the winner with a sarong she wore in picture. Newsreels, wire services and papers covered. Also had Lamour work out with Philadelphia "Phillies". Cracked front page.

Gala Premieres Greet "Pinocchio"

Miami "Pinocchio" dates were three-ring circus affairs, with Sheridan taking first opening Washington's Birthday for five days, then out two days and into Cinema Casino on beach and Paramount in town for five more. George Hoover of Sheridan had advance well started by the time Harry Reiners and myself arrived on scene. Special morning preview for critics, columnists, and such notables as Messrs. Schenck and Balaban took place day prior Sheridan opening.

Meantime racegoers saw huge "Pinocchio" banner float above Hialeah and along beaches, while twelve gay youngsters in costumes and giant heads tied up traffic on smart Lincoln Road with ad lib antics.

Best gag of the second showing was sale of entire house this morning to Floridian hotel manager. He gave house away to 1,100 underprivileged children. Police escorted loaded buses through streets, carried crippled kiddies to seats and handed out lollypops. Miami News got behind this and gave it the gun all the way.

Buffalo Proclaims "Pinocchio" Day

"Pinocchio" got rip-roaring start at Shea's Great Lakes, opening with Hollywood reserved seat premiere. Theatre offered gala appearance. Huge floodlights emblazoned front. Special 20-foot lighted letter marquee signs topped both fronts. Society out en masse, greeted on arrival by "Pinocchio" in person, a midget-like person, garbed as principal character, also used as street bally. Local stores went to town with co-op ads and windows. J. N. Adam Company best, with tieup including row of front windows and set up with human "Pinocchio" in store. Twenty-five other good stores used complete windows. Newspapers gave complete coverage with three-quarter page of art and copy.

Every school in Buffalo covered with special letters and window cards for blackboards. Mayor proclaimed "Pinocchio Day" which newspapers grabbed for story. Copies of proclamation sent to every important club, with letters offering reservations. One local radio station broadcast a mystery tune contest of "Pinocchio" music. Guest tickets for prizes. Every other radio station covered with announcements special "Pinocchio" edition of movie guide, 50,000 copies distributed in our theatres.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS

The further adventures of Manager Marquee Mike, at the Drofilm Theatre, in the non-existent town of Beelerville, Ohio, are herewith depicted by his creator, Glenn Franke, of Cheviot, Ohio—in this instance, on the subject of better service.

Irwin Fingerprints Kids For "A Child Is Born"

As a special attraction in connection with "A Child Is Born," Manager Ted Irwin of the Star Theatre, in Lyons, Kansas, arranged for Undersheriff Merl Timbers to be on hand Sunday afternoon between two and three to fingerprint children up to eight years of age. Two sets of prints were made of each child, one going to the parents, the other being sent to Washington. Stunt brought much comment and stories in local papers.

Other slants included distribution of handbills within a radius of 20 miles, co-op ad promoted from leading merchants, elaborate front erected for the occasion in baby blue to stress the infant angle.

Brien Invites Patrons To Join Horror Club

Instituting a "Prince Theatre Horror Society," Manager Lige Brien of Ambridge, Pa., for "Demon Barber" and "Return of the Frog," planted a book in his lobby in which all members were invited to register and receive special membership card surmounted by skull and crossbones in reverse panel. Book was in lobby 10 days ahead of opening and Lige reports initiating over 5,000 members. Other lobby stunt consisted of a miniature "house of horror" from which weird noises emitted, and a 15-foot skeleton on wires travelled across the front of the theatre. Through cooperation of local dairy, giant bottles of milk were available in the lobby as an antidote for chills.

Rounded Campaign Features Opening

Opened recently in Camden, N. J., the remodelled Towers, of the A. M. Ellis circuit, was given the stimulus of a sound campaign for the premiere by Manager Larry Ruch and Martin B. Ellis, division manager. Newspapers, civic heads and other profitable promotional sources were utilized for wide publicity. News stories on the purchase of the house, plans for remodelling and progress of the construction were run regularly ahead so that the town was well aware of the situation.

For the direct opening, the Mayor proclaimed a Tower Week for the city and engraved invitations forwarded to all the worthwhiles in that sector. Presentation of giant invitation to the Mayor was featured by the dailies which also cooperated to select from among the high schools, a Queen and court for the event. Further publicity aid was had with an eight-page tabloid section on the theatre, outside advertising paying the cost. Ads also provided for the expense of souvenir programs for the first show.

Decorate Streets for Opening

Streets and theatre were decorated with flags and bunting. Two days ahead, the city commissioner of safety inspected the house and cut ribbons covering all poster frames to reveal advertising for the first show. On afternoon of opening day, the Mayor raised American flag to the top of the building with bands from the American Legion and Veterans cooperating in the ceremonies. At the premiere, flood lights were used to light up the entire block and in the theatre dedication services held on the stage where the Mayor presented the theatre to the city. Other officials spoke. Midnight supper to invited guests was served in the ballroom over the theatre lobby. The entire drawing area was covered with "welcome" cards in form of holiday wreaths. Cards were displayed by every local merchant.

"Are You Set For Spring?"

Wally Beery Week Builds "Nebraska"

Deciding that the sale of Wallace Beery in that situation would return the best results on "Man From Nebraska," at the Palm States, Detroit, Manager Don Kuhn with Alice Gorham, of United Detroit Theatres publicity, arranged a Wally Beery Week in honor of the star and instituted a search through the newspapers to find the Number One Beery star in the motor city. Considered for the title was a youngster who claimed he had seen every picture in which the star appeared since the lad was four, the papers making much of this angle.

Featured in the lobby was a giant book for patron autographs, later mailed to Beery at the studio. Five-foot cake for the occasion, made up by the hotel's pastry chef, and displayed in lobby, was contributed by the Book Cadillac management. Messages of congratulations to the star from leading locals were also shown and leading drug chains throughout the city featured confections named after the player.

Confucius Say It About 'Singapore'

Topped by the world premiere of Paramount's "Road to Singapore" at the Sparks' Florida, in St. Petersburg, last minute reports of box-office note portray devices usual and otherwise in various parts to engage the attention of the customers. The latest craze, "Confucius Says," has been put to work in various sectors, most prominently for the "Singapore" date on Manager Bolivar Hyde's campaign by ad manager Walter Tremor and exploiteer Richard Mullins. As the climax to a newspaper "sayings" contest, a double for Confucius, appeared at the premiere. Morning paper, the following day, ran a two-column review, bylined by the Chinese scholar and written in the idiom.

The sarong stuff was worked to good effect with offers of admission to any girls so garbed. For the weekend in advance, other girls in sarongs distributed heralds in the lobby and audience comment cards at the opening. This was noted pictorially in the press as was a page-one photo showing visiting cartoonist who wore a burlesque sarong costume at the opening in response to Hyde's gag request to first-nighters. Yachting apparel was worn by ushers and doormen and lobby decorated with nautical equipment, the front with yachting pennants.

Balloons Carry Passes

Hydrogen gas-filled balloons with passes attached were released from the theatre roof, finder attending from the farthest point given an extra prize. Special invites were forwarded to city officials, major baseball teams in training and lettered arrows pointing to theatre, planted at strategic points. On opening day, all other local Sparks houses carried congratulatory copy in ads and wires from Bing Crosby to civic heads and newspaper editors were used as further lobby display material.

"Are You Set For Spring?"

Confucius Say—for Manuel

Old Man Confucius was also given an advertising whirl by Johnny Manuel with a page co-op at Schine's Strand, in Delaware, Ohio. Headed by a streamer reading: "Confucius Say: Garbo Laughs in Ninotchka" the page included ads each headed by the "say" with a tiein to the individual merchandise or service and spotted by cuts of cartoon characters whispering what the Chinese scholar had to say about it. Passes were offered to those clipping any of the whispering cartoons and adding the best original "Confucius says."

"Are You Set For Spring?"

Grott's Death Warrant Herald

Heralds which attracted plenty of comment were distributed by Harold Grott, Met Theatre, in Baltimore for his date on "Nurse Edith Cavell," in the form of a death warrant, supposedly issued from the Deutsches Hechste Milliterische Commandante. When opened, warrants carried cut of Anna Neagle as she appeared in the picture, together with playdates, cast, etc. Spot announcements were planted over Station WFBR twice daily, at noon and late in the evening.

UNIQUE TRAILER IDEAS SELL DETROIT DATES

Away from the usual in trailers, reports Alice M. Gorham, of United Detroit's publicity forces, was the three-week campaign for "Return of Dr. X", by Manager Don Kuhn, at the Palms State. Each week, with different copy, the trailer was built up by ushers on the stage, dressed as walking corpses, sinister figures and stretcher bearers, to add to the effect.

At the circuit's Annex, Manager Gil Green, silencing the first few frames of his sound trailer for "On Dress Parade", had two girl dancers on the stage going through a tap routine leading into the screen advance.

Crabtree Quiz Program Has Soft-Drink Sponsor

Radio quiz programs continue to attract Round Tablers, the latest from E. E. Crabtree, Publix Great States City Manager, in Danville, Ill., being sponsored by the local Pepsi-Cola dealer under the name "Pepsi-Quiz" and carried over station WDAN, on Monday nights, at nine, for a 20 minute period from the stage of the Fischer. Station furnishes announcer and master of ceremonies, with girls working the aisles with mikes. Questions to be asked are drawn from bowl on stage, each having predetermined value. Those who answer correctly receive the prize, if not a carton of the soft drink.

Cash for unanswered questions goes into the jack-pot for the last and most difficult question. The idea is catching on, says Crabtree, with the station giving the program steady plugging and theatre doing likewise in ads and publicity.

"Are You Set For Spring?"

Edison High School Pupils Get Wire from Rooney

Since one of the local junior high schools is named after the great inventor, Sam Gilman had the M-G-M coast publicity department dispatch a wire, addressed to the student body, signed by Mickey Rooney, as a buildup for the date on "Young Tom Edison," at Loew's, Harrisburg, Pa. The wire read:

"I was fortunate enough to be selected to play the role of Edison in the picture 'Young Tom Edison' which I understand opens in Harrisburg soon. In preparation for the part I was thrilled by the knowledge of Edison's career, his strength of character, his thoroughness, efficiency and aggressiveness. His genius as an inventor and his tremendous capacity for work were an inspiration to me that I know will remain forever. I am really proud to share with all of you students of Edison Junior High School a definite association with such a great man."

The wire now has a prominent place on the school bulletin board and later it is planned as a souvenir to the student whose name is pulled out of a hat.

Big Mailing Aids 'Bullet' Campaign

For his date on "Magic Bullet" at the Paramount, Hot Springs, Ark., W-Clyde Smith, Malco city manager, stressed the "another Zola" angle now being emphasized by Warners in selling the date nationally. Right after the preview, the local press broke out with three-column feature stories, followed by other prominent publicity on the Sunday ahead, plus editorials and interviews on the picture with local prominents. Ad campaign was along the lines used previously for "Zola" and "Pasteur," both top grossers in that situation. Copy aimed for both class and mass appeal.

The mailing campaign, a most important angle in this situation, was topped by an entire front page on the picture in Smith's "Movie News," a circuit paper with a circulation of over 20,000 within a 40-mile radius. Telegrams were delivered by Postal messengers to every room in every hotel in the resort town. Personal letters and cards to all doctors and hospitals were also delivered by messenger. Personal contacts were made by Clyde with army and navy officials, public health clinic heads, doctors, nurses, hospital superintendents, heads of social groups and civic clubs, to sell the picture as entertainment.

Opening Is Gala Event

The theatre front and lobby was elaborate with giant setpieces, pastel blowups, heads of Robinson, valances and bannerettes. Outside posting was extensive, with endorsement posters all over town and 60-foot banner across the face of new building under construction in busiest sections.

On opening night, Smith closed the theatre for two hours to prepare for a gala premiere with all the important locals and visitors on hand and all the Hollywood atmosphere usual to these occasions.

PLANS FOR EASTERTIDE MARK SPRING SEASON

Suggestions for Annual Event Feature Fashions Shows, Egg Stunt and Coloring Contests

Throughout the land, theatremen are knee deep in plans to mark the Easter time as the stepping off point to Spring activities. Thus, the spring style shows, egg hunts, coloring contests, bunny displays and giveaways, special kid shows and lobby displays are now in work. A quick review of promotions that stood up last year is set down for the information of interested readers seeking other ideas to round out their campaigns. And leading off, is the fashion show put on just a few weeks back, by J. R. MacEachron, at the Malco Paramount, in Jackson, Tenn., with the cooperation of leading women's stores and the assistance of local socialites who served as models.

Mac's show was put on for one evening performance and featured exhibits of misses', matrons' and children's models. A well-known fashion expert served as stage narrator. Stores furnished all the clothes and shoes which also were shown. Furniture stores and florists contributed stage settings with a musical program included. The cooperating merchants came in on an extensive advertising campaign, the local press making much of the event in daily stories ahead and the day after.

Males Participate in Style Shows

Previous year style tieins may include Jack Granara's hookup with Boston furrier for newsreel pictures of latest styles. Local debs and professional models were used, merchant paying all expenses of production and advertising. In Cleveland, Harry E. Long directed a two-a-day fashion show in the spacious lobby of Loew's State, a section roped off and colorfully decorated for the exhibit. The Boston Loew-men favored a stage style show with audience invited to vote for most popular model. Extensive newspaper tieins plus merchant buildup brought attention.

The males were given an opportunity to show their Spring finery by Louis Charninsky, at matinee and night of Easter Sunday, the Round Tabler inviting both men and women to parade across the stage in their new outfits for prizes promoted from the stores. Louis added a Spring stage wedding with the lucky couple receiving complete housekeeping equipment. Another elaborate male-and-female promotion is credited to Clyde Smith, in Hot Springs, with socialites of both sexes taking part as models.

Egg Ideas Take Various Forms

As important as the style show and of greater interest to the juveniles is the traditional egg hunt. In Bridgeport, Conn., Matt Saunders buried papiermâché eggs containing passes and new pennies, in the city park. Les Pollock went more formal with coupons in cooperating paper, children required to fill out coupon and bring them to the hunt. Entries were given official tags required to be worn to be eligible for prizes, the top given to youngsters locating the "golden egg."

Egg coloring is another reliable. Johnny Newkirk, in Cleveland, has a standing arrangement with his community paper which breaks the front page for the contest. In addition to prizes, entries are placed on display in lobby a week ahead. The downtown Cleveland Loew houses tied in the coloring contest as a promotion with one of the dailies, entries going to the paper's promotion department and displayed in prominent downtown stores.

Egg rolling is also in the spotlight in Boston, where Joe Di Pesa had the youngsters rolling eggs from the State House to the city park. Joe promoted the prizes and got a lot of extra publicity on the tiein.

Bunny Giveaway Attracts

Free bunnies continue to prove a powerful attractor. George Limerck gave away the baby rabbits on a lucky number idea, the bunnies shown in the lobby well in advance. Ed McBride created an unusual lobby attraction with a live bunny house on a platform, with entrances in and out for the rabbits. Flowers and cutout eggs and bunnie bunnies heightened the effect.

In New Orleans, Rodney Toups is known for his Easter lobby setpieces, with such attractors as a giant egg of plaster, highlighted with metallics. Opening in center of egg showed small chicks emerging and carrying cards plugging the attraction. Galy Varnell also used a giant egg display, in Hugo, Okla., to carry attraction credits and season greetings. Huge cutout bunny in holiday attire was placed alongside the egg.

Still good for a repeat is Dick Wright's old-fashioned Easter bonnet contest. The Cleveland Warner district head ties in with stores where entries are registered. Week ahead, best entries are selected for showing in prominent window, with public invited to choose the funniest plus short statement giving their reasons. Prizes are presented from stage, a few days ahead of Easter.

Citywide Spring Opening Effective

Herb Grove's formal Spring opening, in Rock Island, Ill., also stands up for Spring, or to introduce any other season. Grove tied in his merchants on a window-shopping contest the night previous to opening, the windows being unmasked all at one time to show the new things. Each window contained a star or scene still from a coming attraction. For prizes, public was invited to guess names of stars, the pictures in which they were to appear and where, and to name picture from which the scene stills were taken.

Musical novelty by Guy Martin, had the Sound Bend, Ind., member decorating his organ for a novelty number with small silvered branches gathered in the fields. Coop with baby chicks was placed on top of console and as slides introduced the Easter "company," amber spot was thrown on the chicks. Community sing followed.

Flower ideas have included tieup in Cleveland with florist association to distribute Easter roses and lilies to women patrons. Horticultural lobby exhibit in conjunction with local Garden Club has also been exploited in Hot Springs.

To equalize balance of the two end panels, Clark used more space for the black-and-white, left, and added benday border for substance. Theatre slug below held all units together.

(Above) To sell the stars of the coming double-bill on their past successes was the purpose of United Detroit's 85 lines on 2 col. for the date at the Michigan. The "Together in one huge show" was aimed for quick eye-appeal and to call attention to the arrangement of pictures and stars below.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

Woven LIGHT

Alexander Smith takes special pride in presenting

ALEXANDER SMITH FLUORESCENT CARPET

. . . a scientific development of such far-reaching significance

it probably will completely revolutionize many types of contract installations

YOU'LL recapture the childhood thrill of seeing your first firefly when you see your first demonstration of Alexander Smith Fluorescent Carpet. For this revolutionary carpet under the "black light" of ultra-violet illumination gives off a glow even more beautiful and more magical than that of the little firefly.

Under sunlight or ordinary artificial light, Alexander Smith Fluorescent Carpet looks like any other quality carpet.

But under the special ultra-violet illumination, the carpet undergoes an amazing metamorphosis . . . certain colors give off a beautiful phosphorescent glow of an intensity more than ample for complete visibility underfoot. The carpet itself seems to be illuminated, although in reality the light is reflected from the ultra-violet lights overhead.

The illusion is one of light woven into the carpet.

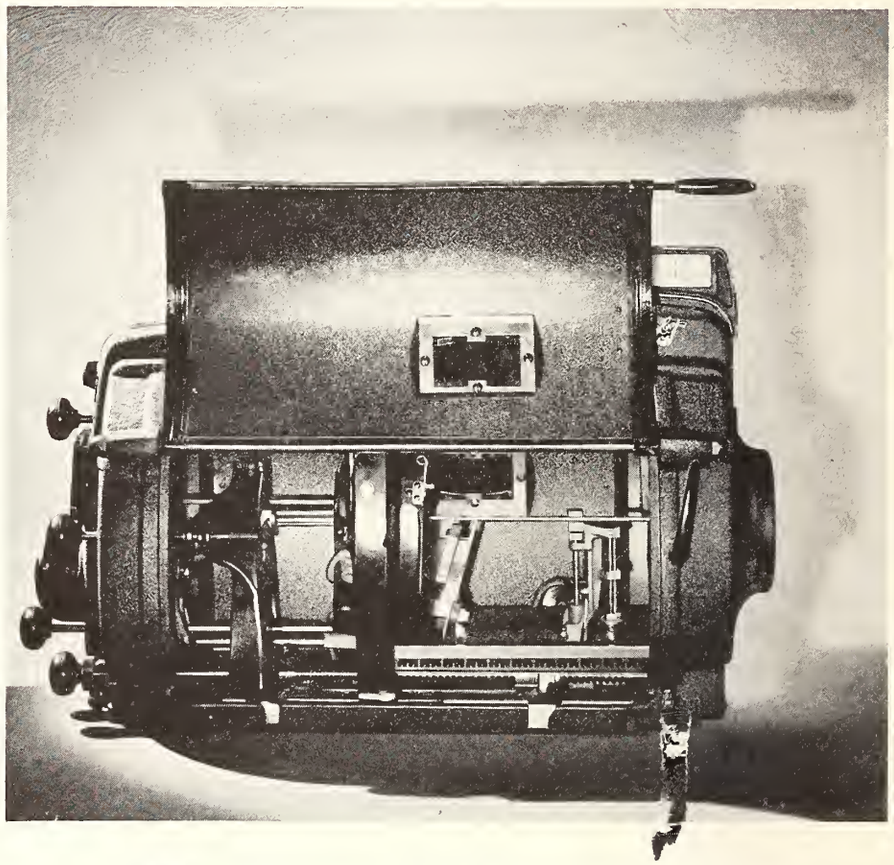
The immediate practical application of this "magic carpet" is in the contract field, particularly in theatres, where its peculiar properties make it ideal for carpet visibility underfoot without incandescent illumination.



The ultra-violet lighting equipment is simply and inexpensively installed in new or old buildings and costs less to operate than ordinary incandescent lighting.

The application of the scientific principles of ultra-violet light and fluorescent dye-stuffs in woven fabrics is patented and is the exclusive property of Alexander Smith & Sons Carpet Co. Sub-licenses will be given to other companies who agree to follow similar lines of development.

We shall gladly arrange a demonstration of Fluorescent Carpet. A selection of beautiful patterns is already available and an experimental installation has already been made in a Washington theatre. For demonstration, write or telephone Contract Carpet Division, Alexander Smith & Sons, 295 Fifth Ave., N. Y.

LOW COST / HIGH INTENSITY

FOR THOSE WHO HERETOFORE COULDN'T AFFORD THE FINEST

A low cost, high intensity, direct current projection arc of intermediate capacity designed especially for theatres of up to 800 seats and using screens as large as 18 feet in width, heretofore restricted to the use of low intensity lamps, with their dim yellow light, because the operating, if not the original cost of the earlier high intensities has been prohibitive.

This Simplex High projects twice as much light as the low intensity, a snow white light, characteristic of the high intensity arc, which is so necessary to the projection of colored pictures.

Air-Conditioning For All Theatres

TWO SPECIALISTS in theatre air-conditioning and ventilation—Jack Knight and Carl F. Boester—put it squarely up to exhibitors themselves whether the motion picture public generally is soon to be assured breathing comfort in this country's theatres.

Mr. Knight, who has directed the physical operation of hundreds of theatres for more than twenty years, sees air-conditioning as having become a necessity in most theatres, warranting immediate planning and budgeting for its installation in houses now without it. And Mr. Boester, a designing engineer, declares that with methods and equipment available today, any theatre can have air-conditioning.

Both gentlemen offer some practical counsel on the matter in articles in this issue: Mr. Boester, however, has added, in a letter accompanying his manuscript, some remarks indicating a certain amount of impatience with exhibitors for failure to act on developments. Mr. Knight suggests in his article that the air-conditioning industry itself has unwittingly confused theatre operators at times by lack of clarity in presenting what it had to offer; but Mr. Boester comments in his letter that "the theatre owner can be justifiably accused of ignorance if he permits any peddler of equipment with the label 'air-conditioning' on it to waste his time telling him how the particular article he advocates will make it cool at practically no cost."

All Can Afford It

Mr. Boester points to the "volumes" which have been written to help the exhibitor determine what his own peculiar requirements were, and to aid him in getting the greatest value for the price he paid, as well as economy in operation. Yet, he comments, "many theatre owners are still of the opinion that real summer air-conditioning is something that they cannot yet afford."

▶"This is not so," Mr. Boester continues, "for any theatre, regardless of its size, or of the economic wealth of the community, or of the box office admission scale, can have full customer relief from hot weather distress.

"Ignorance is the only bar to this possibility. Primarily it is ignorance on the part of the theatre owner as to what a simple thing air-conditioning for comfort can be. But of course you can't buy a successful air-conditioning system as you would a couple of film cabinets.

"Any industry that is relatively new attracts fly-by-night 'experts,' whose purpose seems to be to clean up on the suckers. Since theatres, above all other commercial establishments, need summer cooling, their owners are the prey of such 'experts'. Theatre men have paid as high as $2,000 for a single fan that should not have cost over $200 installed, and have been assured that the fan would cool the house!

"Air-conditioning is available to any theatre, to meet its precise needs adequately and, when you consider what it means to patrons, at a reasonable cost. Whether the theatre man gets it depends upon how he goes about trying to get it."

Building Holds Pace

Theatre construction is holding the strong pace set during the latter part of 1939, according to the F. W. Dodge Corporation, building projects reporting service, and their figures are also reflected in the reports of new theatres planned received by BETTER THEATRES Bulletin Service.

Following issuance of 1939 figures showing 798 projects for the year, costing $22,267,000, compared with 751 costing $20,996,000 in 1938, Dodge reports 51 projects in January with a valuation of $1,316,000, compared with 47 projects costing $811,000 in January 1939.

The Dodge reports, however, cover only the 37 States east of the Rockies, but they include major remodeling as well as new theatres.

▶A notable program of circuit expansion in the East, calling for the construction of eleven theatres, has just been announced by Harry Brandt, prominent New York City operator with a number of Times Square district theatres, including the new Pix on 42nd Street. The new program will carry the Brandt circuit into New England—specifically, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts. All of the New England group will be Colonial in style.

▶Still another motion picture theatre will be crowded into New York's Time Square area the latter part of March, only a couple of months after the opening of the Pix, when the York theatre is expected to begin operation. This is right on the Main Stem, smack-dab across the street from the 4,000-seat Paramount. A 600-seat house, the York will be operated by Consolidated Amusement Enterprises, Inc.

Nutmeg Niceties

Probably no State in the Union is as theatre-hazard-conscious as Connecticut (where, incidentally, there is something of a theatre-building boom these days). With strict projection regulations administered by the State Police department (whose theatre inspector, Earl Morin, has done considerable research in safety measures), Connecticut authorities have now prohibited stage performances in any theatre which does not have fireproof proscenium walls, as well as an asbestos curtain.

In the more recent building of motion picture theatres, with accommodations for only occasional stage shows, operators have not wished to go to the expense of constructing fire walls at the proscenium merely because they might want a crooner to fondle a microphone on the stage as an added attraction some Saturday night. Now said crooner is interpreted as constituting a fire hazard as well as whatever other kind he might be called.

▶Also from the Nutmeg State comes the report of a court decision (by Judge Kenneth Wynne in New Haven) awarding $900 damages to a woman who fell, apparently when starting down the aisle of a Poli-New England circuit house in New Haven, in which decision the court observed that sloping auditorium floors constitute a hazard because a person is wont to look at the screen when going down the aisle. One might reply that people usually are looking for a seat—and anyway, a person is supposed to watch where in hell he's going. Incidentally, the complainant's name is given as Katharine Falso.

Add Drive-In News

This month's drive-in item: Milwaukee exhibitors are demanding protection on product from the see-it-through-a-windshield enterprise being constructed about fifteen miles out by Midwest Drive-In Theatres, Inc. (Boston operators). And at a meeting in Beloit, independent operators voiced alarm that drive-in's would spread to other localities. "They're nothing more than public petting parks," said Harry Perlowitz, business manager of the independent organization, and practically everybody agreed. . . . The Milwaukee drive-in is expected to cost $30,000, will accommodate 700 automobiles and countless mosquitoes. G. S.

Fitting Air-Conditioning Today Into the Average Theatre Budget

● Every theatre should assure patrons "Breathing comfort"—thus most theatres need air-conditioning. Here are basic considerations in planning and financing the installation of the required equipment

By J. T. KNIGHT, JR.

"JUST AS SOON as the hygienist incorporates in clear and understandable phraseology, the health, comfort and efficiency demands of ventilation, attributing to each element its proper weight and no more, and so soon as the weight of an enlightened public opinion transforms these requirements into legal enactments, we can depend upon those who build our enclosures—the engineer and the architect —to provide for us the conditions required." —Dr. George T. Palmer, in "Modern Tendencies of Ventilating Practice," Journal of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers, January, 1923.

That statement made seventeen years ago and characteristic of a condition that existed then, can, by the substitution and changing of but a few words, be brought up-to-date to describe exactly the important problem confronting the theatres of this country. Let's try it.

Just as soon as the various groups representing the medical, scientific and engineering professions incorporate in clear and understandable language the health, comfort and efficiency demands of air conditioning, giving to each of these factors its proper weight and no more, and as soon as the weight of an enlightened theatre-going public transforms these requirements into public demands, we can depend upon those who own and operate our theatres—the individual and the circuit—to provide for the public the conditions required.

How many theatre operators and managers know what they want when they say want air-conditioning? How many theatre-goers know when they have experienced good air-condiitoning? How many owners know what they have paid their money for when they have bought air-conditioning?

The theatre manager knows he has good air-conditioning when his patron complaints are at a minimum, and if it performs consistently when he pushes that starter button.

The theatre-goer knows the air-conditioning is good if he or she is comfortable and undisturbed by noise or drafts.

The owner or circuit executive believes the air-conditioning to be good if the manager can't use it as an alibi for low grosses and the operating costs are not pyramiding with each season's operation.

Taking a combination of these three answers as a practical measure of good air-conditioning, then any theatre, large or small, can hardly afford to be without good air-conditioning.

Knowing What It's About

Upon further consideration, the term "good air-conditioning" is a bit vague and general, and the problem of knowing just what is required of air-conditioning still needs clarification, with public enlightenment coming only when more people have more knowledge of what makes "breathing comfort." This implies a time element and we in the theatre business can't sit with folded hands waiting for the scientists, the doctors, the health officers, and the engineers and equipment manufacturers to see eye-to-eye and thereby lift the fog of confusion that now surrounds the average layman when someone tries to sell him air-conditioning.

It may not be apparent on first thought, but this confusion, resulting from lack of understandable definitions and units of measure that the layman can apply to the performance of the air-conditioning plant, is one of the big problems in fitting air-conditioning into the theatre budget.

For instance, one sales engineer will talk to a prospect about using an evaporative condenser, another will talk about an economizer, and yet another will talk about an aquamizer. In reality they are all talking about the same thing!

Again, the prospective buyer will hear about a condensing unit, a condenser, a shell and tube condenser, or a shell and coil condenser, and in this they are not talking about the same thing!

The more the prospective buyer talks to sales engineers, the more confused he gets, and the more confused he gets the more uncertain he is about installing air-conditioning. However, more and more theatres are buying air-conditioning, and as each year comes and goes, those air-conditioned theatres are still open and making money—and the percentage of faulty jobs to the total installed has become smaller and smaller. So, general experience, plus the fact that the theatre-going public is now very conscious of its comfort and would rather go into an air-conditioned theatre (even though it might not be a perfect job, yet the chances are they will be more comfortable there than in the un-air-conditioned house down the street) is forcing the operators of theatres without air-conditioning to consider its installation, regardless of whether or not his bank balance indicates that he can or cannot afford the investment.

Really, if the owner in many cases would only see it, it is a question of whether to protect what he has now. Can he afford to be without air-conditioning? If you are one of those who own or operate a theatre in any section of the country where the summer atmospheric conditions are not conducive to theatre attendance (and that's most of the United States) you should face the problem squarely and see what can be done about it.

Economy Temptations

In the first place, the theatre has to earn the money to pay for the installation unless there is a reserve sufficiently large to take care of it. If the theatre cannot support air-conditioning, then there is a grave question of whether the theatre itself is justifiable in that location. Most generally, rather than admit that there is no justification for the theatre, the owner will usually decide to try air-conditioning. Then, it must be fitted into the schedule of expenditures anticipated in the light of expectant income. Now some think that if air-conditioning must be done, then let's do it the cheapest way possible.

Offering a "Horrible Example"

This theory is generally wrong. I know a theatre owner who has a house with

FOR GOOD AIR CONDITIONING

...TURN TO

Make your patrons comfortable all year 'round ... during every kind of weather.

To keep patrons coming back to your theatre, you've got to make them comfortable—whether it's January or July. That's pretty basic—but what does theatre "comfort" really mean?

In summer, comfort calls for cooling—in winter, for sufficient heating. At all times, comfort means plenty of clean, fresh air—properly humidified—and circulated without drafts.

Your patrons will cheer if you give them that kind of year 'round, air conditioned comfort.

And you can, when you turn to General Electric equipment to solve your problems. A compact G-E system—for both winter and summer air conditioning—will help to build box-office in your theatre just as surely as it has in others.

Is your theatre Large? Medium? Small?

No matter—there's G-E equipment to do the job right for you. General Electric makes a complete line that's backed by one of the world's most famous research laboratories. General Electric units are reasonably priced—low in operating cost—thoroughly dependable.

You will enjoy reading this brochure—"Air Conditioning for Business." It gives you the answers to many of your problems—facts that may save you many dollars. Send the coupon for your copy—then talk to your local contractor or consulting engineer about a G-E installation for year 'round comfort!

slightly less than 800 seats, who approached his problem resentfully, and yet, being confused by all of the sales talk, decided to do his own air-conditioning. He built a tremendous duct, insulated it with 2-inch cork —No, siree, he was not going to let any of that "coldness" get away from him! Then, he picked out a fan and motor and bought a 3-horsepower compressor. Having dug himself a shallow well, he was ready to go.

Much to his surprise, he still got complaints from his patrons, so the next season he bought a 10-horsepower compressor and set it alongside of the 3-horsepower compressor, then again called attention to his "air-conditioning plant." Another season went by full of complaints, so for the third season he bought another 10-horsepower compressor. By now, however, his well was inadequate, and his machine room was too small. Still, he thought that with those three compressors he surely would be able "to freeze them out" that year.

But something was wrong. He had a condition almost as if there were no compressors. The pump could not pump enough water from the well, and it did not have enough head to force what it did pump through the condensers. The net result was mounting operation costs and no beneficial results. That particular theatre required 52 tons of refrigeration, a new duct system, new grilles or diffusing outlets, and a new source of condenser water.

I relate this story so as to demonstrate how not to budget the air-conditioning installation.

Getting What You Need

The money for air-conditioning must be forthcoming and there are several sources: the bank, a government loan, or extended payments with a relatively small outlay of cash. Before the bank or the government can be approached, the cost of the job must be determined. To be correct this cannot be determined with any great degree of accuracy until the system has been designed —and in the design of the system and the selection of equipment lies the secret of good air-conditioning. It cannot be expected as yet that the owner can possibly have the knowledge or the experience to pass on this work without the aid of technical counsel, whether of a consulting engineer, of a manufacturer or his dealer.

When several salesmen are competing for a contract, of course then corners begin to be cut, and before the theatre man is fully aware of it, he is considering air-conditioning purely from the cost point of view. Then the budget is set up and the expectancy figures may just as likely as not be based upon bad air-conditioning when good air-conditioning was expected. To consider merely cost is the second way not to set up your air-conditioning program.

To protect themselves against inadequate jobs, many buyers ask for guaranties, which amount to little or nothing in the long run, basically because it is almost impossible to prove the point of failure of the system in the light of the guaranties. Such guaranties are a moral comfort, and the character and reputation of the company under whose name the equipment is sold is generally the best guaranty. However, many of the best equipment companies operate through dealers, and naturally dealers may be good, bad, just so-sos, since, rather than not have distribution in a given territory, a manufacturer may in some instances be forced to take second-choice. Then, too, the manufacturing company many times hates to give performance guaranties, because in dollars and cents, really a small portion of the cost of air-conditioning actually goes to the equipment manufacturer.

A Typical Case

Here is a typical installation: The job required 100 tons of refrigeration and the entire installation cost $20,765. The manufacturer under whose name the equipment was sold actually received $6,344 for equipment; or a little better than 31% of the total expenditure represented sales for the manufacturer. This manufacturer, when asked to give a performance guarantee or free unlimited service for a year, could justly say that failure of other manufacturers' equipment might be responsible for a failure of the system to perform, and these other manufacturers do not give me anything but a mechanical guaranty on such equipment, therefore, you are asking me to assume the responsibility for the other fellow's equipment as well as my own.

The point I want to emphasize is: Don't be content with an air-conditioning proposal and feel that your contemplated investment is protected just because there are some guaranties written in. They are hard to prove or disprove if a real controversy should develop.

To summarize up to this point: To fit today's air-conditioning methods and systems into the modern theatre budget requires:

1. Clear knowledge as to what you expect in and from air-conditioning.
2. An intelligent and accurate plan of procedure.
3. A substantial and well-designed plant, including drawings and correct application specifications.
4. That the buyer realize that guaranties do not supplant or replace or make unnecessary any of the foregoing three requirements.

In the light of this basic procedure and assuming that we have a well-designed and correct application of equipment, let us see if good air-conditioning can logically be done in consecutive steps.

The "Progressive Plan"

The system is itself divided basically into two parts:

First, an air supply and distribution system (to be more specific, a blower and motor, a duct system and grilles).

Second, a means of refrigeration (which means compressors, motors, controls, condenser, condenser water source, valves, fittings, piping, etc.).

Now, the fan and duct system could be installed this year, but because we handle so much less air per seat with air-conditioning than we do with just summertime ventilation or washed air, that the conditions this coming summer would certainly seem to be worse than before, especially if a washer system had been replaced. For the theatre that has had nothing to speak of in the way of adequate ventilation, the new air-conditioning duct layout with grilles, plus the speeding up of the blower so as to deliver more air than will be required next year when you install the compressors, will probably produce a somewhat better condition this summer.

Then next summer you would have to proceed with the second half of the system —the refrigeration half. This you can't split up—it all has to go in. This would mean an expenditure of about a fourth of the cost the first year, and the rest the next year. The chances are that little or no real box office benefit would be derived the first year, so probably you could figure that the partial investment this year should be augmented by a carrying charge, regarding the first year's cost as money tied up from which no real benefits can be derived till next year.

Now the following year you must spend three-fourths of the total cost, which is certainly in the class of a major budgetary item. In the light of this analysis, it is my opinion that there is no benefit in progressive air-conditioning installations because of the nature of our theatre buildings and our business.

Term Financing

Let us assume we are in possession of a good design for a system, with proper capacity equipment selected. With such a plan there are several of the larger air-conditioning manufacturers, as well as several of the commercial credit houses, who will handle the financing of such an installation on extended terms over a period, under certain conditions, as long as three years. In some instances, arrangements have been made to make payments on the plant during the six or seven months when the plant is not in use, in this way reducing the burden during the summer months when the theatre must pay the operating charges.

With respect to economy, a well-designed system, with correct application of equipment, is synonymous with the cheapest, most economical plan for satisfactory performance. To the theatre operator who has never had an air-conditioning system, I can only say that air-conditioning has a first cost, as we all know, and it also has upkeep, maintenance, repair, renewal and operation costs. In this respect it does not differ from your projectors, your lamps or your generator. Air-conditioning has paid dividends to theatre operators—it is hard to determine in just what way or just how much, but we do know that it has injected new blood into many dying theatre operations. Fitting the initial cost of the comfort cooling plan to the theatre budget is very rapidly becoming rather a necessity, and generally when a necessity exists there usually is a way of providing for it. The greatest economy in adjusting the proposed installation to the budget is to eliminate mistakes and errors in the design of the system.

Why Your Theatre Can Have Air-Conditioning —and How

You may think you can not afford it. But you can—even if your theatre is extremely small. Here is what you can do about it

By CARL F. BOESTER

▶ ▶ ▶ IT IS IMPORTANT to realize that there is plenty of air-conditioning equipment of excellent quality that can be installed well within the range of any theatre man's ability to buy and operate it. Let's briefly analyze the various possibilities.

Labor of installation is by far the greatest single item in the total cost of a cooling system. Contrary to what the union business agents would have us believe, the unions don't have a corner on skilled mechanics in equipment installation. Of course, they do have skilled men, but there are more experts outside the unions, primarily because the unions refuse to let their men use new methods and new tools.

To reduce this large item of expense the manufacturers have developed packaged equipment. By far the greater number of potential installations are in the smaller-sized theatres. As anyone can tell you, the smaller the complete unit, the faster the labor cost of installation seems to skyrocket. To overcome this situation, several reputable manufacturers have made available complete self-contained summer cooling units with full automatic control (they can also be adapted to heating, with humidification). This equipment is made in units up to 20 or 25 horsepower, or providing 20 or 25 tons of refrigeration.

Cooling 300-Seat Theatres

Before going further, it might be well to state here and now that a "sure-fire" rule to follow is to install one ton of refrigerating capacity for every fifteen people in your theatre. Thus a 300-seat house requires 20 tons of capacity, with possibly 5 tons more to care for those standing. This is advised regardless of whether the house is up North or down South, or whether it is of light or of heavy construction. The people inside and the air required for ventilation constitute the greatest part of the cooling load. Insist on this estimate as minimum capacity.

The very small theatre of 250 to 300 seats can successfully use two ten-horsepower units, these in combination—say, two 10-ton units; or of course, a twenty or a twenty-five would be applicable. The cost of these units will be found quite in line. It is necessary only to carry them in and hook up small water and electrical connections in order to have full summer cooling—circulating, filtering, cooling and dehumidifying. If water from city mains is expensive for use in the unit condenser, a small cooling tower on the roof is a nominal, good investment.

Fresh air for ventilation through the unit? Not at all necessary; just keep on running your exhaust fan—not as much as before or you will exhaust all your cool air, but ran it just enough to keep the odors down.

Are ducts necessary? Well, yes; but you don't have to install them this year if you really cannot afford to.

Someone has wisely said that no air-conditioning system is better than its air distributing system, and this is very true. But for the time being, with a little care in the location of the units, and some experimenting with the discharge grille, you can get fair cool-air distribution and proper ducts can be installed as soon as you can afford them.

Placement of Units

The units might be placed as shown in Fig. 1, behind the wall up front, or hung from the ceiling on a platform behind the wall, if space is a factor or if the house has a low ceiling. The air should be directed above the patrons' heads and allowed to settle gently.

Another way sometimes effective is to place the units back of the standee rail. In this case the air velocity (not volume) will have to be increased so that the air can be blown forward above the audience's heads and allowed to gently return towards the faces (no one likes a draft on the back of the neck). Every cubic foot of air that leaves the unit will get back to it, but it is wise to place the unit so that return air annoys no one.

When buying this type of equipment, ask to see the unit inside and out—preferably one in use—and get definite assurance that it is quiet in operation. Listen to it run yourself before deciding. Once in a while even the best get noisy—by that I mean that probably one out of a hundred manufactured will develop a noise.

Theatres Seating 400

The theatre having a seating capacity of 350-400 can be taken care of equally well with package equipment, although requiring more careful thought and application engineering. In some cases four self-contained units can be used, two up front and two in the rear—say two 7½-horsepower units in the rear, and two 5-horsepower units up front (Figure 2A). As the number of people vary from hour to hour you can turn the units on or off for any desired temperature condition.

For example, in the above set-up, one five and one 7½-horsepower unit might handle the load at certain times. Ordinarily, though, it is better to let the individual unit stop and start itself with the thermostat which is built into it.

Intelligent engineering analysis might indicate it better to install a semi-custom built system for this size of theatre. By this is meant the use of package equipment not entirely self-contained, but built up or assembled into a complete system—the coils, filters, fan and motor enclosed in one unit, and the compressor and its motor in another package unit. In addition, a system of this type and size should use an evaporative condenser, which is a combination cooling tower and condenser in one package. These three component packages should be hooked up together to form the complete system.

Equipment Arrangement

Again ducts may or may not be used, but it should be planned to use them eventually. If the theatre is small, one coil, filter and fan unit might be used, and duct work run along just one wall. If the theatre has a large cubage for its seating capacity, two coil, filter and fan package units would be desirable, as shown in Figure 3. In a theatre of this size one compressor package unit should be enough, started and stopped by a thermostat as needed. The kind with built-in unloaders for partial or light loads is desirable.

Only in special cases should two compressors be used in such systems for theatres of this size, for two smaller compressors double the labor of installation cost, double the control cost, and double compressor and control failure problems.

Circulation of Air

Fans in the conditioner package unit should run at all times during show hours and have a hand switch to start and stop them. In an installation of this type and size, fresh air should be brought in through these units, but this is generally a simple thing to do. For every cubic foot of fresh air coming in, an equal amount must go out; therefore, leave the front door partly open. When ducts are used, be sure that they are large enough to carry the air quietly. Outlets of the mixing and diffusing type are desirable in the ducts.

Storage Refrigeration

For the theatre having a seating capacity of 550 to 1,000, the correct selection and asembly of package type equipment calls for the advice of an application engineer. Such advise assures the lowest possible first cost and of course a lower operating cost. It is, therefore, worth securing. In 95% of the applications of summer cooling systems to theatres of this size, equipment employing the principle of storage refrigeration is undoubtedly, in my opinion, the most desirable.

This principle involves the use of a small compressor running an average of 20 hours out of 24, to store up in a refrigeration accumulator (again a package), refrigeration to be used subsequently during show hours. Basically this is similar to the storing of electricity in a battery by a small generator for future peak use—as in the release by your automobile battery of enough energy to crank the engine. Employing this special principle in cooling systems for theatres of this size guarantees the lowest possible first and operating costs. Be careful, however, to obtain the advice of an expert in this type of application.

Large Theatre Systems

For the theatre of 1100 to 5000 seats, engage a bona fide air-conditioning engineer or a comparable source of system design, with experience in theatres of this size, and be guided by such counsel. For 70% of such applications, a system employing the storage refrigeration principle will again prove most economical in first and operating cost. The other 30% will require full capacity direct-expansion equipment—that is, complete machine capacity horsepower for each ton of load. In houses of this size the equipment is custom built of special size and capacity for the particular house in question, and for it alone. Therefore, real design and application engineering is very important. Fees of consultants run to only about 7½% or 10%, and they are usually able to reflect substantial reductions in cost over systems installed without their advice.

Probable Cost Basis

As an index of what you should spend, a good reliable system can usually be installed, complete, for $8 to $9 per seat of house capacity. Occasionally, it is possible to do it for less. If complete year-round conditioning—heating as well as cooling—is installed at the same time, the cost would be $10 to $12 per seat (barring unusual structural or other conditions).

Operating costs vary with power and water rates, but the competent engineer can estimate such costs in line with your box office take.

You have recently been given some sound advice in Better Theatres on securing and maintaining effective temperatures in your theatre. Use an effective temperature indicator such as the Therhumiter and control your equipment the year around with the type of thermostat that secures such effective temperatures.

FLUID TRAFFIC PLAN— BLACK LIGHT DECORATION

ACADEMY THEATRE, INGLEWOOD, CALIF.

S. CHARLES LEE, Architect

■ With a floor plan which reduces traffic barriers to a minimum, an architectural and decorative scheme giving full play to the values of showmanship, and a dramatic decorative scheme importantly using "black light," the Academy theatre in Inglewood, Calif., suburb of Los Angeles, is altogether one of the most notable theatre structures built in recent years. Owned and operated by Fox West Coast Theatres, this new house, seating 1,200 on one floor, is located in a fine residential neighborhood; the immediate community has a population of 34,000, but the drawing area is rated as having a population of 175,000. The building, housing only the theatre, is 99 feet wide and 183 feet deep and is of reinforced concrete construction with wood-framed roof. . . . On this page are a rear view of the auditorium with its luminescent-lacquered decorations and radiating ceiling lighting; and a detail of the carved glass mural at the approach to the auditorium (see other view on page 13).

LOOKING INTO VESTIBULE

PLAN AND ENTRANCE AREA:

■ Using curved forms from sidewalk to auditorium, the architect has contrived an approach to both auditorium and lounge areas of unimpeded movement. With traffic in direct line to the auditorium, movement is directed through a central arch in the auditorium wall and turned left or right to the aisle heads. It will be noted in the accompanying floor plan drawing that the curvature of the walls immediately inside the auditorium doors tends to direct ingress to the further aisles, thereby aiding traffic control. . . . The front has a total width of 110 feet. This is dominated by a 125-foot tower of spectacular effect, having a mounting rim of spiral fins edged in blue zeon, and with an inner concealed trough lamped with General Electric Par-38 floodlamps in three color circuits operating on a synchronous flasher causing each color to ascend the spiral to the top, where it vanishes in a neon spiked ball. In this manner the tower at night keeps changing from white to green to red, and the effect is visible for miles. A small replica of this tower also identifies an adjoining parking lot. The tower rises from one side of a 70-foot marquee, which bends out as an integral architectural feature from the low turrets, or rounded structures, housing the lounges and toilets, which are windowed with Owens-Illinois structural glass blocks. In island position, the box office blends into the general curvilinear design, with the plate glass bent to follow the curvature of the base, and with a modernistic "hood" effect completing the enclosure. Large in scale, the box office has a base of stainless steel and bronze. Brilliant lighting is provided at this point by flush-set reflector lamps (General Electric 150-watt waterproof R40 reflectors) in both the marquee soffit and underside of the overlapping box office roof. The display cases also present an interesting departure from the conventional; these are built free-standing and have fluorescent tubular illumination inside and colored neon lighting at the back, so that at night the display seems to be floating in a rose-colored background of light and accordingly draws attention. For decorative effect, the marquee soffit is geometrically striped, with neon centered in each stripe. Illumination of the vestibule itself, which has concrete walls, is supplied by lines of neon within aluminum bands projecting about 2 inches; against the light, these bands show dark, producing a novel effect.

FOYER AND LOUNGE AREA:

■ The foyer is entered through aluminum-plated doors almost entirely glazed with sand-blasted plate glass, above which, to the ceiling, are panels of Owens-Illinois structural glass blocks. The foyer, which is 18 feet high, has walls veneered in Avodire wood (a blonde wood having walnut tones, which here effect delicate vertical striping). The ceiling is tinted rose. Between the auditorium doors is a glass panel with figure symbolizing the art of the motion picture; this is lighted from each side by concealed sources through the edges of the glass, emphasizing moulded effect. Foyer illumination is provided by three ceiling wells with troughed neon and from each of which is suspended white aluminum fixtures of floral pattern having lamps concealed among the "leaves." Carpeting, which is a Saxony weave, is also in a leaf pattern, in tan, blue and rose. The same pattern extends to auditorium and lounges.

■ At right is shown a section of the women's lounge, with its draped dressing tables and winged mirrors; they are built like a scroll and contain a lamp, and also act as a reflector. Walls are of Avodire wood, drapes follow the pattern of those in the foyer. (The men's lounge is of similar general treatment.)

■ On entering to either left or right of the central bank (see floor plan), the patron is in a standee space separated from the seating by a glass screen or standee rail. Treated in a modern ornamental style, the auditorium decorative scheme is concentrated in the ceiling, which is stepped in a pattern radiating in sweeping curves from a large round fixture set against a baffle. These steppings are coved to contain blue neon tubing, which continues part way down the walls, effecting a continuance of the ceiling radiations. This lighting can be dimmed in being turned off for the performance. The steppings also conceal the air diffusers of the ventilating system. It is the stencil ornamentation along the stepping edges and between them which forms the "black light" decoration. Painted in luminescent lacquers, these modernistic medallions and bands glow colorfully during the performance under the action of ultra-violet energy supplied by 24 mercury lamps (GE Par-38 H4's, 100-watts each) concealed in the "petals" of the floral-patterned ceiling fixture. The general color scheme of the auditorium, which is finished in plaster, is about two-thirds blue and one-third ochre, with ornamentation also picked out in red and gold. The screen curtain, which instead of travelling, lifts from the bottom and festoons at the top, has an overdraping of gold; carpeting running onto the stage is burgundy, which is the color of the velour screen masking. Seating is divided into three wide banks with four aisles, the side banks having twelve chairs to the row except in the first few rows and last six rows (note in plan narrowing of aisle at rear); and the center bank fourteen chairs. Chairs, American of the "Bodiform" type, have backs covered in figured velour and seats in leatherette. . . . The projection room measures 30 x 12, with equipment including, besides two projectors, a spotlight and effect machine. Adjoining the projection room is a general storage room entered from the outside as well as from the projection room, permitting film delivery direct rather than through the foyer; similarly, lamps and letters are stored so that they need not be carried through the theatre.

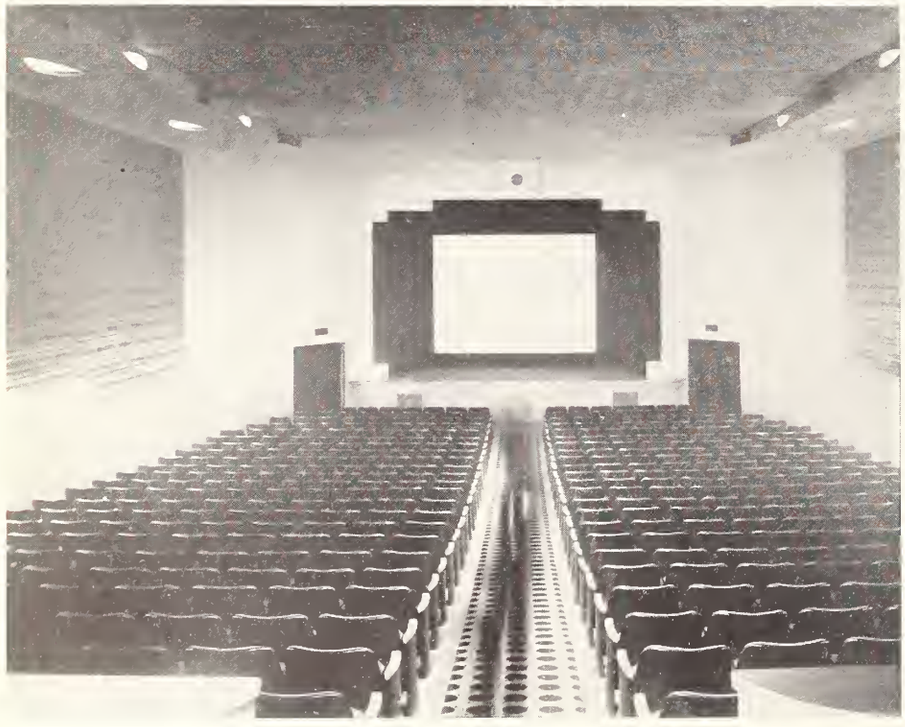
SMALL TOWN SCHEMES UNIQUE

LIFE THEATRE, WOODSFIELD, OHIO

■ It is not every day that one runs across a theatre with as many original and suggestive features as are found in the Life theatre in Woodsfield, Ohio. Furthermore, it was designed by a son of the owner, J. J. Shannon. The son, Joseph A. Shannon, and his brothers George, Philip and Fred, are associated with their father in the operation of the theatre. The Life (the name was suggested by the picture publication) seats 450. Woodsfield has a population of only about 2,500.

One of Mr. Shannon's unique schemes employs the material polaroid in door windows. Polaroid was perfected several years ago as a means of preventing light reflections, glare, etc. (It is now regularly used in cinematography.) Polaroid is available in transparent sheets, and its nature is such that if one holds a sheet in front of another sheet so as to look through both at some object, and rotates one of the sheets, ultimately sight of the object beyond is cut off. This is because polaroid, a crystalline substance, transmits light in only one plane.



Entrance into the Life theatre is through an open vestibule, then through doors into a lobby, then through another set of doors into foyer-standee area. Mr. Shannon explains the polaroid window arrangement of the doors in this way:

"There are six sets of doors altoghether, three double-doors in each tier. Each has a circular window of polaroid, with the matreial in one tier of doors placed counter to that in the other. In this way, although light can come through from outdoors into the lobby, it cannot go through the windows of the doors leading into the auditorium. This allows us to use daylight for lighting the lobby during the day. Also, the windows of the auditorium doors allow people coming out to see people approaching from the lobby, yet the outside or lobby light does not get into the auditorium. When patrons come up to these doors, the windows look just like any glass window, and they can see through it and avoid pushing the door open into another person. This use of polaroid has created quite a lot of interest and I believe that this material will be used in more ways than this as time goes on."

Still another novel feature of the Life theatre is a sand-blasted glass projection screen just on the front of the building. The facade (see accompanying photograph) is designed with a recessed central area, and the screen is centered in the wall behind the marquee. This set-back space is also used as a place to serve refreshments outdoors, the marquee roof forming its floor. This, however, will be referred to in a later paragraph.

The outdoor screen measures 7x5 feet and on it at night trailers and similar preview or advertising films are projected. The projection is from the regular projection room without additional equipment. Mr. Shannon, however, prefers not to divulge the details of this scheme at this time.

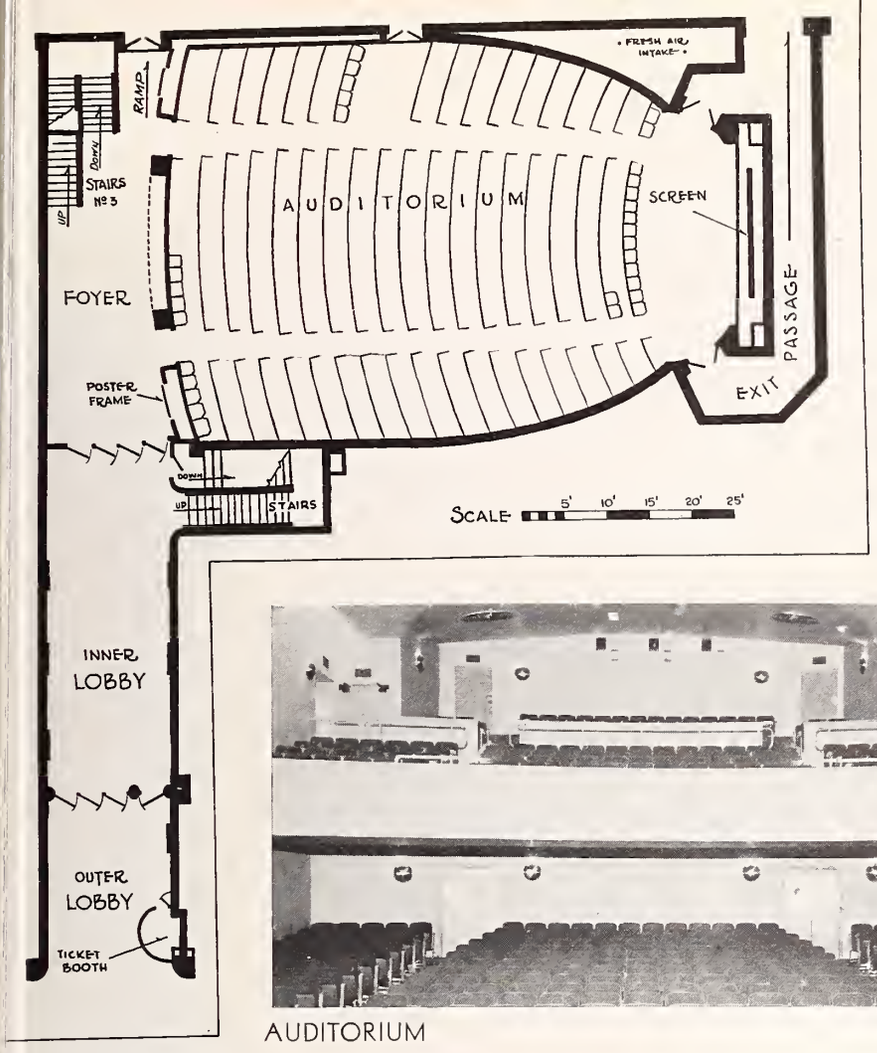
As to the refreshment arrangement:

"We placed a small soft drink parlor and lunch room just behind the projection room. I believe this idea can be much better developed in a large city, although it is an excellent idea for small towns, too. We can serve 24 people sitting, and about twelve standing. A door leads out on the roof of the marquee, and in the summer we serve out there also."

Regarding the general architectural and decorative treatment, Mr. Shannon writes:

"The front of the building is of brick and architectural glass, arranged so that the cream brick is between dark red lines of bricks. The glass along the lower part and in the vestibule is beige and wine color, wit hthe beige slightly darker than the cream bricks, and the wine-color glass is about the same shade as the dark red bricks. The windows are about 17 inches high and 4 feet wide with glass blocks in th ecenter and two window vents on each side, which makes these windows in keeping wit hthe general design of the front.

"The auditorium is done in two shades of orchid—a darker base and a lighter ceiling. Side walls have panels of fabric; this is gold with woven lines. Reflector fixtures are built in the air ducts along cornices and each has three primary colors with each color controlled by rheostate so that the colors can be mixed. Around the stage are other built-in fixtures."



The entire theatre is cooled by passing incoming air over ice.

LOBBY

■ Constructed in the remodeling of the venerable Capitol Building, a store and office structure at the corner of Randolph and State Streets, the Telenews theatre is Chicago's first newsreel theatre. Theatre facilities occupy space on three floors, with lounges in a sublevel, and projection gallery, usher's room and storage behind a small balcony. The total seating capacity is 600, with 400 on the main floor. As the drawing of the floor plan shows, approach to the auditorium is through a long narrow lobby area, which extends beyond stores on either side. Wth the box office located at the sidewalk on the right side, and equipped with turnstile, the vestibule has Carrara glass walls and a terrazzo floor. This leads into a lobby with plaster walls stenciled in a grey and red block pattern with "Telenews" monogram. Doors are of hollow metal with baked-on enamel. The cement floor is laid with Bigelow-Sanford Wilton carpet with black figures on beige ground, which pattern is used throughout the theatre. The auditorium is finished in plaster painted greenish blue with small stripes in red and grey. Illumination is provided by incandescent lamps in brass ceiling plaques. The rear wall of the auditorium is finished in Burgess acoustical tile. Seating, by American, has grey aisle standards, blue velour backs, and grey leatherette seats. The Telenews is completely air-conditioned, with refrigeration equipment by Westinghouse. Projection equipment is of regular front type by Simplex projectors; the sound system is RCA. The Telenews is operated from 9 a. m. to midnight, with the admission price 25c at all times. Officers of the operating company are all of New York; Herbert Sheftel is president, Angier Biddle Duke is chairman of the board.

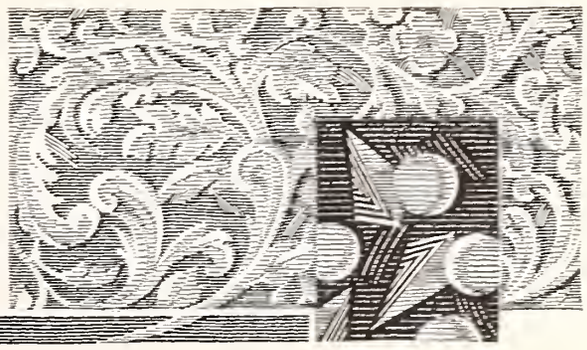
CARPET IN LIGHT

PICTORIALLY DEMONSTRATING THE NEW FLUORESCENT FLOOR COVERING



■ Above, as your aisle would look to you and your patrons if laid with fluorescent carpet; and below the effect under ordinary light compared with that under "black light." Installation methods are presented on the following two pages.

CARPET Selection & maintenance

Foyer and lounge floors, and stairways, are always conspicuous—keep them well groomed.

The Application and Lighting of Fluorescent Carpet

• Outlining the characteristics of the new type of floor covering for directional and decorative purposes, and the recommended "black light" equipment for its use

ONE OF THE most sensational phases of the new application of "black light" to decoration is the development of fluorescent carpeting. As the use of luminescent lacquers in the decorative treatment of walls and ceilings, especially in the auditorium, increases and is better understood as a source of running illumination as well as decoration, remarkable effects are likely to issue from the hands of designers adept in this technique. But fluorescent carpet has immediately appealed to the public imagination, a fact demonstrated at exhibits of the new carpet in New York. The observer from other fields than the theatre business at once sees its possibilities, as a source of beauty, as a safety measure, and as a convenience.

Brought out by Alexander Smith & Sons, prominent carpet manufacturers, fluorescent carpeting was experimentally installed in a theatre—Warners' Kennedy in Washington, D. C.—last June. Since then tests of lighting conditions suitable to it for complete effectiveness have been conducted, and with exact lighting specifications now worked out, the carpeting has been placed on the market.

Because of the relative darkness of the auditorium during most of the operating hours, the application of fluorescent carpeting to aisles immediately asserts itself. Its use in the Kennedy theatre was confined to the aisles of this single-floor theatre; naturally such carpeting, with its pattern, or part of it, glowing in the semi-darkness, would have as much value on balcony steps and cross-aisles.

As a Directional Device

Fluorescent carpeting, however, has interesting possibilities as a subtle, decorative directional device in areas at the rear of auditoriums, which is an application of significance today when floor plans, more compact as a result of smaller seating capacities and plots, are wont to treat the standee and foyer areas integrally, with lounges immediately off this space.

Fluorescent carpeting would permit a lower light level than otherwise would be necessary for a greater part, if not all, of this foyer-standee area, contributing some illumination by its own glow and giving definite direction to aisles, lounges and any exits. Some direction could be effected by making certain elements of an overall pattern fluorescent, by introducing fluorescent stripes into plain grounds, and similar devices.

Color and Pattern

The durability of fluorescent carpeting, and its maintenance, are asserted by the manufacturer to be precisely the same as those characterizing regular carpeting of comparable weave. The dyes in fluorescent carpet differ, however, from regular dyes and are more costly, hence fluorescent carpet costs somewhat more than regular carpeting—perhaps in the neighborhood of 20% more. The fluorescent dyes—which, incidentally, are not to be identified with luminescent lacquers used in wall and ceiling decorations and stage effects, but are rather pigments having, by their own chemical nature, the power to glow under ultra-violet radiation—are applicable to any weaves of carpeting, but the patterns thus made up by Alexander Smith, numbering three, are in this manufacturer's running line of Crestwood Velvets (one of which is shown in the illustrations on page 18). In addition to the possibility of additional patterns as applications get underway, the manufacturer anticipates situations calling for special designs, in which case the minimum weaving is the same as that on any other type of carpeting.

Any special design requirement can be supplied in Velvet or other weaves, but it is specified that colors must be confined to light yellows, tans, oranges, reds and light greens—shades in which suitable dyes are now obtainable. These colors, however, provide a practical range of tones for effective fluorescent patterns, while they may be—probably in most cases should be—combined with regularly dyed colors effecting a somewhat different, or at least more fully developed pattern under ordinary light.

Maintenance Factors

The fluorescent characteristics being in the very dye with which the yarn is colored, the fluorescent areas may be subjected to the same vacuum cleaning and dry cleansing that are applied to the non-fluorescent part of the weave. The only distinction cited by the manufacturer, aside from fluorescence under ultra-violet light, refers to location: The fluorescent dyes are not sun-fast, hence fluorescent carpeting cannot be placed where sunlight strikes it; this, of course, hardly bears upon theatre applications.

Lighting Provisions

Since the original Kennedy theatre installation, experimentation in the lighting of fluorescent carpeting has been conducted by the manufacturer in collaboration with Westinghouse lighting engineers. Any of the mercury type lamps, which require transformer installation, as well as the 2½-watt argon glow lamp, which does not, developed by General Electric and Westinghouse, are applicable, but for aisle lighting the manufacturer of this type of carpeting has issued the following recommendation:

"We have found that to obtain the best results it is advisable to use floodlights in place of the aisle lights. The size of the floodlights is determined by the size of the theatre and, generally speaking, to obtain the best results the 250-watt lamp [see description below] is most satisfactory, with these to be installed at base of balconies, or on top of the standee rail (for main floor). The radiation from these points is sufficient for the entire aisles, and people passing down the aisle will not entirely eliminate the effect because the rays are diffused, not direct. Unless aisle lights are required by local ordinance, the cost of them can be eliminated with this kind of installation.

"About two 250-watt lamps are sufficient for the average theatre auditorium, depending on the width; and the cost of such an installation is in the neighborhood of $200."

With respect to the lighting of fluorescent carpeting elsewhere, the manufacturer states that the 100-watt lamp, which has a shorter range, can be used in foyers and similar areas, as well as for narrow auditorium aisles.

The various types of sources of light energy (this is in the near-ultra-violet part of the light spectrum, not the ultra-violet used in medical treatments, and is of course entirely injurious) are as follows, identified according to standard symbols in the lighting equipment industry:

AH-4 (catalog symbol T-10)—requires blue-glass filter.

BH-4 (catalog symbol T-16)—a natural red-purple bulb not requiring special filter.

CH-4 (catalog symbol PAR-38)—projector-type lamp requiring a blue-glass filter clipped on in front of roundel or lens.

DH-4 (catalog symbol PAR-38)—identical in type with the CH-4, but fits into standard sockets (this is the only type which fits into standard sockets).

EH-4 (catalog symbol T-14)—a floodlamp requiring a blue-glass filter.

250-watt lamps:

AH-5 (catalog symbol T-14)—requires a blue-glass filter, 8 or 10 inches in diameter (at least 8¾ is recommended), with reflector and special socket.

BH-5 (catalog symbol T-14)—same as the AH-5 except that it has an Admedium Screw base, while the other has a Mogul base.

In general, the AH-5 lamps with Corning No. 587 roundels or No. 588 filters, will provide good sources for the main body of the auditorium, including aisles, with the exception of areas close to side walls in a wide theatre. For aisle illumination at sides and in balconies, the PAR-38 lamp is recommended, while the BH-4 is suggested for foyer-standee area (the latter probably being installed in the ceiling if not too high).

Restricting Floodlights

With reference to aisle lighting, it will be seen that the specifications contemplate spilling the light over at least the edges of the seating area. This is of course unnecessary if such spill beyond the aisle is thought undesirable because of the effect of ultra-violet light on the coloration of skin, hair and clothing. The light source can be readily masked to cut the light at the edges of the aisle.

These columns are regular features of Better Theatres dealing with methods by which the theatre may be planned as efficiently as possible for the exhibition of motion pictures. Both Mr. Schlanger and Mr. Potwin are consultants to Better Theatres. All inquiries concerning planning should be addressed to Better Theatres Service Department.

SCREEN SIZE AND POSITION

THE SIZE and position of the motion picture screen should be established in each instance for maximum viewing comfort. There are three factors which govern such determination, as follows:

1. Ability to discern picture detail (affecting picture size).
2. Reducing physical obstruction of the view of the screen to a minimum.
3. Keeping the angles of vision within a range which will assure comfortable posture when viewing upward or downward, as the case may be.

Experience and research to date has proved that the picture width should never be larger than a dimension arrived at by dividing the maximum viewing distance by 5.2, and the picture width should never be smaller than a dimension arrived at in the same way, using 5.8 as the divisor. These figures are based on the assumption that the first row of seats will be away from the screen a distance of at least the width of the picture.

Front and Rear Adjustment

Using a divisor of less than 5.2 will make the picture too big for the front half of the auditorium, and using a divisor of greater than 5.8 will make the picture too small for the rear half of the auditorium.

These dimensions are also based on the assumption that the screen illumination and auditorium lighting is designed within the tolerable ranges set up by good practice, which generally means that you should have about 10 foot-candles incident light, average, over the entire area of the picture, and lighting surrounding the picture which is not too highly contrasted with the screen.

The problems of the angles of vision and the clearance lines of vision are interlocked and one cannot be solved without the other being considered also.

Screen Distance Factor

The tendency in past practice has been to place the picture lower than is advisable for obtaining good clearance lines. One of the reasons for this may be that seats were placed too close to the picture. If the first row of seats is placed away from the picture, a distance equal to one and one-eighth of the width of the picture, the bottom of the picture can be as high as 6 feet above the level of the floor at the first row of seats. This dimension will make it possible to obtain more easily a floor pitch which will prove satisfactory for proper sight clearances without being excessive.

Effect of Metal Ceiling on Acoustics

AN unusual question recently received from an exhibitor who is remodeling his theatre may prove interesting to others. It relates to the acoustical properties of galvanized metal, or "tin", ceilings. This exhibitor asked whether it was necessary to replace the metal with an acoustical ceiling, in addition to applying the treatment proposed for the walls.

Strangely enough, many types of metal ceilings have acoustical value. When sound systems were first installed in a number of older theatres having metal ceilings, the acoustical results often proved to be surprisingly good. There seemed to be more sound absorption in many of these theatres than could be accounted for by calculations.

Action of Metal Ceiling

With instruments designed to measure the reverberation time at different frequencies, it was found that the metal, by virtue of its diaphragmatic action, was contributing to the absorption of sound in the lower frequency range. The metal vibrated or resonated slightly and, as a result of this action, tended to dissipate a part of the sound energy striking its surface.

It is important to note that in cases where metal ceilings have a favorable effect upon acoustics, the framing which serves as a support for the metal is quite rapid and well braced.

Sufficient Bracing Necessary

A material of this type, which is very susceptible to resonance, might have an excessive vibratory action at one or more frequencies if it were not well braced. This would tend to produce a ringing tone or an accentuation of particular frequencies in speech or music. The ornamental surface of the metal is usually beneficial because it causes the very high frequencies to be dispersed or scattered quickly.

It is definitely not intended to advocate the use of metal ceilings as a means of acoustical correction, but rather to show that it is sometimes possible to take advantage of the absorption qualities of such surfaces when they are existent in a theatre. —C.C.P.

WHY ANGLES ACOUSTICALLY?

IN DESIGNING a theatre functionally for good acoustics, the exhibitor and the architect should understand the value or purpose of angular, convexly curved, or otherwise broken surfaces.

A theatre structure was brought to my attention recently wherein both the rear and side walls had been designed with a series of angular shapes extending vertically from floor to ceiling. No two walls in the theatre were parallel—yet the sound bounced from surface to surface as much, if not more, than it would have if the auditorium had conformed in shape to a rectangular box. The one requirement which would have made it possible to use angles most successfully had been entirely overlooked by the architect in developing his original plan. The auditorium was of the single floor type, with an excessive ceiling height. No consideration whatever had been given to the factor of limiting cubic foot volume, in basic design.

Effect of Cubage

The amount of reverberation in a theatre is dependent to a large extent upon the cubic foot volume. If the volume is excessive, the reverberation time is usually high and acoustical treatment is inevitably required. By avoiding excessive ceiling heights and otherwise limiting cubic foot volume, the reverberation time can be brought well within acceptable limits in the initial planning stage, assuming of course that the usual upholstered seats and carpet are to be installed. Then, and only then, can irregularly formed surfaces be used most advantageously.

Function of Surfaces

The purpose of these surfaces is to cause the reflected sound to fall more often upon the absorbent areas, namely, the seats, carpet, and audience, in theatres where cubic foot volume is planned fundamentally to ensure a low reverberation time. Such surfaces cannot reduce the apparent reverberation sufficiently, however, if the basic design of the auditorium is such as to produce excessive reverberation.

Designing a theatre for good acoustics is as much a step-by-step process as is the determination of the screen position, placement of the projection room, and planning of sightlines. Naturally, such designing must go hand-in-hand with all the other factors of theatre planning if the superior results we are all continually striving for are to be achieved.

" . . today the theatre must assure its public breathing comfort."

Cleaner Air for Theatres—Electrically

● Thoroughly cleansed air means reduced maintenance, greater air-supply efficiency. Now 85% of dust in air can be removed by a new method

By E. H. R. PEGG

THEATRE OPERATORS and air-conditioning engineers have for many years been faced with the problem of supplying adequately clean air to the interiors of theatres. Enormous cleaning and redecorating bills are the annual tool which dirt and dust annually exact on the theater industry. Dirt and dust clog up the heating and cooling coils of air-conditioning systems, render them inefficient and skyrocket operating and maintenance expense.

Fig. 1—Precipitron cell.

A great many methods have been used in the attempt to solve the problem of dust. A few of the more generally known methods are air washers, dry filters and viscous filters. All of these can be classified as mechanical methods and were developed to meet specific requirements, or to improve upon previous practice. These methods depend upon the mechanical separation of dust particles from the air: (1) By washing them from the air; (2) by screening them from the air—that is, passing the air through a finely woven mat or fabric; or (3) by impinging the particles upon a viscous coated surface where they adhere.

The fact that many types of dust, such as soot, are very difficult to wet, and the fact that the great majority of particles are too small to be screened from the air or to be impinged on a viscous surface when the air suddenly changes direction, limits the effectiveness of the above methods of cleaning air.

Electrical Dust Removal

Electrostatic precipitation has long been recognized as the most efficient means of separating solid particles from a gas or air. Until recently, however, it could not be used to clean air meant for human consumption because the conventional precipitator generates so much ozone that the cleaned air, although free of dust, is too irritating to the membranes of the body air passages to be used for ventilation. Recently, however, this objection has been overcome with the development of a new electrostatic precipitator known as the Precipitron, developed by Westinghouse.

The Precipitron offers all the advantages of electrostatic precipitation at a fraction of its former cost and produces such minute quantities of ozone that the air cleaned by it may be used in ventilating systems. In fact, the quantity of ozone in air cleaned by the Precipitron is comparable to that found in outdoor air in bright sunlight.

How Precipitron Works

The Precipitron depends for its action upon the cleaning effect on gases of what engineers call a corona discharge. That is to say, air containing dust particles is caused to move through an intense electrified area (electrostatic field) where the dust particles are given an electrical charge, or are said to be "ionized." Then the particle, due to its electrical charge, is deposited on an electrified plate (electrode) whose polarity (quality of electrical charge) is opposite to that of the charge on the particle. Since any solid particle, regardless of its composition or size, can be given a charge, the Precipitron is effective in removing dust and smoke particles ranging in size from the largest particle that can remain suspended in air in motion, down to a size approaching the size of the air molecule itself!

There are just two essential parts to the Precipitron. First, the collector cell which ionizes and collects the dust particles; second, the power pack which supplies electrical energy to the cells.

A collector cell is illustrated in Figure 1. This cell is a complete self-contained unit of all-metal construction (except insulators). It has a frontal area of 2 square feet and is capable of cleaning 750 cubic feet of air per minute. These cells may be arranged side by side and stacked in tiers to meet the air volume and space requirements encountered for any given ventilating system.

The power pack illustrated in Figure 2, contains all the transformers, rectifiers and capacitors necessary to supply direct cur-ent energy to as many as 50 collector cells. t also contains an integral indicating sys- em for the visual indication of operating onditions. The power pack is operated n the conventional 115-volt 60-cycle cir- uit and draws a maximum of 380 watts of ower at full load.

Equipment Installation

stalled side by side and in tiers. The num- ber of cells required for a given ventilating system is determined by dividing the air volume by 750. Thus, a system circulating 36,000 cubic feet of air per minute would require 48 cells.

The space required for the Precipitron can be obtained by multiplying the number of cells by 2 square feet; in the above ex- ample, the cross-sectional area of the duct necessary would be 48x2, or 96 square feet. Various combinations of height and width may be used to obtain this area, and the number of tiers and the number of cells per tier are set to suit these dimensions.

The power pack is mounted at some con- venient location outside the duct, and the electrical connections made to the cells through conduit. If more than one power pack is required, the primaries are wired in parallel, and the secondary, or cell load, is divided equally among them.

The Precipitron bears the same relation- ship as the conventional mechanical filters to the other component parts of an air- conditioning system. The engineer or ar- chitect locates the Percipitron, the heating and cooling coils, the humidifier and the fan to suit individual conditions. It is good practice, however, to locate the Pre- cipitron ahead of all other equipment so that this equipment will be protected from dust and dirt and will therefore operate more efficiently.

Of special interest to theatre operators is the fact that the Precipitron is listed by Underwriters' Laboratories, Inc., under their fire and smoke hazard regulations. The Precipitron will not contribute fuel when attacked by flame, nor will it emit large volumes of smoke.

Costs and Maintenance

The initial cost of the Precipitron is slightly greater than the cost of the best mechanical filter. Maintenance and op- erating costs are low. The chief item of maintenance is the periodic washing down of the cells at intervals of from six to twelve weeks. During this period the cells have collected a large quantity of dust and dirt. The dirt is removed by simply play- ing a stream of water on the cells, which flushes off the dirt and carries it into a sewer. The operating expense consists of the small amount of power consumed plus an occasional tube replacement.

There are many benefits to be derived from Precipitron-cleaned air. Redecora- tion costs are greatly reduced because walls and ceilings, drapes, curtains and other furnishings stay clean much longer. The entire air-conditioning system stays cleaner which results in more efficient and economi- cal operation. In some cases the use of the Precipitron has permitted a reduction in the amount of fresh air supplied, resulting in a great saving in the cost of operation during heating and cooling seasons.

Possible Added Benefits

Although smoking in theatres is not very common or widespread, there are theatres where it is permitted. Since the Precipi- tron is just as efficient in the removal of the very small particles which constitute tobacco smoke as it is on larger dust par- ticles, it will keep the air cleaned of this objectionable smoke. (Perhaps the use of Precipitron will cause smoking in theatres to become more common).

Air free of both large and small par- ticles might conceivably aid projection. Theoretically, if the air in a theatre were absolutely free of airborne particles, the beam of light from the projector would be invisible until it was reflected from the screen. The image on the screen under these conditions would be much clearer because none of the light would have been reflected from solid particles in the air as it is under normal conditions. This ideal condition is impossible, however, because it is not commercially practicable to remove 100% of the air-borne particles. Nevertheless, the ideal condition can be approached by use of the Precipitron, which removes 85%—more under special conditions—of all particles in air, and all of the dirt injurious to interior finishes.

[The author is an engineer associated with the Precipitron division of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, in Cleveland. Equipment for electrostatic cleansing of air has been under development by Westinghouse for a number of years; a practical installation of the Precipitron was made in the Field Building in Chicago a few years ago, and several others subsequently. These afforded practical tests indicating design modifications, and it was not until last December that Precipitron equipment was made generally available. Air-Conditioning Units for Theatres Large and Small

A COMPLETE line of air-conditioning equipment for theatres is manufactured by the General Electric Company, from self-contained units such as referred to by Carl F. Boester in his article in this issue (page 9) to refrigeration machines designed for the largest and most flexible installations, with all of it designed to meet the specifications of any type of cooling system.

The Freon condenser units are available in capacities supplying up to 50 tons of refrigeration, thus are adapted to flexible combinations to meet variable load requirements. Over 15 basic types are available and over 200 possible models, permitting the selection of the exact model for any specific application to meet the range of theatre requirements.

GE self-contained cabinet unit.

Two types of water-cooled condensers are used—shell and tube, and shell-and-finned-coil. Condensing units are also available for use with evaporative condensers where it is advisable to conserve water.

Self-Contained Unit

Illustrated is one of the types of GE self-contained air-conditioners. These are available in cooling capacities of from 5 to 10 tons. Adapted to the air-conditioning of small theatres (seating up to 400 or so) when properly combined (as indicated in Mr. Boester's discussion), these units provide cooling, dehumidification, circulation and filtering. They are also adapted to all-year air-conditioning, with heating and humidification. Each unit is shipped in two sections, completely assembled with standard controls, including a thermostat mounted on the unit, and is ready to operate upon attachment to power and water supply, and connection of the condensing unit.

Aspirating Air Diffuser in a New Wall Type

AUGMENTING ITS line of downward type (ceiling) Anemostat air diffusers, the Anemostat Corporation of America has brought out a model of the same circulating characteristics for wall outlets.

Anemostats are designed to introduce conditioned air into the building in a motion and at a rate of speed insuring thorough mixing of the new air with that in the room, so that cooled air reaches the breathing zone at the proper temperature. The wall model provides greater flexibility of application for this advanced type of diffuser.

The wall type consists in a series of diverging semi-elliptical metal members placed one within the other, the unit mounted flush with the wall. Air fanned through a duct system is converted into multiple currents travelling in layers or blankets at many angles to each other.

Condensers Up to 100 Tons; Complete Units to 25 Tons

THE LINE OF air-conditioning equipment manufactured by Westinghouse embraces all types of cooling units, providing refrigeration for every method of central plant operation, with condensers of capacities up to 100 tons of refrigeration; and self-contained units available in capacities up to 25 tons of refrigeration.

built units are available for installation in central-plant type theatre systems. The cabinet contains blower type fans and provides facilities for installation of cooling and heating coils, filters and humidifiers. These units are available in five capacities for systems of approximately 7½ to 35 tons refrigeration. The fans, included as standard equipment in the unit, range in capacity from approximately 1,600 cfm. to 12,000 cfm. The unit is built in three major sections—the fan, the coil, and the filter sections. The complete unit is crated and shipped in relatively small sections to facilitate handling.

The coil section provides for installation of cooling and dehumidifying surfaces for summer air-conditioning, and for heating surfaces and humidifying sprays for winter air-conditioning.

As a means of conserving water, the Westinghouse "Aquamiser" provides an evaporative type condenser for installation as part of the central plant. The Aquamiser is rated to save about 90% in water consumption, by utilizing the latent heat of water.

The Aquamiser for theatres consists of three major sections—fan section, condenser section, and sump section, prefabricated and crated at the factory. Each section is small enough to permit passage through a 36-inch door opening.

Recently added to the Westinghouse line is the new 100-ton hermetically sealed compressor. The new unit is designed to require relatively little space. Other features of the design are sealed-in lubrication and a reversible oil pump to prevent harm when phases are inadvertently reversed on the electric power system.

Westinghouse 100-ton compressor.

Installation of the new compressor is simplified by a refrigerant cooled motor that requires no external ventilation. Small for its capacity, the unit fits in corners or odd spaces ordinarily too small. The reduced weight, makes the compressor easier to handle and avoids the necessity of providing special foundations.

The motor is completely enclosed with the compressor to eliminate shaft seal and to prevent dust, dirt and moisture from reaching working parts. The direct drive motor and compressor are mounted on a common crankshaft to avoid "lining up" problems, power losses incident to belt drive, and need for lubricating the driving motor. Low maintenance is also sought in the use of a reversible oil pump that provides positive lubrication regardless of direction of rotation.

The Westinghouse self-contained units are suitable for installation with supply and return air ducts in theatres. They contain all component parts of an air-conditioning system, completely assembled and enclosed in a casing. They are ready for immediate operation upon the connection of water and electrical service and attachment to the duct system.

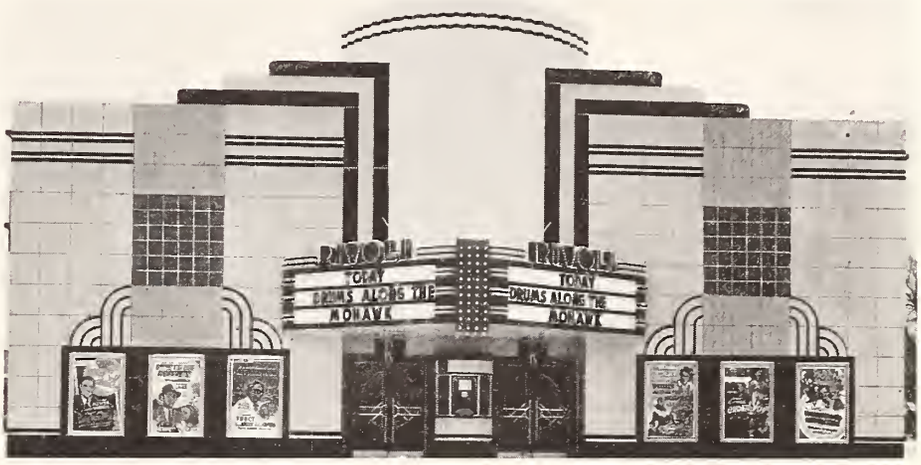
Cleaning and Inspection of The Auditorium

• The third of a series of articles outlining regular maintenance practice to keep the theatre attractive and to check deterioration

By S. BRAVERMAN



WE NOW ENTER the auditorium in this series of discussions of cleaning and maintenance methods, having treated the foyer and lobby in the February issue, and the theatre front previously. In many respects auditorium problems are more complicated and strenuous, because of the presence of seating and the size of the area. Because the auditorium is usually dark while the audience is present there is a certain tendency toward neglect of details; the auditorium, however, is the place where patrons spend most of their time while in the theatre, and they are bound to notice dust and disorder. Darkness, further, conceals no odors, nor does it prevent the deterioration which results from neglect.

Aisle Cleanliness

Carpets are, of course, vacuumed daily, and should be shampooed about twice a year (see the February article for a detailed discussion of carpet maintenance, including suggestions as to proper materials for shampooing, removing chewing gum, etc.). Possible hazards in the carpeting, such as loosening of tacks or the development of tears, should be looked for as an aisle is entered when cleaning the carpet.

A suitable receptacle might well be kept at the back of each aisle, between the last row and the standee rail, in which ushers can promptly deposit paper, chewing gum wrappers or other rubbish which they may pick up in passing along the aisles. Ushers

SPECIAL NOTICE

Reprinted from February issue of "BETTER THEATRES"— about cleaning Carpets and Upholstery:

"In the past the shampooing of carpet while on the floor has often been regarded as inadvisable unless the theatre were closed until the carpet was thoroughly dry. Now, however, carpeting may be conveniently shampooed on the floor with Carbona Soapless Lather, for with this method, if properly applied, the carpet is not soaked through to the backing, and the solution will dry in an hour or two.

This soapless lather is a concentrate, which is mixed with water — about 16 parts water to one part lather. A quick as well as effective means of applying the cleaner is a rubber mop.

By using soapless lather, rinsing is unnecessary, as it leaves no soap scum or other harmful residue to dull colors or become rancid.

Shampooing of course gets rid of even the fine dirt that has become ingrained in the weave, as well as surface soil, thus reducing wear while at the same time renewing its decorative qualities."

"SPREADING COMFORT TO MILLIONS"

should be trained to pick up all such trash very promptly, but inconspicuously. Rubbish dropped in sand urns makes the latter untidy; the receptacle plan is better.

A long-handled, collapsible pick-up dust pan, for bits of paper, etc., that cannot be picked up inconspicuously, should be kept handy for ushers to use.

Ledges and Standee

All ledges should be dusted daily. Wall and ceiling surfaces are properly dusted at frequent intervals to be determined by the nature of their materials. Such attention not only promotes general cleanliness and keeps down odors, but prevents development of cobwebs and reduces discoloration. Wood veneer and painted plaster are wiped down occasionally, preferably using a damp cloth.

Marble and imitation marble surfaces of standee rails may be washed with water and neutral soap, or cleaned with a fine detergent that doesn't scratch. Venetian blinds above standee rails need daily dusting and should be waxed twice a year to protect their finish.

Demountable standee rope posts should be kept polished ready for use. There often is not time to do this when they are needed. Storing them in a heap leads to scratching—make a wood rack to keep them in.

Lighting fixtures are properly cleaned of dust and possible cobwebs at least once a month. The treatment of auditorium lighting fixtures does not differ from the treatment of lobby fixtures described in the February article. Auditorium lighting, however, should be checked often to make sure it causes no glare and does not interfere with the screen.

Aisle lights and splatter reflectors should be wiped off frequently, and inspected at each aisle cleaning.

Seating and Vermin

Seating should be cleaned daily and checked at the same time for loose bolts, loose standards, noisy hinges, loose arm rests, etc. Chairs not much used are all too often neglected; they need the same cleaning and checking as the others.

Vermin are a special problem. They include not only cockroaches, but also bedbugs. Bedbugs most often are brought in by patrons and make themselves at home in the chairs. For dealing with pests in chairs there is a special needle-tipped sprayer which makes removal of the fabric unnecessary. It may be compared to the hypodermic needle used by the medical profession. The cushion is "needled" in five or six locations with an odorless insecticide, after which its surface is sprayed in the usual way with the same insecticide, the surplus being wiped away with a clean cloth. Treatment should be repeated two or three times a week until the pests are destroyed, and once a month thereafter as a precaution.

Another method of eradicating bedbugs as well as other vermin is to seal all doors and other openings after the last show and disseminating a volatile insecticide by means of an electric vaporizer. However, such equipment is usually available only from a professional exterminator.

Ash Receptacles

Incidental to the cleanliness both of seats and of the floor is the use of a suitable ash tray, fastened to the back of each chair, wherever smoking is permitted. New York City now has a law requiring the use of ash trays on all fixed chairs in every area where smoking is allowed, as a matter of safety. It is a good idea in any case, protecting patrons against ashes and burned clothing when cigarettes are dropped to the floor to be stamped out. Leaning over to stamp out the cigarette is also an annoyance to an adjoining patron. A theft-proof, fireproof ash tray, which can easily be turned for emptying by the porter, is now available. It is readily attached to the back panel of the chair, yet cannot be removed except by one with a screwdriver and the know-how.

Back panels of chairs should be inspected each night for scratches, particularly shoe marks, and retouched as necessary. It is a good idea to wax the backs of chairs for the protection of the finish.

Drinking Facilities

Drinking fountains in standee area should of course be kept spotless and cleaned as many times per day as necessary to preserve their immaculate appearance at all times.

Some patrons, it may be here pointed out, prefer cups to fountains; mothers particularly often instruct their children to avoid "bubblers" (few women are acquainted with the existence of guards). It is a good idea to locate the cup dispenser low enough to be within reach of children. The cup itself should be of the flat-bottomed type such as the Dixie cup adopted by many theatres.

Where audiences will not consider them offensive, penny dispensers are feasible, and they provide a small additional income for the theatre. The receptacle for used cups should be cleaned out several times a day, so as to prevent unsightliness and possible odor.

The area between the front row of seats and the screen platform needs special attention. Children are likely to drop rubbish there, particularly in an unused pit, giving rise to odors. If the pit is not used it should be covered over, either permanently or by means of black cloth covers or artificial plants.

The floor beneath the seating should be swept with sweeping compound, or green dust. Remove gum with a putty knife or similar instrument. Floors should be painted, either maroon or gray; paint makes an impervious surface easy to keep clean and does not allow odor-producing moisture to soak in. For a spotless and clean-smelling auditorium, even painted floors should be scrubbed not less than twice a month.

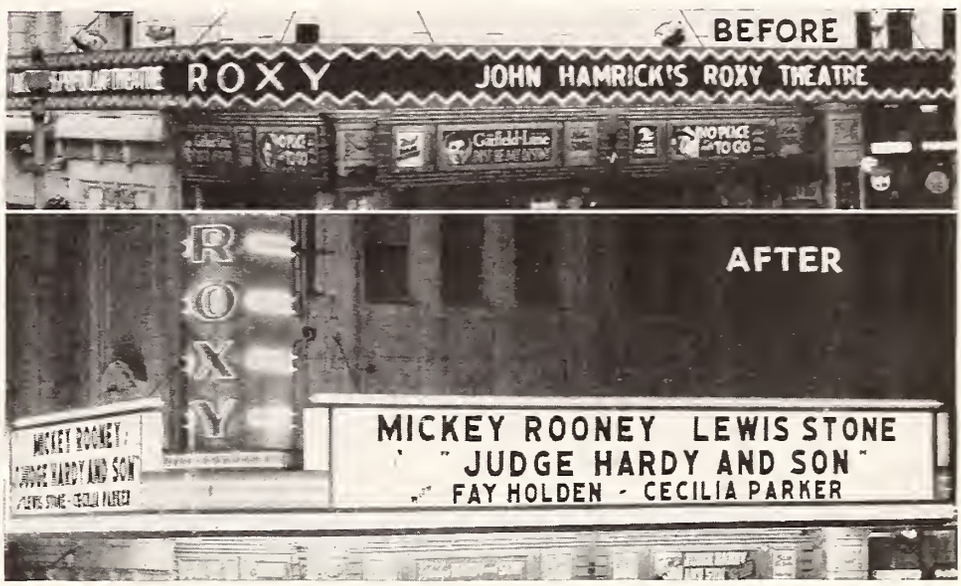
Doors and Stage

The hardware of all exit doors is properly wiped clean daily. Panic bolts of exit doors should be checked for proper operation at every cleaning. Also check for cracks in the doors or their casings, these let in drafts and tend to produce accumulations of dust. Such cracks often develop when a new building "settles"; this calls for the use of weather stripping or more elaborate repairs.

The screen platform or stage should be mopped and any footlights dusted out at least once a week. The drapes should be dusted twice a year, oftener if not too much out of the way. In cleaning proscenium drapes, unused organ grilles, ledges, etc., remember that many surfaces which cannot be seen from orchestra seats are very visible from the balcony.

Miscellaneous Elements

The balcony parapet paint needs touching up from time to time. The parapet rail should be covered with dark velour, not painted, wherever it is felt that too much labor is needed to keep it polished.



Ventilating grilles are too often left smudged. They need frequent brushing.

Projection room port glass needs daily cleaning from the outside, unless so mounted that it can be removed and washed. Incidentally, check to see that projection room working lights do not spill light into the auditorium.

Because production is now on the basis indicated by this view of the inspection department of the General Electric Company's fluorescent lamp works at Nela Park, Cleveland, the prices of GE fluorescent tubular lamps have been reduced, with reductions averaging 15%. In the first year of production, which has just ended, nearly two million of the new type light sources have been turned out. At the outset, the New York and San Francisco took most of the production; now the lamps, widely used in theatres, to which they have brought efficient color lighting, are readily available generally, and the price reductions cover the entire line, from the 15-watt, 18-inch units, to the 48-inch, 40-watt size. . . . At the same General Electric announced price reductions on projector-spot and flood lamps from $1.70 to $1.40.

Modern Lighting Is Adding New Tricks for the Showman

LIGHTING IS the pigment and the brush in the artistry of showmanship. After looking over some of the "B" and "C" houses around the country, it seems that some of our younger managers have never learned that branch of showmanship—and even some of the old timers seem sometimes to forget it.

Color, form and light go hand in hand in the lighting schemes of today. Cafes, cocktail lounges, hotels and bus terminals, as well as transportation vehicles, are all using modern lighting and lighting fixtures as part of their interior treatment, so that the general public is becoming more and more aware of the use of light to soothe, to excite, and to create interesting effects. Even private homes are being decorated with light in ways which just a few years ago were not considered suited to domestic use. All of this seems to make many theatres look old, worn and obsolete.

▶Some of the new catalogs of fixture manufacturers show some fascinating designs and well-thought-out effects that would go especially well in theatres. I would advise every theatre manager to visit the best electrical supply house in his town and spend an hour thumbing through the pictures of new lighting equipment and fixtures that are available. Check the prices. You will be agreeably surprised at how reasonably this lounge or that foyer can be re-fixtured.

Common Faults in Theatre Lighting

I believe that the most common faults or criticisms of the average theatre lighting would come under the following headings in this order:

1. Broken fixtures
2. Dirty fixtures
3. Improper lamping of fixtures
4. Wrong selection of colors where colors are used.
5. An attempt to create atmosphere by use of colored lamps in fixtures, forgetting what those colors do to the rather old draperies, the wall that could stand another painting or cleaning, and finally the effect the colored light has on the appearance of human beings, ladies' make-up, and color in the clothing of patrons

Every manager should send to the General Electric Company at Nela Park, Cleveland, and get for his study and personal file all the information they will send him on "Black Light" and fluorescent materials. There are going to be some very striking theatrical effects available for theatres. In the old days, every once in a while we used to have a fluorescent number on the stage. It was novel and interesting. However, the application today goes far beyond just "stunts." Fluorescent lacquers in their new development give the showman a new instrument with which to add interest to his theatre, while they are interesting for their possibilities as a solution to the problem of auditorium decoration that has always confronted us because of the fact that the auditorium is darkened during most of the operating hours. Nor does the potential value of "black light" end there, since the glow of certain features of the decorative treatment, such as wall striping, ceiling panels, etc., can provide effective running illumination, in conjunction with the light of the screen. It also can add punch to attraction posters.

▶Then there is fluorescent carpeting. By the time these lines get into print, perhaps, or at any rate soon, carpet with fluorescent characteristics will be made available by one of the leading carpeting manufacturers, and every showman should investigate it at once. Such carpet has more than decorative significance, for it is easy to see its possibilities in traffic guidance in the auditorium. When used in balconies and dim parts of stair wells it should afford positive reduction of hazard, maybe to an extent bringing about some decrease in liability insurance costs.

Tubular Fluorescent Lamps

Don't confuse "black light" (ultraviolet) and the fluorescent tubular lighting. The latter is also a new development, or fairly so, and another boon to the showman. I have even used industrial made-up units to do some very attractive lighting in smaller theatres. Where there is insufficient light and overloaded circuits, much can be done to improve the situation with these tubular lamps.

Programming Lighting Improvements

Lighting changes is one thing in theatre operation that can be programmed. Large expenditures do not have to be made at one time. Step by step each architectural division of the theatre can be revamped in such a way as to arouse interest and create much favorable comment. It is interesting to people who frequent the same theatre to see changes from time to time.

A passing comment was recently made to me in a small town by one of the town officials, "Nothing ever changes in our theatre that isn't caused by wear and tear, except the picture." That was his way of telling me he was glad that I had come to town to trick up a few things about the theatre.

▶I am trying out some of the new translucent synthetic materials in architectural lighting in some theatres. When I am sure that these devices stand up, I will send some drawings in to the editor and some information on how to build them, in the hope that he will publish them, as they may help someone who has a very thin lighting budget. [The answer is yes.—ED.].

Illuminating Parking Lots

Many neighborhood theatres and some smalltown theatres now have parking lots for patrons' cars. The floodlighting jobs that have been done run from excellent to very poor, and I really think the average is bad. Floodlighting of large areas is no longer a matter of guess work. With all the night athletic contests, much study has been given the problem. I am sure that if you have a parking lot floodlighting problem, a sketch to scale of the area could be sent through your local lamp distributor to headquarters, where you could obtain qualified advice for just the asking.

Most theatre parking areas are lighted with too few lamps, and lamps of too large wattage—also at too slant angles, thereby causing areas of great brilliance and areas of very deep shadow. Also such methods make every irregularity in the parking surface look like a hole a foot deep.

A Thought in Conclusion

▶Many of the new soft aluminum, snap-on mouldings designed for application with wall boards, have contributed to the making of some pretty and inexpensive lighting fixtures. Investigate.

In "Knight-Knacks," a regular feature concisely offering methods that Mr. Knight has found practical in theatres, he will deal with various phases of theatre operation, and "Knight-Knacks" will appear in different departments, according to the subject.—THE EDITOR.

Attraction Advertising for Communities of Any Size

OCCASIONALLY it is said that the small town theatre need not go to the expense of installing a marquee with attraction board provisions, or at any rate with more than a one-line panel; the reason given is that everybody in town knows what is playing at the theatre, or has little choice at best. The situation, however, is almost never as simple as that; moreover, those who advance that argument overlook the value of complete, brilliant attraction announcement in stimulating the desire to attend the theatre.

That this value of marquee advertising is receiving more and more recognition is indicated by installations in small cities generally, and it is notably demonstrated in the new front of the Prairie theatre. an Eskin Theatres house in Sun Prairie, Wis. Not only does the marquee consist almost entirely in a continuous Adler silhouette-letter attraction panel accommodating 8-, 10- and 12-inch letters, but a one-line panel (unilluminated) spans the entrance.

The general treatment, which is by the Ben B. Poblocki & Sons Company of Milwaukee, is interesting for its adaptation to an extremely narrow entrance. Soffit lighting suitable to the requirements here was economically arranged by making it of flashed opal glass and designing the attraction board lamp housing so that it provided soffit as well as attraction panel illumination. The soffit also carries reflector lamps.

The name signs consist in 24-inch porcelain enamel silhouette letters with double lines of green fluorescent neon tubing.

An installation in a larger community, similarly employing the all-over attraction panel treatment of the marquee, is that of the Banner Theatres' Tivoli in South Bend, Ind., also recently made by the Poblocki organization. This involved complete revision of the entrance area, with porcelain enamel facing and box office, the latter having clear-vision window construction (no corner moldings).

The Adler attraction panels at the sides are 16 feet long, that at front 8 feet, and all 6 feet high, providing space for combinations of 8-, 10- and 12-inch letters, or even two lines of 24-inch letters. Trim dividing the attraction panels and forming a lower border is lighted by 6-watt lamps on a high-speed flasher. Additionally, 100 feet of neon runs between the three rows of lamps.

THE NEW STRONG UTILITY

High Intensity Automatic Projector Arc Lamp

● For the moderate sized theatre using a screen up to 18 feet in width; where the vivid brilliancy of high intensity projection has been heretofore denied by prohibitive operating cost.

To secure the desired screen brilliancy with the present dense black and white and the colored films, twice as much light is required as is possible to project by any low intensity lamp.

This necessary doubling in light over the low intensity has now been made possible at an increased combined current and carbon cost of less than 2c per hour, through the development of a perfectly balanced and coordinated lamp and rectifier unit of intermediate capacity which exactly fits the needs of this class of theatre.

The snow-white light secured by this new lamp makes the low intensity appear a muddy yellow by comparison.

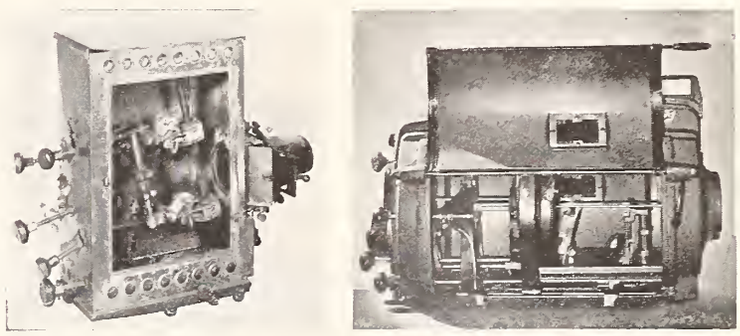
DE LUXE PROJECTION IN SMALL THEATRES

PROJECTION is catching up with the trend to the smaller theatre. It is a trend which has been underway for several years, bringing the "deluxe" theatre to the neighborhood and suburb, putting theatres with every essential facility into many of the small towns from which, in the days of the centralized picture "palace", the industry expected folks to migrate for an evening in the larger town 25 or even 50 miles away.

Projection has not just now begun to catch up with the small theatre trend—sound equipment, projectors, too (as witness the Simplex SI model), have been developed during the last year or two with the new needs of the fine small theatre in mind. But altogether the movement only more or less recently penetrated to projection (curious as this may seem), and right now it definitely has the undivided attention of those who supply the means of projection light.

Only a few months ago the Ashcraft "Cyclex" lamp was brought out to put, through an alternating current source, projection light of white quality within the budget of the small theatres.



Direct-current lamps of high-intensity types but designed for low-cost operation have come on the market more recently.

And the National Carbon Company has developed a new carbon—its so-called "one-kilowatt" high-intensity carbon—to serve such equipment.

Efficiency undreamed of just a few years ago has resulted from the unusual progress made within the last year in projection lighting equipment. It is interesting to compare the high efficiencies and sleek design of a streamlined projection arc lamp of today with the crude and cumbersome straight vertical arc of, say, 1920 vintage.

Those old vertical arcs were at one time looked upon as marvels of efficiency when they burned 75 to 100 amperes of current with 55 to 65 volts across the arc and required a 10-horsepower motor to drive the generator in projecting 500 lumens of muddy yellow light to the screen. Compare this with the modern automatic arc which requires only half of this amount of current to project 2,000 lumens of white light.

Early models used carbons as large as three-fourths of an inch in diameter, which were fed manually and required the constant attention of the projectionist to maintain any degree of steadiness in the light source. Today, carbons are advanced automatically and steadily by the small motor which is built as an integral part of the lamp house and is almost human in the way it maintains the uniform and an accurate arc gap length throughout the entire trim.

Once upon a time . . . . . and one of today's types.

Compare, too, the steady feed carbon mechanism of today with the wobbly arrangement in the old vertical arcs which required continuous attention by the operator to maintain the carbons in coaxial alignment. Also compare the light-gathering power of the old 4-inch condenser with today's large reflector.

Increase in light, however, has not correspondingly increased the heat at the film aperture because the radiant heat energy from today's arc is relatively deficient as compared with the infra-red or heat rays of the old vertical arc.

Crude and inefficient was the earlier lamp—and looked it! A sheet-metal housing, which more or less resembled a bread box! A clumsy burner mechanism which was continually being warped out of alignment and even pulled out sideways by the flexible lead in conductors, which necessitated periodic manual adjustments throughout the burning of the carbons. Compare this with the perfectly aligned, rugged mechanism used today, which will feed the carbons throughout their entire trim without the necessity of adjustment of their arc gap length or focus.

As to carbon developments, they permit the small as well as the large theatre to have a "de luxe theatre" picture, whether projecting black-and-white or color films. National's Orotip-C, the new negative 6-mm. carbon, has been especially developed for use in conjunction with a 7-mm. positive Suprex carbon in the Strong Utility and Simplex High direct-current lamps for the smaller theatres having screens up to 18 feet wide. The 7-mm. x 14-inch Suprex carbons are used in the Ashcraft "Cyclex" alternating current lamps. All of these carbon types are copper-coated and are to be regarded as full-fledged sources of high-intensity light.

The position of the motion picture demands that films be presented in one theatre as in another—that is to say, presented well. The ideal will not be achieved. But we must shoot at it. The only real difference between the average small theatre and the average big theatre should be that of scale. They both are important in the merchandising of what this industry has to sell.—An Editorial.

Construction Response from Hollywood on Mutilation

& Other Comment . . . By F. H. RICHARDSON

IN these columns in the January issue I printed a letter from a live-wire projectionist, Irl Gordon of Akron, Ohio, in which he sharply criticised the powers-that-be in Hollywood because they had asked the reaction of projectionists to the Standard Release Print leader, seeking suggestions for its possible revision.

The Committee of Revision of the Standard Release Print, which is a subcommittee of the Research Council of the Academy, promptly addressed Mr. Gordon with a statement that the publication of the aforesaid letter had come to its attention; that when the committee was appointed it was given the responsibility of determining the practicability of the use of the present Standard Release Print, and to consider such possible revisions as would make the SRP more effective.

"However," continued the committee, through its chairman, S. J. Twining, "it is extremely difficult to know what happens, or may happen, to a release print after it leaves the studio. Damaged or mutilated prints are repaired by replacing the damaged parts with the required length of film. This is done by the exchange. We are aware that from time to time leaders without frame lines reach theatres. Our experience is that, when traced down, it invariably is found that these non-standard marks are the product of exchange repair work."

One of the responsibilities of this organization, Mr. Gordon was told, is to "police" standards. The letter continues, "We would appreciate your kindness if you would send us the names of the productions upon which you commented in your letter to Mr. Richardson; also the approximate date upon which you had them. If you will do this, we will undertake to get in touch with the proper authorities in each of the companies involved, in which event we are sure the matter will be given more attention, at least in these particular exchanges, than has heretofore been the case.

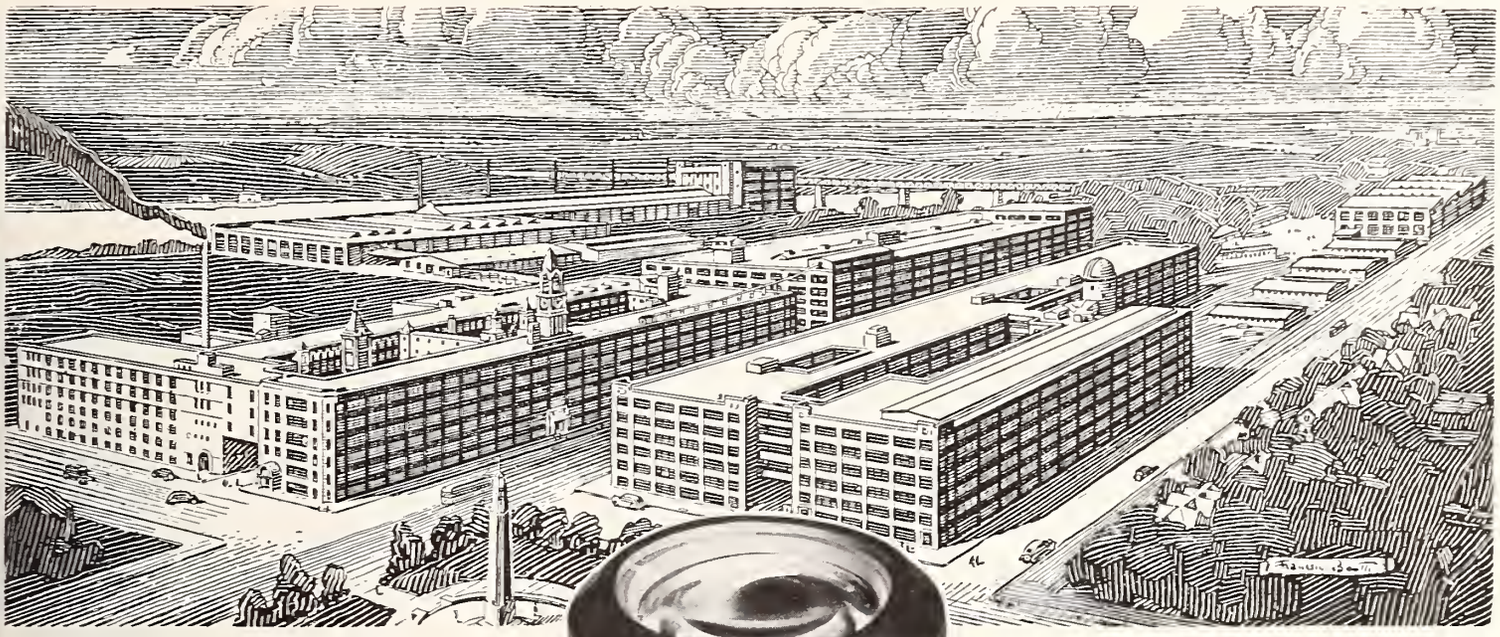
"Our entire effort is to so co-ordinate the laboratory, the exchange and the theatre, so far as concerns the S. R. Print leader, that projectionists will be provided proper means for effecting a smooth changeover."

"One other point," writes the committee," is with relation to the possibilities for providing cue marks on trailers. We wonder if you have the answer to the problem of cutting out these cue marks after the trailer has been through several runs and has had many splices made on the end of it—newsreels and other prints being spliced on. That has always been the problem in connection with trailers.

"This Committee and its parent body, the Research Council, is always interested in any and all comments by projectionists concerning problems met with in their work and is seeking to solve motion picture projection problems. We sincerely appreciate your comments on this particular problem."

Here is constructive response; it demonstrates the practical interest of the Research Council in the presentation of product to the public. It is scarcely necessary to add that I shall be very glad to transmit to it, either by publication (in cases where that seems the best way) or by mail, all criticisms made by projectionists. I ask, however, that all data be given, such as the time the print was used, exact description of faults found; also all possible suggestions for improvement should be included. We might, in this way, assist very materially in improving the sloppy processes practiced in some exchanges.

Conditions Requiring Volume Adjustment



FROM J. A. Bradley, projectionist of Taylorville, Ill., comes this letter:

"May I present to you what seems a perplexing problem doubtless encountered by other projectionists. I am a 'relief' man working in two theatres, one being a 1,300-seat 'deluxe' first-run house equipped with Western Electric Mirrophonic sound. The other is a Class-B theatre having RCA photophone with rotary stabilizer. Its equipment is something more than two years old. Last week it was thoroughly checked by an Altec engineer handling this territory, who assured me the volume control showed normal gain.

"However, I find that from a point considerably below the proper house level, principally on Paramount and Universal and particularly on Columbia recording, it seems to pass through a 'mushy' stage and gives but very little gain in volume compared to what it should have.

"Warner films, while inclined to blare out in spots more than is required to emphasize high points in the picture, shows good gain when the volume control is advanced. Fox recording is level, though weak. I have less trouble with Monogram and Republic than with the first three named.

"The engineer tells me this is caused by

B&L f:2 Super Cinephor—fully color corrected, high transmission, unexcelled performance.

B&L f:2 Cinephor—second in performance only to the Super Cinephor.

B&L Series I Cinephor—for portable and semi-portable installations.

B&L Series II Cinephor—for the rigid requirements of projection when long throws are necessary.

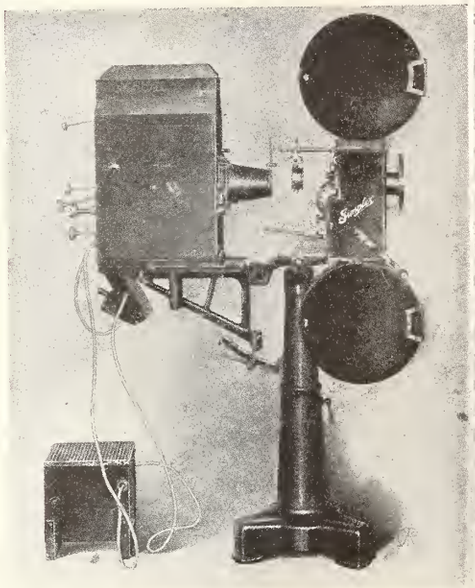
weakening of the recording signals with the idea of providing better operation. Doubtless he is correct, but if so it just does not work out. Moreover, I fail to see the reason, if any, why if a production is properly recorded, projectionists should be required to be sound technicians and duplicate the studio's efforts. Granting that certain adjustments probably will be necessary at times, still we are presumably progressing and these adjustments should become less and less.

.Can you suggest a remedy for this trouble? It seems that after the 'mushy' stage is passed by, perhaps as much as three points, the sound takes hold and the gain is quite rapid."

While it seldom is possible to diagnose a trouble of this kind with absolute certainty unless actually on the spot, the facts as stated seem to indicate nothing more than that Bradley has encountered one of the "growing pains" of our still relatively young industry. Both recording technique and reproducing systems have undergone very recent improvement, with the result that sometimes it becomes very necessary to watch volume control closely when running the latest prints on equipments that were designed three or four years ago.

It is noted that Brother Bradley does not encounter the difficulty complained of in the first-run theatre, which apparently has equipment of later design than that in the Class-B house. It is further noted that in the Class-B house he encounters the greatest trouble with the product of those producers that have advanced most rapidly of late in the matter of improving recording practices. In short, the very progress which Brother Bradley himself refers to appears, at this distance, to be the seat of his trouble. Projectionists must pay more attention to volume control setting in theatres that do not have apparatus of the latest design.



A Timely Note on A Projection Pioneer

E. S. PORTER is one of the relatively few pioneers left to us from the projection equipment field of early days. Frank Cannock and "E.S.," together designed and built the first Simplex. With possible minor variations, due to the mists of time, it all happened thus:

In 1910, when your scribe first located in New York, E. S. Porter owned and operated the Eden Musee, located on West 23rd Street not far from Eighth Avenue. The Musee consisted of a unique collection of wax figures posed to represent historic events, and a small theatre in which motion pictures were displayed, Frank Cannock acting as projectionist. The Musee was widely known and had a large clientele.

Sometime in 1911 Mr. Cannock resigned and started building a motion picture projector that he had designed (for Cannock was an "operator" who had ideas). I am unable to recall the name he gave the projector, but he had made the mistake of adopting a too-light form of construction, though the general design was good. I can vouch for that, as I operated the projector several times, showing wild animal scenes taken in Africa. In fact I projected African scenes taken by the noted photographer Jack Hemment before the President of our country who, much to the disgust of the 50 guests assembled at the Lamb's Club in Washington, came up on the balcony (the projector was not enclosed) and spent most of the evening watching the projector and asking questions as to how it operated.

Sometime late in 1911, or early in 1912, Mr. Porter closed the Musee, whereupon he and Mr. Cannock formed an organization known as the Precision Machine Company, and proceeded to design another projector. This was the first Simplex.

All of which leads up to the fact that Mr. Porter has been very ill. In fact, he went right down to the shore of that river we all must cross one day; but being a mechanical expert, he inspected the ferry, turned it down as unsafe and refused to embark. He is now convalescing down Florida way and is well along the road to recovery.

He was in a hospital in New Haven, Conn., for several weeks. I advised the New Haven local, which sent a committee composed of its officers to cheer him up. Mr. Porter is now at Miami Retreat, North Miami Avenue at 79th street, Miami, and I'm sure it would cheer him a lot to have a friendly letter from Simplex users, or perhaps even from local unions.

That Intermittent Flicker Again!

J. R. PRATER, projectionist of Palouse, Wash., submits still further comment on the subject of intermittent flicker, which has had a couple of rounds already in these columns. This is a matter of sufficient interest, however, to justify a third time. Friend Prater says:

"This intermittent flicker matter is o particular interest, especially after our recent discussion of shutters. Despite the fact that I see fit to use a semi-transparent flicker blade on my portable projectors, using Mazda light sources [He employs portables for use in three small theatres located in villages some distance apart.—F. H. R.]. I agree with the writer of the letter on page 48 in the February issue. In fact, I wish to emphasize his point, that any departure from a shutter having blades of identical proportions tends to increase flicker visibility.

"I have determined by experiment that even with low-intensity light sources, using a master blade only ¼-inch wider than the opposite blade, will noticeably increase flicker when light is projected without film threaded in. A master blade ½-inch wider than the opposite blade will introduce a very objectionable flicker when using film of average density, whereas an opening ½-inch wide in the center of the flicker blade, thus in effect creating a modified three-blade shutter, has an equally noticeable effect.

"Mark you well, though, I have not pulled any stunts like this in regular program projection, only in off-the-record experimentation which has provided basic facts. Knowing that flicker visibility increases with brightness of screen illumination, one realizes that the only condition which may justify using an unbalanced shutter is that encountered when illumination power is very inadequate.

"In this case, even after securing more screen illumination by using an unbalanced shutter, it may still be below the level at which flicker becomes too objectionable. The final result then is poor projection. Let us therefore pray the day is not far off when even the grasshopper circuits can and will employ more screen illumination than some are now using."

A Criticism of Preview Makeup

A LETTER has come from Orvin Hemmingson, projectionist of the Avolin theatre at West Union, Ia., voicing criticism of previews. He writes: "In the February issue of BETTER THEATRES, page 44, I noticed a letter from Guy C. Black, projectionist, with whom I worked for a time some years ago. I see he has the same keen interest in his profession he had at that time. More power to him!

"Black spoke of damage to prints received by his theatre. I seem to be in a favored location myself. Most of the features received are as new and clean as the proverbial hound's tooth. However, that cannot be said of the previews I am obliged to project. Most of them are marked in just about every possible way toward the end. It seems there should be decency there as well as in the story, particularly since projecting a preview that fades out in a perfectly lousy condition is not calculated to create the best impression of the coming feature picture in the minds of the audience.

"Not only that, but in my opinion they are not made up in the best way. Instead of starting the music softly and smoothly, it comes in with a blare of sound, not infrequently almost sufficient to create an impression that Vesuvius has just started to erupt just outside the theatre. At the end it continues that way until suddenly it goes blah, then utter silence reins.

"To my way of thinking, at the start there should be a gradual fade-in through 3 feet, from a blank sound track. As the sound fades in, the picture should do the same. After the fade-in, the music should be low and smooth. Picture title should be the same for the last 12 feet, with music fading into standard start mark 15 feet from the end. As it now is, the whole thing starts and ends very much too abruptly.

"I believe the reason preview ends are marked so many times is that the projectionist does not expect them to have any marking, so he measures back and does not always strike the same spot the previous man did; also if the first mark was 12 feet from the end, after it has been spliced onto a feature a few times, it no longer is the right distance and is marked again to retain the correct margin."

MARTIN QUIGLEY, Editor-in-Chief and Publisher

Vol. 138, No. 11 March 16, 1940

THE SELLING JOB

EXHIBITION had its day this week in Hollywood with the function at which the Quigley Grand Awards for showmanship in 1939 were presented Mr. Ray Bell and Mr. Lige Brien, by Mr. Y. Frank Freeman of Paramount, president of the Motion Picture Producers Association.

The occasion becomes the more significant precisely at this time as an official reaffirmation, in and by Hollywood, of the fundamental importance of exhibition, and the exhibitor.

Most recently there has been a notion about that the theatre gets everything needed ready made and in the can, the show, ready-made plans for exploitation, selling already done by national media. This has been a trend to reversion to that dim yesterday of the nickelodeon when the exhibitor picked up his films at the exchange and hung up a one-sheet saying "Biograph Day."

DESPITE the efficiencies of organization and the vastnesses of distributor exploitation, it is still a fact that there is selling to be done at the point of sale, which is to say the box office where the money is laid down a piece at a time.

"Production can not live," remarked Mr. Freeman, "unless the job is well done at the exhibiting end."

Much of what was said on this occasion by such showmen as Mr. Walter Wanger in his tributes to the motivations and works of Quigley Publications, and by Mr. Frank Capra, Mr. Ralph Morgan and Mr. Charles Brackett, is pleasantly significant encouragement and support of a policy which began with the beginnings of Motion Picture Herald now twenty-five years a-growing.

Year upon year, the Herald, as indicated rather specifically, pointedly, by Mr. Wanger, has in its career of service used no devices for holding its place and its job except to work at it.

IT used to be said of the late Phillip Armour, of Chicago, that his abattoirs packed "everything but the squeal". The management of Rockefeller Center is doing rather well in efficiency, now with lobby signs at the RCA building selling: "See the Queen Elizabeth from the Observation Roof", and in small type "Normandie and Queen Mary". Unlisted, but still for sale, is the Brooklyn Bridge, which has been sold before.

LAND of NEVER WAS

ERUDITE Mr. William C. deMille has been thinking long thoughts about grand opera, its apparent decline, and the rise of fantasy, demonstrated by Mr. Walt Disney, as set down in a piece for Town & Country. Mr. deMille, we are pleased to record, would seem to have arrived at our own conclusion that grand opera is as dead as Kelsey's cat. Of course he puts it more delicately, observing, "an art which must exist entirely upon past product would seem to be a dying art". Anyway Mr. deMille considers that the convincing unreality and "unbiological" romance of such works as "Snow White" and "Pinocchio" indicate that the future leads to "screen-opera which will be what grand opera was always meant to be, a poetic journey into a land that never was".

A CAREER ENDS

THE passing of Mr. J. C. Jenkins, recorded in the news of last week, ends a career of rich experience of living and many friendships. Mr. Jenkins addressed himself, with a homespun philosophy, to "plain boiled" people of the unpretentious sort, minded to tend to their own business and live the good life in the homey places. He travelled the byways and had not much to do with cities. He liked people and they liked him; he spoke well of them and they of him. His writings in Motion Picture Herald won for him a wider audience than he ever knew. He had readers the world over. He'll be missed from Wardour Street to Raffles Square, as well as here. He was a pridefully competent judge of apple pie, he was an able and lucky fisherman, he smoked a pipe. He lived a long time and he was, all in all, one of the most successful men in the motion picture industry.

FIRST SUNDAY LAW

JUST twenty-five years ago last Sunday the first enactment to authorize the showing of motion pictures on Sunday passed into law in Indiana with the signature of Governor James P. Goodrich. It came at the end of a campaign by the Indiana Exhibitors Association, headed by the late Mr. Frank Rembush of Indianapolis and Shelbyville, and the young attorney for the association and the movement was Mr. Charles C. Pettijohn. There were Sunday showings about the country before that, but none specifically legalized.

SPRING NOTES . . . Bock beer is among us—after some confusion of release dates. Eastern brewers agreed on March 11 this year. The mid-westerners agreed to nothing and shipped, so came Budweiser's brown brew to Manhattan a week ahead. The indications are that next year it will be every brewer for himself. The time to release bock is when it is ready. ¶ If a certain genial and big bellied Bavarian is still operating at a certain corner in South St. Louis, your editor wants to go out and meet the Mai wine when the waldmeister is in bloom. ¶ A blue bird has arrived at Tinker's Green to play his piccolo in the old apple tree. Also Jim Crow, the black so-and-so, has been looking over the exact spot where the corn patch is to be.

Trust Suit 'Consent Decree' Near

At any hour, any day, announcement may come of the end of the Government anti-trust suit entitled "U. S. vs. Paramount Pictures, Inc., et al".

A "consent decree", or its equivalent, is in negotiation.

Up to the hour when terms are made, the sparring position of both sides requires denials of probability, or even possibility, of settlement without trial. Those denials have been abundantly had—but the while, and endlessly, counsel for the defense have been in conferences and engaged in tentative formulations of proffered programs for the approval of the Department of Justice. The Government, in its suit, makes a 100 per cent demand for: Divorcement of production-distribution from exhibition, an end of talent pooling in Hollywood, and reform of many trade practices including compulsory block booking.

The defendants are engaged in seeing how much discount, if any, is to be had off that 100 per cent.

Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general, has indicated at least the inklings of an attitude of negotiation in a statement that divorcement of exhibition interests could be made a gradual process over a term of years, to avoid destruction of property values by sudden forced sales. (See page 13.)

The endeavours at a program of settlement have been in progress since the filing of the Government's suit, with many expeditions to Washington on errands of diplomacy and exploration. As trial date has neared, the defensive movement has intensified. Some nights the lights at conference headquarters in New York burn until the dawn.

CBS Television

EARLY LAST YEAR a television executive of Columbia Broadcasting said, "1939 will find CBS engaged in television on a major scale!" The competitive NBC began telecasting in April, 1939.

There are still no outward signs of CBS television, and the answer to the delay came out this week.

It appears that CBS found its television equipment inadequate, not sufficiently flexible, and not optically good enough. CBS engineers worked out improvements and $50,000 worth of new equipment was ordered from RCA, NBC's parent. Delivery was promised originally for last January 1st by RCA, but will not be made until at least April 1st. CBS will need probably three months after the equipment arrives before regular television programs are inaugurated. Meanwhile NBC's television rides merrily along, announcing only this week that with FCC bars down for commercialization, it immediately would engage in a big expansion program, would sell 25,000 television receivers to the public in New York alone in the next few months. NBC's new television program is detailed on page 27.

Air Ethics!

DAVID LOWE, film-news commentator of Station WNEW, independent in New York, this week will announce the quietly arranged formation of National Radio Film Commentators Circle, comprised of 80 film radio commentators from 30 states, to operate for a three-fold purpose: "1) Formulate a code of ethics that will stand as an example to all film commentators, whether broadcasting on national networks or single stations; 2) Establish an interchange of program ideas in non-competitive areas, to help balance the dearth of material for broadcasts; and, 3) Raise standards above the level maintained by a few isolated commentators; and gain recognition from studios and the major producing companies." Mr. Lowe will be first president.

To the "code of ethics" portion of the organization's plans, film producing companies already have uttered a hearty "Yea," declared Mr. Lowe; the same might be expected from Hollywood, which has directed strong attacks on certain air purveyors of Hollywood "gossip," and from exhibitors who have complained about the "ring-the-bell" method employed by some commentators in reviewing new pictures on the air.

Disney's "Revolution"

WALT DISNEY'S next feature cartoon, "Fantasia," the successor to "Snow White" and "Pinocchio," will be roadshown at theatres with specially installed sound equipment. Hal Horne, Disney vice-president, in New York, admitted Wednesday that "the special equipment will be so extensive, so necessary for the proper presentation of the picture's music that it will have to be installed in every house that plays the film. Theatres will be chosen for their acoustical properties. The equipment will travel with the film and will take a week for installation and a similar period for removal after the run of the film. For this reason the new Disney feature cannot be released generally."

The exact nature of the sound equipment is being carefully guarded. Disney's studio in Hollywood, Disney's office in New York and the RCA Laboratories at Camden, where it is being developed, are all taking every precaution to protect the invention, but the Disney and RCA engineers are said to have finally developed a device which will give "the most perfect reproduction of orchestral music possible." Mr. Horne said, "We believe this is definitely Walt Disney's most ambitious undertaking."

The work of "mixing" and editing a total of 430,000 feet of film recorded last year by the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, directed by Leopold Stokowski, and preparing the visual part of the film is now going ahead in Hollywood. The musical part of the program is based on these compositions: "Toccata and Fugue," Bach; "Nutcracker Suite," Tschaikowsky; "Night on Bare Mountain," Moussorgsky; "Ave Maria," Schubert; "Claire de Lune," Ponchielli; "The Rite of Spring," Stravinsky, and "Sixth Symphony," Beethoven.

Funds for the Finns

HERBERT HOOVER, chief collector in the U.S.A. for funds for the Finns, on Wednesday told exhibitors that the need for funds was lessened not at all by the peace imposed by Russia in its war on Finland. Mr. Hoover directed a special message to motion picture theatre owners to continue collections in their lobbies, thereby answering exhibitors who were wondering as to their procedure in view of the end of the war.

Mr. Hoover's statement, which went out from the Finnish Relief Fund offices of the Motion picture division, headed by Major L. E. Thompson, RKO, and Vincent G. Hart, in New York, advised exhibitors that "the Fund must continue for the present to meet civilian emergencies."

Time's "Ramparts"

THE MARCH OF TIME'S "Ramparts We Watch," its first feature, is still romping along, after 18 months, with a camera crew and staff descending on New London again this weekend, for the 'steenth time, to add some more feet of film to the tens of thousands already shot. The mass of material to date has been molded down into something near a long-feature, but it was found additional material is needed.

The release late, originally set for July of last year, may be in April or later; March of Time executives say they are not concerned about that, feeling that the picture will go better "when the war gets hot."

"Ramparts We Watch" is expected to be "as revolutionary as the first cartoon," according to its sponsors, who this week disclosed that the sales policy will be to do everything that is directly opposite regular custom, showing each individual exhibitor "how to get the most out of the picture."

"Ramparts," March of Time says, will do more than any other single factor to keep America out of war. But it was emphasized the picture does not preach pacificism.

Meanwhile nothing is being done on the proposition to start a series of shorts based on Life magazine, March of Time's first cousin. The present attitude is that "it is one of those things we would like to do some day, but at present we are too busy."

Newsreels in Congress

WASHINGTON'S newsreel forces Wednesday morning brought their efforts to obtain "press privileges" in Congress direct to the floor of the House, where, led by the sympathizing Representative John J. Delaney (Dem., N. Y.), Congressmen were asked to authorize by legislation "freedom of the press" for newsreels, giving them space, privileges and facilities in the House Gallery similar to those accorded newspaper reporters for so many years and extended to the microphones of broadcasters last year. That extension was the signal for the newsreels to open their campaign.

The newsreels on occasion have taken their cameras into the House to cover a single event, on application to and approval of the Speaker. Decorum of the Senate has not, and apparently will not, be so easy to penetrate.

The newsreel forces, which are being led in this movement by Anthony Muto, Fox Movietone's Washington manager, do not propose to keep men constantly in the Press Gallery, as do the newspapers, but want a special section made available for their use at any time. "Twenty years of newsreels' hanging around Washington without any official standing is long enough," said Spokesman Muto.

For Andy Kelley

A FEW WEEKS ago "Cissy" Patterson, publisho of the Washington Times-Herald, decided to have the dramatic page of her paper dominated by Carol Frink, one time Chicago critic. This tended to displace and displease Andy Kelley, for many years presiding over the page. Andy appears to have quit, or its equivalent.

Quite a storm of indignation arose among Andy's showmen and political friends in Washington and last Friday night some three hundred of them gathered at a Willard Hotel dinner in his honor under Variety Club sponsorship. The Times-Herald ran a big story.

Meanwhile there are two reports, one that Mr. Kelley may be going back to his native Boston in a journalistic post, another that possibly the Washington job might reopen. The annals of the art include no other such enthusiasm for a reviewer.

CEA in Wartime

WARTIME trade conditions and the problems they have engendered were outlined in his inauguration speech by Harry P. E. Mears, new president of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association of Great Britain, at the association's annual banquet Tuesday night at Grosvenor House, London. More than 800 guests, including members of Parliament, diplomats, Government representatives and members of the armed forces, attended. Sir John Reith was guest of honor. Alan Steyne, second secretary of the American embassy, represented Joseph P. Kennedy, the American ambassador.

Mr. Mears, who succeeded E. J. Hinge in the presidency, said some theatres in the evacuated areas reported a 50 per cent loss of business, and he appealed to the Chancellor of the Exchequer to readjust taxes.

At the first meeting of the new CEA General Council on Wednesday, the threatened campaign against what exhibitors call exorbitant rentals was launched.

Other news from Great Britain is reported by Aubrey Flanagan on page 46.

Producer Welles

ORSON WELLES set quite a record for himself as a producer and actor in radio shows and thereby earned the title "genius." Last fall he went to Hollywood where genius is almost a password but thus far Welles the motion picture producer appears to have established a record in that he is yet "to produce," with many conflicting reports as to what he is to produce.

RKO hired Welles to adapt, produce, direct and act in one picture, "Heart of Darkness." That picture is yet to be released, and there is no indication when it will be released. Meanwhile RKO has hired him to do a second, and a third. The first two are listed as "future releases" by RKO, with the second, "Smiler with the Knife," to appear before the first.

Radio, not Orson Welles' "first love," for he began on the stage, is having some difficulties of its own. Welles' Mercury Theatre of the Air brought him national attention and perhaps notoriety following his "Mars" broadcast. Campbell Soup, the sponsor, is considering dropping the program at the end of this month, because of "personality trouble," and CBS has not decided whether to keep the program as a "sustainer."

Doubles for Games

DECIDING after a door-to-door canvass that giveaways of dishes, money or whatnot were not the box office stimulant they were supposed to be, the management of the Warner theatres in Philadelphia has abruptly abandoned such practices in more than 25 neighborhood houses and substituted double bill policies, which, the executives have found, return bigger profits.

Reported in conjunction with this development on page 17 is the present status of the long waged argument in Chicago between Balaban & Katz and independent operators over the efficacy of single features as compared to duals. The reported results of tests conducted by both sides in the controversy are at variance.

EXHIBITION HONORED AT QUIGLEY AWARDS FUNCTION BY HOLLYWOOD

Bell and Brien Congratulated by Production Executives Who Emphasize Round Table's Impetus to Showmanship

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER

In luncheon ceremonies attended by ranking studio executive personnel, Y. Frank Freeman, president of the Motion Picture Producers Association, presented the Quigley Grand Awards to Ray Bell and Lige Brien, 1939 winners, on Tuesday at the Victor Hugo in Beverly Hills.

Following Toastmaster Freeman in paying tribute to the showmen were: Walter Wanger, president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences; Frank Capra, president, Screen Directors Guild; Ralph Morgan, president, Screen Actors Guild, and Charles Brackett, past president, Screen Writers Guild.

Past Winners Introduced

Past Quigley Award winners William Hendricks, now manager of Warners Downtown Theatre, Los Angeles, and Jules Seltzer, publicity department of Hal Roach Studios, were introduced from the floor.

Watterson Rothacker opened the exercises by calling upon A-Mike Vogel, chairman of the Managers' Round Table, MOTION PICTURE HERALD, who outlined briefly the history and mechanism of the showmanship competitions. Mr. Rothacker then introduced Mr. Freeman, who said:

"All three branches of this industry are most important but after the producer has done his job, the job of the exhibitor becomes the most important. It has been my fortunate experience that many years of my life have been spent in the exhibition field. I've also had the fortunate experience of spending a short time in the production end. I am familiar with this award and the untiring effort and ability required to win it. These boys are the representatives of several thousands of exhibitors striving to win these awards each year. I think it is one of the finest tributes to be paid. It is an honor to be called upon to present this silver plaque to Ray Bell of Loew's Theatre, Washington, D. C."

Cites "Encouragement"

Winner Bell responded: "I can't tell stories or make speeches, but I hope that I can at least try to sell pictures. I want to thank you, Mr. Freeman, for this 'Oscar' and you ladies and gentlemen for your presence and encouragement. And I want to thank Mr. Vogel and Quigley Publications for this award and a very pleasant vacation in Hollywood. I think that most of us in the exhibition field try to do a good job but I can sincerely say that through the encouragement of Quigley Publications we are doing a better job."

Mr. Freeman then presented the bronze plaque to Lige Brien, manager of the subsequent run Warner Prince in Ambridge, Pa. Accepting it he said: "I am very proud and happy to be here to accept this award and I want to thank Martin Quigley and Motion Picture Herald for their generosity. I think Motion Picture Herald is an asset to me in my job and to all of you in your jobs. It is that paper through its Managers' Round Table that has helped us in our work. I am acutely conscious of the honor bestowed upon me and of a duty to do more and better work in the coming years."

"Ray and Lige," Mr. Freeman resumed, "I hope I have expressed properly the appreciation of everyone present. You boys represent a group who have the final responsibility in this industry. We know you accept that responsibility in the common cause, and I mean by that there is no longer a separation between production, distribution and exhibition. Unless the job is well done at the exhibiting end, production cannot live."

He then introduced Mr. Wanger, president of the Academy.

Wanger Pays Tribute

"First of all," Mr. Wanger began, "I'd like to pay a tribute to Martin Quigley. Mr. Quigley deserves our thanks and respect for his excellent publications and for the many constructive things he has done for this industry. It's really something to be proud of when we have someone who is as sincere, as honest and as forthright as Martin Quigley. I say that for what he has done today and for the way he conducts his paper, and regardless of the way he and I disagree about some things, it is a great satisfaction to know that the man you disagree with is disagreeing with you from the sincerity of his beliefs and not from motives of advertising blackmail and the much to be despised methods which are much too prevalent in this industry of ours.

"I would like also to say at this time that I had the pleasure of lunching with Mr. Quigley and Mr. Rothacker recently in this room. We were discussing what we considered a very serious situation, the fact that we are being molested in our efforts to achieve a livelihood in this business. Mr. Quigley made a very sage remark. He said, 'How do you expect the rest of journalism and the rest of the world to take your business seriously if your own trade press is not run on ethical lines?' I think he made a very pertinent remark, because it seems to me we can be rightfully proud of the pictures made in the last year.

"If you will look at the ten Academy candidates you will see that they are certainly pictures of great distinction. There's too much good in our industry to let other people continue to revile us for their own selfish interests. We are serving the public and I think we're doing a good job. I am for any publication that stands for the ideals that Mr. Quigley's publications do, although I'll be pleased when he is a little more on my side on some of the subjects we don't quite agree on as yet."

Capra Congratulates Winners

Frank Capra, president of the Screen Directors Guild, said: "I didn't come prepared to make a speech, but I don't think much preparation is necessary to congratulate these two gentlemen. It seems to me there are two big steps in pictures—making them and selling them. We can make them, but they are not much good until we get an audience into the theatre to see them. It is a great honor to be here today, representing the directors, to congratulate these two young men. One of them represents a Washington chain of theatres and the other a second run house with two first run houses opposite him getting the first chance at the best pictures. I want to congratulate these men for winning these awards and I wish all theatres had such men selling their pictures."

Evidence of Solidarity

Ralph Morgan, voicing the sentiments of the Screen Actors Guild, told the meeting: "I was particularly glad when Mr. Freeman said he considered the exploitation, selling and production of pictures all part of our own industry. I think we should be particularly grateful today to Martin Quigley and the Quigley Publications for this manifestation of the solidarity of our industry through these awards to these gentlemen. I say today particularly because, as Mr. Wanger remarked, we all know that we are being attacked on all flanks. We, as actors, and all other members of our industry, don't believe these attacks are justifiable.

"We are proud of our industry. We know that we represent men and women who are fine citizens and who want to earn their living in a decent way. We can be proud of our industry because, out of the first 15 top industries in the country, we are one of the very few who are taking care of our own, from top to bottom. I have found a great heart, a great sympathetic understanding, among the rank and file of this industry. We do not deserve derision. Yet I think we should not protest too much. Our hands are pretty clean. I think as long as we know that we can let our actions express our honesty and sincerity. I want to express my deep gratitude to the Quigley Publications for what they are doing in and for this industry."

For the Writers

Charles Brackett, two-year president of the Screen Writers Guild, said: "We writers would like to bill ourselves as the forgotten men of motion pictures. It is, therefore, a particularly great pleasure for me to extend our congratulations to Messrs. Bell and Brien as representatives of those other forgotten men, the showmen who sell the pictures to the public."

ARNOLD TELLS HIS TRUST SUIT AIMS, TO BE FOUGHT TO HIGHEST COURT

U. S. Anti-Trust Prosecutor, in Press Interview, Sees Divorcement Taking Ten Years, If Necessary, under a Trustee

The United States Government fully intends that in its "key" New York anti-trust suit pending against the organized industry —trial calendar date is May 1st—it will carry through its prosecution for divorcement of exhibition from production-distribution, but there is no intention of demoralizing exhibition by any quick separation action. On the contrary, it will give a court-appointed trustee ten years to accomplish this, if necessary.

Uncle Sam's chief anti-trust prosecutor, Mr. Thurman Arnold, assistant United States attorney general, is nurturing some very definite ideas these days as to where the Government is going with its prosecution of the film business, and when, he told reporters Monday at an unscheduled interview in the Federal Courthouse in downtown New York, at Foley Square.

Mr. Arnold had arrived from Washington personally to defend his policy of obtaining indictments of labor leaders and unions outside the film business on charges of violations of the Sherman Act. Immediately after his courtroom appearance, he turned to the motion picture case in conversation with reporters from trade and news press who had assembled in that wing of the Federal Building which houses anti-trust division offices.

Seeks Gradual Sale of Theatres

Mr. Arnold's declaration that the Government would "see the case through," followed a statement last week, surprising to all attorneys, by Federal Judge John C. Knox. In a written opinion on a song plagiarism suit, Judge Knox had referred to the possibility of a settlement in the anti-trust case. (MOTION PICTURE HERALD, March 9th, page 38.)

Mr. Arnold said that he doubted any such settlement of the suit. He added that the Government did not expect to press criminal actions against film company officials.

The chief aim of the Government is to obtain a court decree for the appointment of a trustee, to supervise the gradual sale of the majors' theatre properties, he said.

He emphasized that the Government did not care to prosecute on a criminal charge basis, because it had "acquiesced" to some business negotiated by the majors since 1921. Taking the Government's former stand into reckoning, there was no warrant for criminal action, he said.

In "divorcing" the majors from their theatre holdings, the process would be gentle, he intimated: the Government had no desire to depress the theatres' value, he said. Sale of the majors' theatre properties might be prolonged over ten years, he thought, but the majors, in event of a court decree, would be immediately deprived of theatre control.

Points to Circuit Owners

Questioned on the Government's list of approximately 500 prospective witnesses in the trial, Mr. Arnold stressed that the list included all persons who knew of the acts alluded to in the Government's complaint, but their inclusion did not mean they would testify willingly.

For instance, among the prospective witnesses are large theatre operators who, he said, may be named defendants in future actions by the Government against restraint of trade, and asserted that some circuit owners had been guilty of more serious business practices than the majors.

In insisting that the Government intended to push the suit to an immediate trial, Mr. Arnold remarked that investigatory conferences held under the initiative of the Department of Commerce had taken two years, with no results that he could see.

Paul Williams, special assistant attorney general, is expected to try the case for the Government, Mr. Arnold said. This is the first confirmation of the appointment.

The Government not only will try the case as soon as possible, and as vigorously; it will also fight to the supreme court, if necessary, Mr. Arnold declared. The defendants probably would do the same, he conceded.

Calls Department Handicapped

The length of the trial Mr. Arnold would not predict. He complained that the Department of Justice was handicapped in prosecuting its case by a lack of sufficient attorneys and staff members.

New York federal court attaches, responsible for calendar assignments, predicted on Monday that the case would last at least two years. Law office and Broadway estimates of the cost of the prosecution to the Government and the majors have ranged from $5,000,000 to $10,000,000.

The federal court attaches cited the numerous defendants as factors making for a case of over two years duration. They noted the 18 month length of the Government's suit against companies in the aluminum industry; a case not ended, and a less complex case, with fewer defendants.

They cited also the complexity of the issues in the Government's motion picture case: numerous charges, affecting hundreds, perhaps thousands of persons. The Government, they noted, must present the situation comprehensively and declaratively, to Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard, who will try the case. The Government must, also, in submitting evidence, cover all branches of the industry, and prove its allegations in the hundreds of instances throughout the country.

The pre-trial examinations of major company officials are expected to continue until the trial's opening on May 1st.

Interrogation of Hollywood witnesses will begin there on April 15th and continue to the May 1st trial date. Mr. Williams is now in Hollywood preparing the way. Albert J. Law will conduct the actual examinations, however.

Following a procession of major company executives who have appeared for pre-trial examination in recent weeks—Harry and Jack Cohn, A. Montague, Ned Depinet, William Scully, and others—Gradwell A. Sears, Warner Brothers vice-president in charge of sales, was questioned by Mr. Williams on Tuesday.

Majors Attack U. S. Trust Stipulations

The Government's stipulations as to fact, contained in the 300 page answers to defense interrogatories, filed last week, will be opposed by the large companies, it was said as their attorneys studied the bulky, and weighty, answer.

Majors' attorneys charged that the stipulations were based on misinformation and were misconceptions; they asserted that for them to agree that the Government's stipulations were true would be to sign a consent decree. They said the commonest trade terms were used incorrectly in the Government answer.

Response by the defense to the consolidated answer is not required for some time, allowing further study. It was thought on Monday that

New Trust Suit Filed, Another Is Settled; Gary Trial Dismissed

The latest of the myriad anti-trust suits, and the third filed in New Jersey in the last three weeks, a $574,200 action, was instituted in Newark federal court, last week, by the Courter Amusement Corporation, operator of the Ormont theatre, East Orange. The corporation also wants court costs, counsel fees, and a restraining action. Edward R. McGlynn, of Newark, filed the suit. He is also counsel for the two preceding plaintiffs, the Westor Theatres, Inc., and Janbert Amusement Corporation of West Orange, which seek $280,500; and the Netcong Amusement Company, Inc., suing for $330,000.

In Dallas, however, a final decree in settlement of the anti-trust suit against the Interstate circuit by Paul Prugh Scott, Houston exhibitor, was entered in federal court last Wednesday. Interstate is to operate Mr. Scott's River Oaks theatre in suburban Houston, and he was to purchase a minority interest in, and become manager of, six Interstate suburban houses in North Dallas. The decree itself gives judgment to Interstate, and awards costs to Mr. Scott.

The anti-trust suit of the Gary theatre circuit against Balaban & Katz, Warner Theatres and the majors began last Thursday in Chicago federal court, but late Tuesday defense counsel moved for dismissal, and Judge William Holly ruled orally that the case would be dismissed but at the request of counsel for the plaintiff, Albert Gavit, he postponed issuance of a formal order until Monday. Testimony concerned clearance, allegedly illegal, given the Palace theatre in Gary. V. U. Young is head of the Gary circuit.

MAJORS CHALLENGE STIPULATIONS

the response might be made on March 27th. On that date Judge Goddard is to confer with both sides on a general procedure for pre-trial conferences.

John Caskey Wednesday charged the Government with disregarding answers to interrogatories which he said had been prepared by the majors with "great labor and expense."

The defendants' attorneys, on receiving the Government's answer last week, did not attack its other parts. The answer generally was that nothing else "unexpected" had been found in the document.

Even while Mr. Arnold was calling for immediate trial, and though both sides were preparing for a May 1st trial date, as ordered by Federal Judge Knox, many observers, in official and unofficial capacity, considered that the very mass of data, which admittedly would make for a long trial, also might delay its start.

Columbia Answers Federal Questions

Completing its answers to the Government's 59 interrogatories, Columbia Pictures revealed detailed financial data on Monday in New York federal court, for example, that it spent $9,404,800 last year on production, and that it has an outstanding fixed indebtedness of $1,250,000 as a six year sinking fund indenture, being retired at $250,000 yearly.

Columbia explained that the indebtedness came from the indenture issued June 20, 1938, to the Guaranty Trust Company, as trustee, for a total of $1,500,000.

The answers disclosed that the company has 367,161 shares of common stock outstanding, and 75,000 shares of preferred $2.75 convertible outstanding.

Apart from the figure for last year's production costs, the company also made known its production expenditures as far back as 1928, thus:

For 1928-29, $1,632,300; 1929-30, $2,523,400; 1930-31, $4,182,800; 1931-32, $3,614,100; 1932-33, $4,304,400; 1933-34, $5,198,200; 1934-35, $6,163,300; 1935-36, $7,053,800; 1936-37, $6,728,000; 1937-38, $11,499,200.

Additionally noted were the expenditures for 361 short subjects from 1930-31 through 1937-38. The amount was $2,914,752.

Columbia maintained in its answers that it is an independent, employing 1,200 persons in production, and 1,050 in distribution.

"No Favoritism," Balaban Says on Examination

Barney Balaban, president of Paramount Pictures, asserted at pre-trial examination last Wednesday, in the New York federal court pre-trial examination, in the Government's anti-trust suit against the majors, that many independent theatre owners obtain pictures at rentals lower than those demanded from Paramount circuit theatres.

A large number of independents were able to get these rentals, and, on the whole, they were doing better business than producer-affiliated theatres, he asserted, after being asked about the relative advantages of the two types of theatres.

In fact, Paramount leases its theatres to independents in many cases, because it brings better results, he asserted. He cited the career of Emil Stern in Chicago; Mr. Stern, he averred, made successes out of a dozen losing Balaban and Katz theatres, after securing them from Paramount.

When Paul Williams, special assistant attorney general, attempted to show that Paramount rigidly dictated the policy of its theatre affiliates, from the New York home offices, Mr. Balaban declared that the affiliated houses selected their own pictures and formed their own policies, without interference from the home office.

He said Paramount has no fixed policy in acquiring new theatres. If a theatre operator in a certain community thinks it wise to build a theatre, or alter one already operating, or acquire another one in that community, he confers then with the Paramount theatre department, Mr. Balaban explained.

Mr. Balaban described the increased difficulties of operation, for the large companies: production costs have almost doubled since 1929; admission prices and attendance have dropped in the same period.

Over the objections of defense attorneys, Mr. Balaban explained the advantage of affiliation, thus: that a producer obtains better handling and advertising of its pictures, and an assured outlet.

Sears Testifies On Sales Practices

Warner Brothers never discussed with its affiliated theatre companies, its distribution deals with competing theatres, Gradwell A. Sears, vice-president in charge of sales for Warner Brothers, testified on Tuesday. Mr. Sears explained also that his company had no fixed method of handling exhibitor complaints on clearance .

Further, in allocating runs Warners did not feel that a customer's affiliation with a major, or its independence, made "the slightest difference," he said. When his company chooses a theatre for the first run showing of its films, it thinks only of the best possible returns, Mr. Sears said.

During the questioning, there were numerous objections by defense counsel to the Government's approach. Some of the Government questions, propounded by Special Assistant Attorney General Robert L. Wright, were termed "vague, and ambiguous" by defense lawyers.

On Wednesday Mr. Sears testified that in fulfilling contracts to spread product between two theatres his company made a division "as even as to quality and number of films as is humanly possible. "No adjustments, however, were permitted at the end of the season, he explained. There were "innumerable reasons" why the distribution division benefitted from affiliation with theatres, he said.

DELAY ASCAP CODE TILL EARLY APRIL

Its new schedule of charges, a code to combat the movement of the National Association of Broadcasters away from it as a source of music, will be introduced to the directors of the American Society of Authors, Composers, and Publishers in early April, the Society made known on Tuesday, in New York.

The code, the main feature of which is allocation of fees to the originating station alone, in a network broadcast, has been held up for several weeks, while points are discussed, and while ASCAP watches the progress of Broadcast Music, Inc., which the Association has set up as its own music source.

New Theatre Tax For Relief Faced

The likelihood that the Pennsylvania legislature will meet in special session to appropriate additional relief funds and will consider a new amusement tax, the possibility that the Louisiana two per cent sales tax will be eliminated, a Detroit parking ordinance affecting theatres and a new theatre building ordinance in San Francisco were among the week's developments in legislation, directly or otherwise, involving the motion picture business.

Tried Before

Dr. Edward B. Logan, secretary of the Pennsylvania Budget Bureau and financial adviser to Governor Arthur H. James, considers it likely that a special session will be called between the April 23rd primary and May 31st, end of the fiscal year. Among new taxes expected to be considered will be an amusement tax. Two similar taxes were introduced in the House in the last session, but they were not passed.

Elimination of the Louisiana sales tax has been promised by Governor-elect Sam Jones. He said that many of the existing levies now in force in the state will be done away with. New Orleans may also cut its city sales tax of two per cent.

In Detroit, theatres constructed in the future would be required to provide 150 square feet of parking space for each eight seats within 500 feet of the theatre, under a new zoning ordinance before the council. Existing theatres would not be affected.

Legislation virtually limiting future construction of theatres in San Francisco to Class "A" buildings has been adopted by the board of supervisors, despite charges that small operators were being "legislated out of business." The ordinance was supported by large downtown theatres and neighborhood circuits from a fire safety standpoint.

Bills in New York

State Senator Charles D. Perry has introduced a bill in the New York legislature amending the penal law on the protection of civil and public rights. It provided that, as a condition of a license to operate places of public amusement, the licensee shall make available to all persons full and equal accommodations and privileges. The bill makes licenses subject to suspension or revocation for violation.

Senator Thomas C. Desmond and Assemblyman Abbot Low Moffat in New York have proposed an amendment to their public housing law to avoid confusion on the municipalities' permissive tax on tickets to help defray housing costs. The amendment calls for a tax of one cent on admissions up to 50 cents, two cents on ticktes from 51 cents to 99 cents, and so on.

Federal Juvenile Bill

The House in Washington has before it a bill which would permit children to appear on local stages in theatrical productions and vaudeville shows.

The city commission of Anniston, Ala., has before it two requests on the issue of Sunday shows, revived when a court decision declared illegal a 1935 election outlawing Sunday pictures.

The town of Beatrice, Neb., will ballot on Sunday shows April 2nd.

COURT VOIDS CARDS IN "PACKED" UNION; NLRB ACCUSES STUDIOS

Labor Relations Board Report Accuses Eight Hollywood Studios of Interfering with Right to Organize

The hands of United States Government agents, of local judges and judges in the State Courts, of union leaders, film leaders and a wide assortment of other individuals and interests, this week painted a picture of motion picture labor more complex than any in recent months:

A National Labor Relations Board report from Washington accused eight Hollywood studios of interfering with the right of talent to self-organization.

A circuit court in St. Louis decreed that a labor union cannot be "packed," nullifying the membership of 60 theatre projectionists in the John P. Nick local, and ordering Nick to return $47,000 to the union.

Chicago criminal court temporarily released William (Willie) Bioff from its jurisdiction, until Friday, to allow him to fly to Hollywood to lead 13,000 studio craftsmen in their fight to maintain a 10 per cent wage increase given last fall, Bioff returning to Chicago before the weekend to hear his fate on a 1922 charge.

The Theatrical Trades Council in New York put its support behind the American Guild of Variety Artists to use consolidated union strength in organizing talent in motion picture presentation theatres, night clubs and elsewhere, with bids to come from AGVA to stagehands and musicians unions for their aid.

The Screen Actors Guild in Hollywood petitioned to return to the Los Angeles Labor Council, after withdrawing three months ago but the Council delayed action.

Five actors' unions proceeded in their unionization of television talent.

Warners' large Philadelphia theatre interests and musicians were deadlocked in their dispute over placing union men in Warner orchestra pits.

Plans for prompt settlement of the long-standing controversy between Hollywood producers and their writers over the question of a bargaining representative for the latter were submitted to the Labor Relations Board last week by Trial Examiner J. J. Fitzpatrick.

Involved in the nearly four years old fight are Universal Pictures, Selznick International, Twentieth Century-Fox, Loew's, Inc., Warner Brothers, RKO Radio, Columbia Pictures and Paramount, the Screen Writers' Guild and Screen Playwrights, Inc.

Based on hearings held in Los Angeles last August, Fitzpatrick's report recommended that the companies be required immediately to cease interfering with the right of their employees to self organization and that, with the exception of Selznick, they abandon their contract with Screen Playwrights. He recommended, however, that the board dismiss those portions of the complaint alleging a refusal to bargain in good faith with the guild.

Testimony adduced at the hearings, the examiner reported, showed that the eight companies interfered with and maligned their writers' activities in the guild, expressing "animosity" to the guild's proposed affiliation with the Authors League of America, considered by the producers as an "outside" organization.

Mr. Fitzpatrick referred specifically to a mimeographed statement signed by the producers and distributed among the writers, in which it was declared the producers would not "permit a few radical-minded and power-seeking individuals to disrupt the industry" and called upon the writers to refuse to follow "false leaders."

Charge Reprisal Threats

Charging numerous instances of threats of reprisals if the writers voted for affiliation, the examiner reported that after the guild voted to affiliate with the league the companies exerted pressure to break up the organization by forcing writers to resign.

A number of writers did resign and form Screen Playwrights, he said, after they had been informed by Irving Thalberg, MGM vice-president and at the time chairman of the steering committee of the Producers Association, that the companies would negotiate with the new organization. These negotiations, he charged, were undertaken without determining whether the Playwrights represented a majority of the writers. The resulting contract of Feb. 10, 1937, he alleged, was "invalid and illegal" and made with representatives of a minority of the writers "with the intent to discourage membership in the guild."

In August, 1938, the NLRB, in another proceeding, certified that the guild had been selected by a majority of the writers as their representatives for bargaining with the producers. Negotiations for a contract were unsuccessful, Fitzpatrick reported, because the producers would not recognize the guild as the exclusive bargaining agency, and the writers' association filed a complaint with the board.

During the hearings in Los Angeles last year, the companies offered to bargain with the guild as exclusive representative of the writers, and the proceedings twice were suspended while negotiations were undertaken. While these negotiations were unsuccessful, the examiner held that they did evidence the good faith of the producers and recommended dismissal of that part of the complaint alleging a refusal to bargain in good faith.

"AMERICANISM" SHOWS LAUDED IN INDIANA

"Americanism programs" in Indiana have brought gratifying public response, according to reports received by the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana. American Legion and Elks Lodge sponsorship was given in Terre Haute for programs in the Orpheum, Garfield, Liberty and American. Films were contributed by distributors, projectionists and stage hands donated their services and the Terre Haute Theatre Association contributed the theatre facilities.

At Portland, Roger Ludy, manager of the Hines, gave two shows, with the Legion sponsoring and providing a 50-piece band for a parade and concert the morning of the first show. About 1,600 boys and girls attended each performance.

The Elks sponsored the program in the Strand at Crawfordsville, managed by H. A. Colvin, with the exalted ruler of the lodge leading the children in the pledge of allegiance to the flag.

Nick and Weston Ask for New Trials

John P. Nick and Clyde A. Weston have asked for a new trial in the suit in which Judge Ernest F. Oakley removed them from control of the operators' union in St. Louis, Local 143, and permanently enjoined them from interfering with its management and requiring an accounting of union funds and also appointing two permanent receivers.

Circuit Judge Thomas Rowe has continued until the April term of the court the case in which Nick and Weston are charged with having extorted $6,500 from theatre owners in 1937.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch attacked in its news and editorial columns and by cartoons the decision of Judge Rowe which freed State Representative Edward M. Brady, who was jointly indicted with Nick on charges of extorting $10,000 from theatre owners in 1936. The judge decided that the evidence to be presented by the State was insufficient for a case and so in order to save the taxpayers money, as he announced, he directed the State to dismiss the indictment. Nick had previously been freed by the same Judge.

Circuit Judge Ernest F. Oakley, who has been supervising the affairs of the union since Nick and Weston, the business agent, were removed, decided last week that Nick should return $10,000 to the union which the court said he received in October, 1936, from Brady. Nick and Weston together were ordered to return $6,500 which the court said was obtained from theatre managers in 1937. The two men were also told they would have to return $31,899. Of this amount, the judge said, $28,000 was paid to Attorney Paul Dillon for legal services for the two men, $2,899 for political contributions and $1,000 withdrawn for Weston's personal use.

Cards Invalidated

At the same time, the judge invalidated the membership cards of between 50 and 60 members of the union which had been issued during the regime of Nick and Weston. The Court said that many of the men given cards at that time were men "who enjoyed bad reputations and were known as police characters." Robert A. Roessel, attorney for the union, said that most of the 50 to 60 men were employed in some of the Fanchon & Marco theatres and that only half of the 80 operators working in those houses are in good standing in the union.

The motion for a new trial presented by Nick and Weston two days later gave 31 reasons why the court had erred, in their opinion. Included was the assertion that there was no substantial evidence for the money judgment.

appear in Judge Rowe's court on March 18th to show cause why they should not be punished for contempt of court. The newspaper printed an editorial entitled "A Burlesque on Justice" attacking Judge Rowe's action. The next day it had an editorial with the head: "Judge Rowe: turn 'em loose; Judge Oakley: These men are guilty!"

Bioff to West Coast For Labor Wage Parley

Judge John Prystalski in Chicago gave William Bioff, IATSE leader, permission to fly to Hollywood and return Friday to hear the decision on his habeas corpus plea for release from serving an unfinishd sentence, dating from 1922.

J. W. Buzzell, vice-president of the Conference of American Federation of Labor Studio Unions, announced last week that since no letter had been received from the producers the conference was "assuming" that by the producers' silence they were dropping the request for revocation of the 10 per cent wage increase.

Y. Frank Freeman, chairman of the producers' committee, said, "The unions are at perfect liberty to make any assumptions they wish, but nothing has been abandoned."

After a telephone conversation between Buzzell and Bioff the labor conference sent a letter to Mr. Freeman asking for an early meeting to discuss revisions of working conditions and the awarding of bargaining contracts to several locals not as yet recognized by the producers. Revisions of working conditions, according to union leaders, are aimed at a spread of work, establishment of overtime pay scales, increase in the number of men per shift, changes in the number of crews sent on location and other matters.

Mr. Freeman in discussing the Buzzell letter said that when the communication is received it will be presented to the committee. "We shall have to wait until we can get further data and information, which is why the last discussions were continued."

If the unions and the studios do not reach an agreement on the 10 per cent wage increase, the matter will be referred to the American Society of Arbitration for settlement, according to a contract which both parties signed last November 25th when the wage increase was allowed.

Last week Bioff told the Chicago court that he believed for 17 years that the courts had acquitted him of the 1922 charge. He asserted that the case was revived by his enemies in the CIO. State Senator Abe Maravitz, representing Bioff, made a plea that it was unjust to press a misdemeanor charge after a lapse of such a period of time.

Variety Guild Increases Power

The American Guild of Variety Artists has consolidated union strength behind it for its organizational drive in motion picture presentation theatres, vaudeville circuits and night clubs. The Guild joined the Theatrical Trades Council.

Later this week the Guild was to submit a proposal to the Brother Artists Association, union of performers in the burlesque field, to dissolve and have its members join the Guild.

Hoyt S. Haddock said that the Guild had received assurances of support from the members of the Theatrical Trades Council. The council includes the following: Operators Union, Local 306; Studio Mechanics, Local 52; Cameramen's Union, Local 644; Musicians, Local 802; Stagehands, Locals 1 and 4, and Scenic Artists and Theatrical Teamsters. No other actor branches of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America is a member of the Council.

The Variety Artists Guild is scheduled to continue negotiations with the Broadway motion picture theatres which have stage presentations.

KANSAS EDITORS TO RESTRICT PUBLICITY

The Kansas Press Association meeting at Wichita recently moved to tighten its publicity restrictions, according to the Editor & Publisher. The association will ask that all legitimate publicity be sent to the group's headquarters at Topeka.

For the last two years the association has been operating under a publicity control stamp plan similar to that adopted in Oklahoma several years ago. Publicity considered "unacceptable" is so stamped and returned to the source, with a list of space rates in Kansas newspapers.

Screen Actors Guild May Rejoin Labor Council

The Screen Actors Guild, which withdrew from the Central Labor Council of Los Angeles December 12, 1939, has decided to reaffiliate with the body. Ken Thomson, executive secretary of the Guild, said that the action does not mean that the Guild's opposition to many practices of officers of the Council has been altered, but that more good can be done in the Council than outside it. The Guild wished to oppose what it called practices that were not in keeping with democratic and honest unionism. The Council will decide on the application Friday.

Four Actors' Unions Pick Television Group

The question of union relations with television which have been causing difficulty for some time with several unions claiming exclusive jurisdiction seemed temporarily settled when a joint television committee was finally named this week. Members are Walter N. Greaza, Actors Equity; Ruth Richmond, Chorus Equity; Florence Marston, Screen Actors Guild, and Emily Holt or George Heller (alternating), American Federation of Radio Artists.

The members will select a fifth man, probably Frank Gillmore, president of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America.

Confer on Philadelphia Warners-Musicians Dispute

A conference was held over last week-end in Miami in an attempt to reach a settlement in the Philadelphia dispute between musicians and Warners. Ted Schlanger and Frank Phelps represented Warners and Anthony Luizzi, president, and Rex Riccardi, secretary, presented the arguments for the musicians local. Joseph N. Weber, president of the American Federation of Musicians, tried to find a plan that would satisfy all parties. However, no settlement was reached.

Warner theatres in Philadelphia discontinued using musicians on December 1st in protest against being required to use musicians in houses where they did not want them. The local appealed to the American Federation of Musicians and to the IATSE.

Theatre Is Local Asset Says Hays

Sixty-five per cent of a local theatre's receipts remains in that theatre's community, Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, said in delivering the Cyrus Fogg Brackett Lectureship in Applied Engineering and Technology at Princeton University, on Tuesday night. Mr. Hays' speech, devoted largely to statistics on the importance of the industry, was titled, "Science and the Motion Picture." On Saturday night Mr. Hays had spoken on "America's Challenge" at the state banquet of Phi Delta Theta Fraternity in Indianapolis.

The Local Investment Aspects

Mr. Hays in his Princeton address said 17,000 theatres in this country pay approximately $150,000,000 for rent, insurance, taxes, and interest and heat. He noted that the industry directly employs about 300,000 workers, and has a total annual payroll of close to $369,000,000, a capital investment of $1,888,000,000 in theatres, $100,000,000 in studios, and $20,000,000 in distribution. It annually pays to the federal government $100,000,000 in taxes, and spends $80,000,000 in advertising.

He pointed out that the industry in 10 years has purchased a billion dollars worth of steel, stone, cement, and lumber, and has become the principal customer of the furniture, printing and lithographing trades.

Speaking of the motion picture as an art, business and service, Mr. Hays asserted that, in the 18 years he has served it, "it has sought, patiently, and, I believe, always in the public interest, to build up a successful system of industrial self-regulation, with the least possible government supervision."

"Trustees for Civilization"

In his Indianapolis speech, Mr. Hays declared that this country held "in trust for mankind, the political, cultural and spiritual heritage of the human race" and that it was the duty of all here "to make certain that we best fulfill our highest duty as trustees for civilization, for human liberty, and for peace."

The speech was made on "Founders' Day" of the fraternity, at the Columbia Club. Mr. Hays had attended Wabash University.

"The large number of current pictures that are so splendid is the result of a determined purpose to that end, on the part of the men and women who make motion pictures," he said.

There will be no slackening of this effort because, he said, it was "a matter of necessity on the part of the producers to convert casual movie-goers into steady patrons.

Motion picture companies will have easier access to national parks, for filming of outdoor scenes, it was indicated, after a conference between Mr. Hays and Richard Lieber, chairman of the board of the National Park Service, on Monday, in New York.

Steffes Leaves Hospital

W. A. Steffes, president of the Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest, has left the Providence Hospital in Washington, D. C., after being confined since January 18. Steffes was taken ill during the national Allied board meeting in January. He will leave shortly for Florida to recuperate further.

GAMES NO 'PANACEA', DROPPED FOR DUALS; CHICAGO ARGUES ON DOUBLES

Warners, After Checkup of 40 Neighborhood Theatres, Supplants Games with Twin Features; RKO and Universal Duals

Giveaways' deep infiltrations into exhibition received one of their most serious jolts in a year when Warners' theatre management in Philadelphia, stronghold of that circuit's 459 coast-to-coast properties, last week tabulated the results of a door-to-door checkup among 40 neighborhood houses and learned that dishes, bank nights, bingo, bango and sundry "inducements" were definitely not a panacea for ailing box offices. They were dropped on the spot and supplanted with double features, which, the executives found, make for bigger profits, pay bigger dividends.

At the same time, and giving renewed evidence of the divergence of exhibition argument over the question of duals vs. singles, Balaban and Katz and independent neighborhood owners in Chicago were widely spit on a test of singles.

And Into Ohio

The old perennial double bill controversy also extended into Ohio, where it received considerable attention at the annual convention of the Independent Theatre Owners Association, at Columbus, and finished with a consensus registering opposition, contending that independents literally are forced to dual by circuits pursuing the policy, leaving no alternative for the independent.

Basing their findings on a year's study of giveaways at 40 of its neighborhood houses in Philadelphia, Warners let lapse their contracts with premium companies to continue duals in those sections. Individual deals were to be made to continue the policy at a few of the theatres to meet any strong competition of independents employing the "inducements" in the same neighborhoods.

All the other Warner houses were placed on straight double billing operations. Previously, the circuit had 30 Philadelphia properties playing doubles, either regularly or occasionally, in the latter case alternating with giveaways.

During the year, in furtherance of its study on box office reactions, Warners changed the policies of many of its Philadelphia neighborhood runs to determine receipts accruing, first from singles and giveaways, next from doubles alone. Three periods were watched: (1) When only double features were shown; (2) When giveaways were used with singles; and, (3) When the weeks were split between singles, doubles and giveaways.

15 Giveaway Houses Instead of 40

There will be, of course, some individual adjustments, with present indications that eventually there will be 15 Warner houses in Philadelphia using giveaways, compared to the 40 that used them up to a few days ago.

By far the most significant double-bill development in exhibition in five years was the unexpected appearance of singles two weeks ago in Chicago, long the "hotbed" of dual feature controversy in the United States.

With sporadic attempts over a half decade by Chicago independents to break the dual policy deadlock, Balaban and Katz, two weeks ago, abruptly announced singles for its Berwyn, LaGrange and Central Park theatres on the West Side. Eleven independents in the neighborhood immediately followed suit, practically all of them members of the single-bill-campaigning Allied Theatres of Illinois. The "test" lasted only a few days, however, and now all are back on a double-diet, but not without a battle of words continuing over the success or failure of the plan.

Reports at Variance

Reports from Allied Theatres' headquarters, as spokesmen for the 11 independent participants in the test, indicate that the singles were "favorable." No further comment would be made until the return this week to Chicago of Jack Kirsch, Allied president, vacationing in Florida.

Balaban and Katz, reporting for its three theatres which "tested" the singles, declared that they were dissatisfied. One of the houses, the Central Park, did fair business, they said, with single bills, but the nearby B&K Senate theatre, playing doubles, benefited "immensely" from the Central Park's singles.

Chicago's independent Allied members still stand ready to play singles, if the circuits will do likewise, which, according to the best information from Chicago this week, is most unlikely.

RKO, Universal Duals

Reception of short subjects is "better than before," Leo Abrams, Universal short subjects sales manager, reported in New York last week, after a seven week tour through the middle and far western territories. This was true, he said, despite the prevalence of double features in the territory covered, and despite Universal's new, special dual feature combination, "Black Friday" and "The House of Seven Gables," which had its "premiere" at the Palace, in Chicago. The dual combination was booked over the RKO circuit, with dates in Columbus, Indianapolis, and Detroit. It also has obtained bookings in St. Louis, Louisville and San Francisco.

"Lincoln" and "Blue Bird" Dualed

The RKO circuit in the New York metropolitan area this week played a double bill combination of RKO's "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" and "The Blue Bird," Twentieth Century-Fox film, at the Albee in Brooklyn.

On March 14th the combination opens for a week at the Palace on Broadway; on March 21st at Manhattan neighbhorhoods and March 28th at Brooklyn neighborhoods.

The strong double bill is a feature of the John J. O'Connor business drive, honoring the general manager of the circuit, which ends April 10th. A total of 54 theatres are participating in Greater New York, Trenton and New Brunswick, N. J.

Vaudeville will return to Troy, New York, if a special committee of the public, now campaigning for its return, succeeds.

In New Haven, the Loew-Poli Bijou, subsequent run heretofore, has been experimenting with a Saturday vaudeville-and-first-run policy. The circuit uses vaudeville at the Palace, Meriden, and the Poli, Waterbury.

ANOTHER SYSTEM OF FILM RATING

Added to the many systems for rating films, such as stars, bells, and what not, is the one initiated in the new tabloid Newsdaily of Hartford, Conn. In a "Scoring the Shows" column are listed first-run theatres and the main features showing, with short comment on each, and ratings on the basis of 100 per cent, divided equally among plot, dialogue, direction and acting.

The newspaper announces that the maximum advertising carried will be 25 per cent of the total space.

New Producing Unit in the East

Another company is "going to produce in New York." It is the newly formed Film Associates, Inc., plans for which were announced this week, at offices in the British Empire Building, New York City. There will be New York production, and also Coast production, Felix Greene, one of the partners, said this week, in New York.

Film Associates will release through a major company, he said. The type of pictures is still to be determined, but he expected the first production would start in New York in a few weeks, based upon a script by Joseph Krumgold on an historical theme.

The money for the new group will come from its partners, all of them directors, he said. The list includes Mr. Greene, who is to resign as American representative of the British Broadcasting Corporation; Aldous Huxley, British author; Theodore Lawrence, former United Research Corporation engineer and sound technician for Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox, and United Artists; Gerald Heard, author; Irving Reis, formerly of the Columbia Broadcasting System, and a writer for Paramount and Twentieth Century-Fox; and Henwar Rodakiewicz, former writer for Paramount and MGM, and of production experience in Mexico and New York.

H. William Fitelson is counsel for the new company.

Film Associates will produce shorts as well as features, and some documentaries.

Mr. Fitelson said the first production was "100 per cent financed."

The partner-stockholders, all owning equal shares, hold 60 per cent of the stock, he said; the remaining 40 has been reserved.

Mr. Fitelson mentioned General Service Studios, in Hollywood, as a possible choice for production.

NICKEL MOVIES WON'T COMPETE: ROOSEVELT

Answers Protests of Exhibitors to Slot Machine Shows; Project Starts This Summer

Motivated, perhaps, by the rapidity with which a section of organized exhibition reacted unfavorably to his plan for establishing 100,000 nickel-in-the-slot "movies," in bars, cafes and cocktail lounges, James Roosevelt, United Artists feature producer Friday explained that his nationwide network of automatic movies in no way will compete with regular theatrical business.

Answers Exhibitors

A few days after Mr. Roosevelt, on February 21st, in Hollywood, announced his association for the purpose with Mills Novelty Company, largest nickel-in-the-slot recording machine manufacturers for cafe usage, the Ohio Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, led by Martin H. Smith, president, in convention at Columbus, questioned the plan as "a potential menace."

Urging the membership to "closely watch the development," Mr. Smith pointed out, "There are approximately 18,000 places licensed to sell beer and liquor (presumably in his territory alone), not to mention similar commercial and recreational rendezvous numbering into hundreds of thousands in total figures, which are fertile avenues of installation and operation of these machines. It does not require a great stretch of the imagination to be able to visualize the disastrous results that could accrue to the theatre from this avenue of competition."

Admitting that his new project will be set to go ahead by summer, Mr. Roosevelt, Friday, in an address to the Chicago Headline Club, declared that the nickel automatic movies would not compete with theatres, because the coins that went into the machines would be those that otherwise would be spent in the present automatic phonograph machines.

[The new coin-operated film projectors will end the domination of automatic phonographs in taverns and similar outlets, Henry Henigson, James Roosevelt's associate producer, said Monday upon his return to Hollywood from Chicago where he conferred with Mills Novelty Company.]

Most on Music Subjects

The Headline Club, alumni group of Sigma Delta Chi, national professional journalistic fraternity, had invited Mr. Roosevelt to address its regular luncheon meeting at the College Inn of the Hotel Sherman.

Mr. Roosevelt stayed in Chicago to complete plans for the production of short subjects to be used by the coin operated machines. The shorts will be of three or four minutes running time, each on a different subject. Most of them, to begin with at least, will be of a musical nature.

The productions will be made by a company separate from Roosevelt's Hollywood Globe Production. The company will be called Globe-Mills Productions. Mills Novelty company, of Chicago, makers of coin operated machines of many kinds will make the movie projectors.

The machines, plans for which will be announced within the next 30 days, will be similar in size and shape to the phonograph machines now found in thousands of restaurants, taverns and stores. On top of the machines will be a screen 18 x 22 inches, the picture being projected from beneath.

The machines will each contain film for six subjects on 16mm film. The machines will play the same subjects for one week only and then changes will be made. This will mean that Roosevelt will have to produce 312 shorts a year.

30 Cents for 20 Minutes

This places the cost to a patron at 30 cents for a complete program from one machine, which in return runs from 18 to 20 minutes. (It would cost $3.35 to view "Gone With The Wind" at these prices.) This cost of films on a time basis is not competitive to theatres, Mr. Roosevelt claims.

Roosevelt's speech before the Headline Club was of a general nature for the most part. He emphasized benefits derived by the public from Hollywood achievements, both in entertainment and in science.

Mr. Roosevelt said television would be five years in reaching a position where it would be competitive with motion pictures and radio. He believed that Hollywood producers would keep in stride and both businesses eventually would have to work hand-in-hand.

Roosevelt said that he, like many other producers, would as soon have singles when the public shows it prefers them to doubles.

Mr. Roosevelt also told those present that he hoped someday to take members of the press to Hollywood for several days to study picture making. He said that Hollywood would benefit as much from bringing the press to Hollywood as it did from "sending Hollywood to the press," in premieres in various cities.

This week Mr. Roosevelt is conferring with Chicago exhibitor leaders, also talking over his production plans for "The Bat" and "Pot O' Gold."

United Artists' branch manager in Chicago, Irving Schlank, is contacting the exhibitors.

E. H. Schwab Is Officer of New Producing Company

Incorporation papers were filed Wednesday in Hollywood for Samuel Bronston Productions, Inc. The company lists as a director Edward H. Schwab, brother of the late Charles M. Schwab, steel magnate. Company officers are Samuel Bronston, president, and Frank J. Perry, son-in-law of Edward Schwab, vice-president. John J. Bergen, New York broker, and William V. O'Connor, nephew of J. F. T. O'Connor, former federal comptroller of the currency, are also board members. Capitalization is set at $1,000,000.

A company official said Wednesday that a major outlet has been set, to be announced later. Mr. Bronston and J. F. T. O'Connor last year formed Commodore Pictures and had carried on negotiations with James Roosevelt to join the company prior to his affiliation with Samuel Goldwyn.

Garmes in East

Lee Garmes arrived in New York this week from the coast with a print of "Beyond Tomorrow" for RKO. It is the first film made by Academy Productions, of which Mr. Garmes is president.

Academy Short Set

A two-reel short subject, directed by Frank Capra, will be released by Warner Brothers, April 20th, as "Cavalcade of Academy Awards."

New Currency Rules in France

New regulations governing the withdrawal of currency from France are expected to be drafted within the next few months by that government, according to foreign department officials of large companies in New York.

Indications now are that France eventually will permit withdrawals equivalent to half of the total withdrawals of American distributors in 1937 and 1938. The French government has requested American companies to report their currency withdrawals for those years.

Until this information has been given to the French authorities and the new fiscal policy determined, it is unlikely that any remittances from France will be authorized. Currency restrictions which make it next to impossible to obtain remittances were invoked by France about two weeks ago.

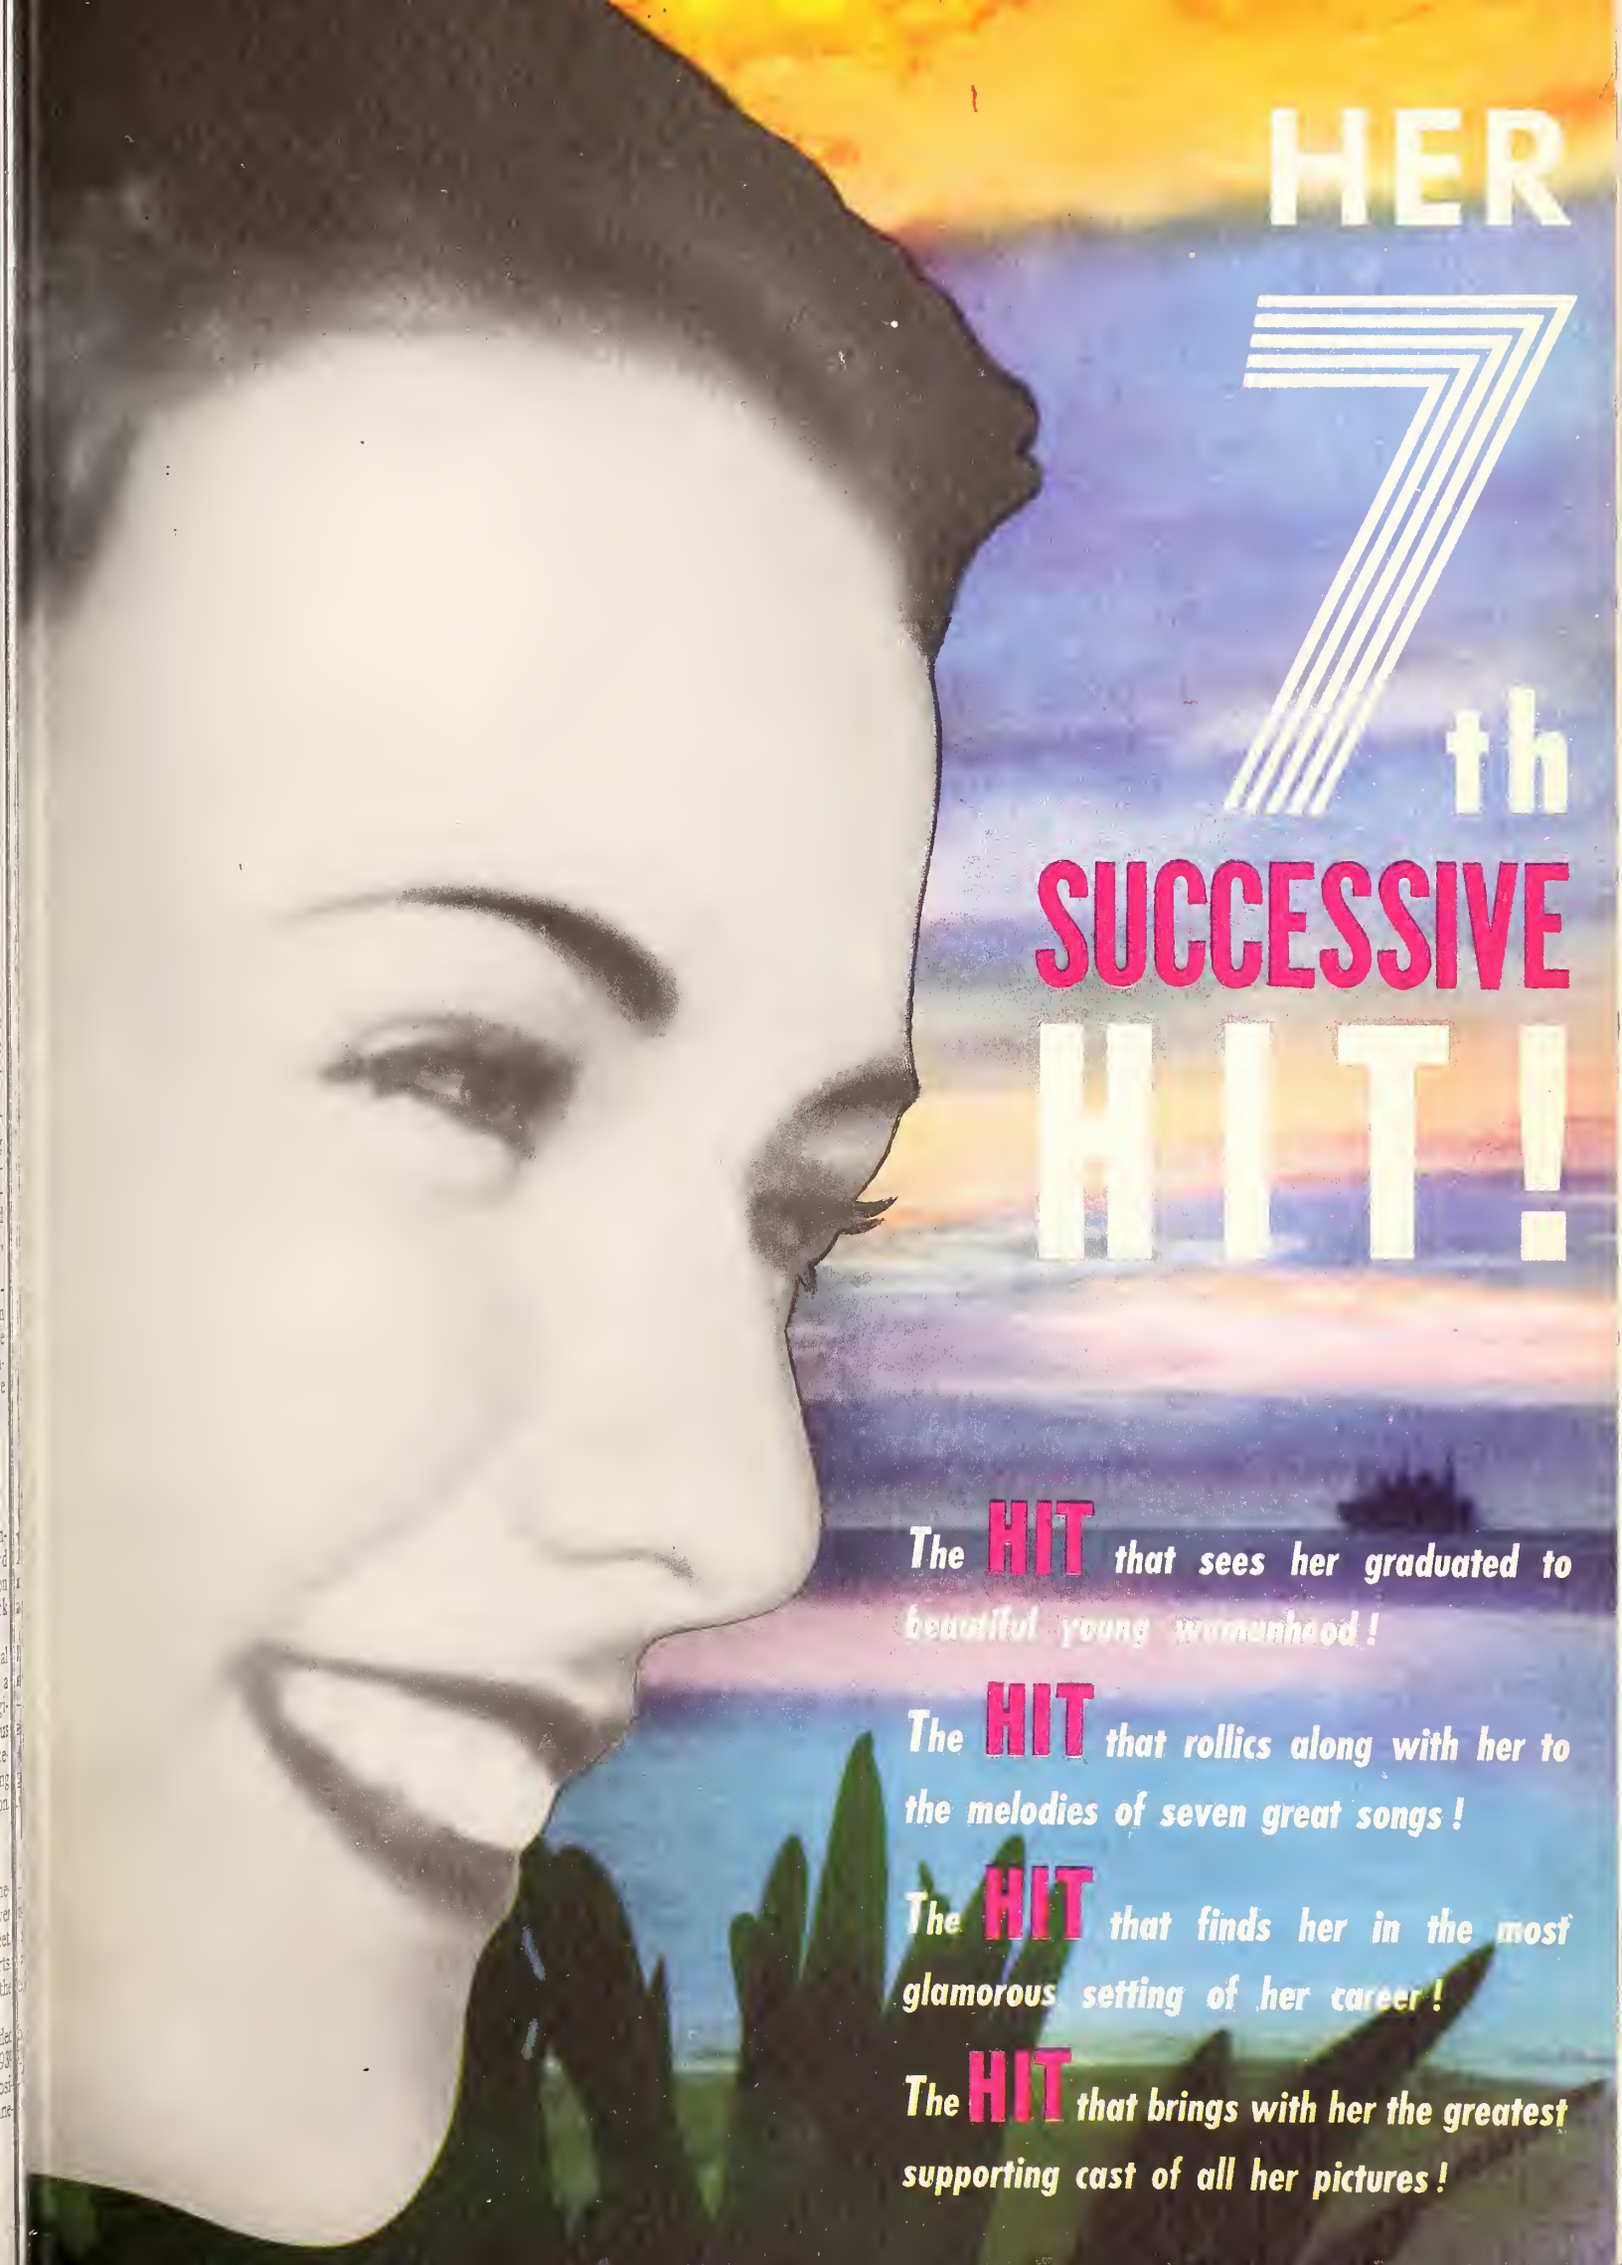
Since cash returns from the French market have been declining steadily in recent years, American distributors are seriously concerned over France's indicated intention of using 1937-38 withdrawals as the basis for the forthcoming regulations. Distributors, it is believed, will endeavor to have 1936 withdrawals, which were good by comparison with those of the two subsequent years, accepted as a basis instead.

Foreign department officials point out that France has accounted for only slightly more than $2,000,000 annually of foreign revenue in recent years, whereas formerly withdrawals were twice that amount.

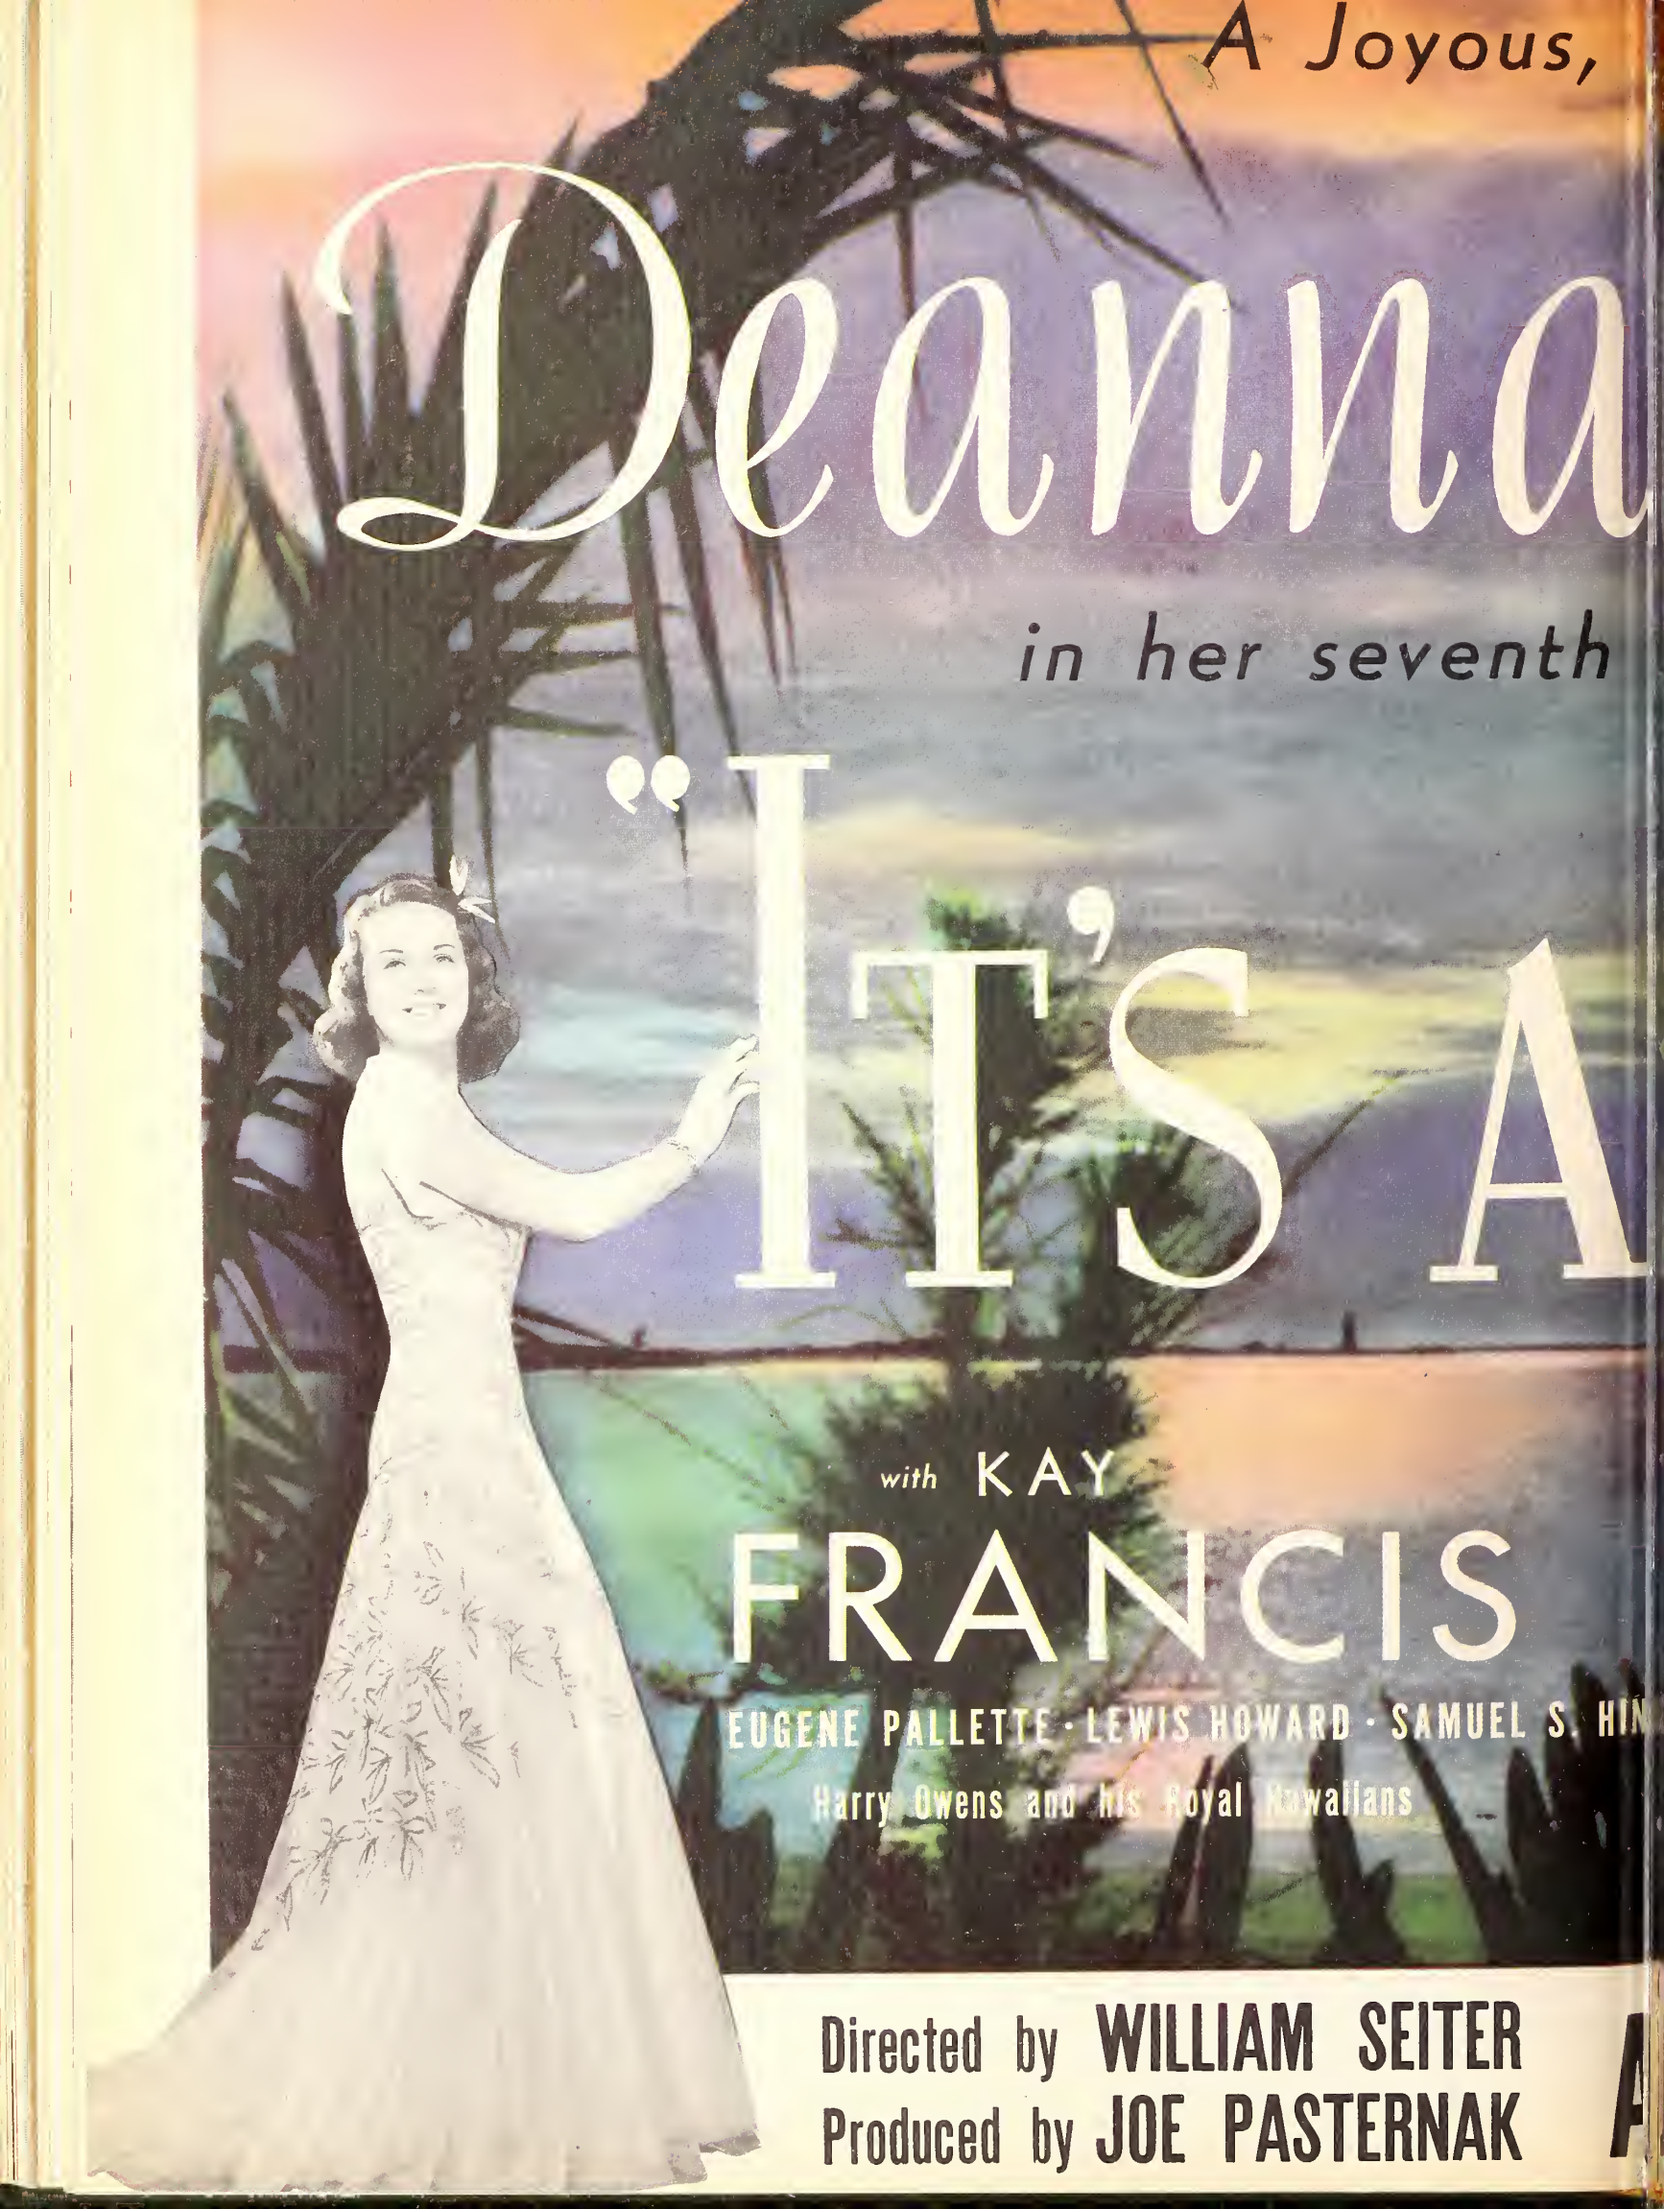
Selecting two low years as the basis for future withdrawals and then authorizing only a percentage of that average for remittance to this country would affect some companies so seriously that they might be forced to discontinue business in France entirely, it was said.

Taxes, print and labor costs and decreasing film rentals account for the decline in business in France, it was said. The decline has reached such proportions that some companies believe their 1939 operations there resulted in a loss.

Rubin Again Heads Fund Committee



J. Robert Rubin, vice-president and general counsel of Loew's, Inc., for the third consecutive year is chairman of the motion picture division of the Greater New York Fund drive, which starts April 1st.



Spyros Skouras, president of National Theatres Amusement Company, will head a new entertainment division, including legitimate theatres, agents and miscellaneous groups. Niles Trammell, executive vice-president of the National Broadcasting Company, is chairman of the radio section.

Fine-Arts Leased

Di Carlo Brothers, operators of the Cinecitta theatre, New York, have taken over the 800-seat theatre at 202 West 58th Street, New York, and renamed it the Fine-Arts. The theatre was formerly operated as the Filmarte.

"The Great Light," which was awarded first honors for the best Italian film of 1939 at the International Motion Picture Exposition in Venice last Fall, opened at the Cinecitta theatre, New York, on Thursday.

UNCLE SAM, NO. 1 U. S. DISTRIBUTOR, HAS 373 PICTURES IN CIRCULATION

Seventeen Federal Agencies Represented and Most Films Are Supplied in Both 16 mm. and 35 mm., Says Directory

"Uncle Sam" is rapidly becoming one of the world's largest single producers and distributors of motion pictures, the Film Service of the United States Office of Education, a Federal Security Agency, reporting this week that 17 federal agencies now have on their books 373 films on almost every conceivable subject, in most instances available for public or private or institutional showing, and in most cases without charge, except transportation costs. Many of the films have had extensive theatrical circulation, like "The Plough That Broke the Plains," for one.

Most in 16 and 35 mm.

The Film Service this month issued a directory of all United States Government films. It is the first time such a combined listing has been made by a Federal agency in the form it takes.

Examination of the listing conveys that most of the films are supplied in both 16 and 35 mm.

The 17 federal agencies, without taking into account their numerous sub-departments for whom films were made, and who distribute films, are the departments of Agriculture, Commerce, Interior, Justice, Labor, Navy, Treasury, the Federal Loan Agency, the Federal Works Agency, the Pan American Union, the Post-Office Department, the Tennessee Valley Authority, the U. S. Marine Corps, the U. S. Maritime Commission, the Veterans Administration, and the War Department.

Most of the films are to train youth, to inform citizenry of the work of certain agencies, to instruct citizens in special skills and to teach employees.

Very few films are of a military nature. The Navy has only 27 films, the Coast Guard five, the War Department three, and the Marine Corps only one. Other departments overshadow these, for instance, the Department of Agriculture with 156 films, and the Interior Department with 130. However, it is known that the Army and Navy are now engaged in making military training films in preparation for a possible "M" Day, when a national emergency arises.

U. S. FILM AMBULANCE PROPOSED BY BRITON

For a "good-will measure," the American film industry should donate an equipped field ambulance to the British Red Cross, Jack Davis, head of Monseigneuir News Theatres, Ltd., suggested recently in a letter to Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. The ambulance, remarked Mr. Davis, who is visiting in this country, would be donated through the British film industry, and "would serve greatly in cementing relations" between the film industries of Britain and America.

DENMARK RESTRICTIONS AFFECT FILM IMPORTS

Lifting of Ban Predicted If Film Shortage Jeopardizes Government Income

by KRIS WINTHER
in Copenhagen

All Danish import is divided into two classifications: Goods on the "free list" and goods on the "bound list." All goods listed on the former can be imported without special applications for foreign currency while such goods as are set on the "bound list" first can be taken in from the free harbour after a special permit has been issued in each instance by the "Valutacentral," the name given the foreign currency department of the Danish National Bank.

Early this year all developed films were transferred from the free list to the bound list.

Move a Surprise

This came as a complete surprise for the entire trade that had just recovered from the first panic stricken fear brought upon it by the European holocaust. Although Denmark is neutral and hopes to be able to continue being neutral, it was at first feared that the submarine activities might make the shipment of pictures to this country wellnigh impossible. This, however, was not to be the case even though delivery, quite naturally, in most instances was somewhat delayed. Nevertheless, pictures came through, even such as had been shipped on Polish steamers that never completed their voyages but had to seek refuge in foreign harbours.

Distributors and exhibitors heaved a sigh of relief and expected that local entertainment would suffer no loss as the pictures in reserve were sufficient to cover the time lost through delay in delivery of new prints.

Then came the sudden prohibition of import of film. A circular letter was sent to all distributors informing them that the prohibition was effective immediately. This was also a severe blow for several distributors who at that moment had several undeclared prints in the free harbour. Even these pictures, some of which were booked into local theatres, partly for first-run showings and partly prints that were absolutely necessary in order to take care of second-run bookings already made, could not be entered into the country.

The distributors immediately flocked to the offices of the "Valutacentral" in an effort at getting at least some of their prints entered into the country. Interviews could only be obtained with the lesser minions of the Currency Department and they neither could nor would give information about future possibilities. All replies were vague and in no way satisfying and the distributors and/or their representatives went away no wiser than when they had arrived.

State's Interests at Stake

It is extremely possible that the National Bank has stirred a hornet's nest and will seek a graceful way out of the problem it has raised. Although the step, if carried through to its fullest extent, might bring a savings of approximately $500,000 yearly of foreign currency for use for import of other lines of goods, the National Bank is now only too much aware of the fact that any restrictions in the import of motion pictures will jeopardize the Danish State's income through special taxes on the motion picture industry which at present is filling the State coffers to the tune of about five million a year.

This income would not only fall in direct proportion to the restrictions effected but far faster than the import of pictures. This is brought about by the fact that the State not only levies a direct entertainment tax of 40 per cent on all ticket sales but also, since the new law for the motion picture industry went into effect over a year ago, a special tax on the income of the individual exhibitor. This latter tax is based upon a very steep sliding scale that can, in extreme cases, take 65 percent of an exhibitor's net income, but the sliding scale is so steep that within the narrow confines of $5,000 yearly this percentage can fall to 20 percent.

It is therefore to be expected that the Department of Finances will object to any move on the part of the "Valutacentral" that seriously would lessen this source of income.

Quota Suggested

Among the still vague possible solutions suggested by the "Valutacentral," although not officially, is a quota-arrangement whereby each importer would be allowed a certain weight of developed film a year in proportion to the amount of film hitherto imported by him. The percentage suggested has however been so incredibly low that this practically would be identical with a complete closing off of imports. The new arrangement, whatever it may be, will at any rate make imports impossible for anyone who hitherto has not imported motion pictures.

There is, of course, one way in which this quota suggestion could be made practicable. Were the importers to take in negatives and dupe their own prints here in Denmark, the negatives would possibly cover more ground than they do under present circumstances. If, further, negatives were made here not only for Denmark but also for Norway, Sweden and Finland prints would not be more expensive than when, as now, all prints that are to be used in the country are imported directly from the country of origin.

This suggestion could be carried through if, as under present conditions, there is no ban against imports from Denmark in the other Scandinavian countries. As, however, every day brings new surprises in the import regulations in all neutral European countries, it is not at all certain that this procedure would have any value except in such cases where the Danish distributors need four or more prints of each subject. And, as Denmark is not such a large country, it is most frequent that only one print of each picture is necessary to cover all bookings. Technically this procedure is possible since at least one Danish firm, namely Nordisk Film A/S, would be able to carry out the "duping" successfully.

Censorship Board Active

Limiting the product on hand still more is the activity of the Danish Censorship Board which now must take the international situation into consideration. This has led to the holding back of several pictures that otherwise would have been shown in local theatres. Although practically every theatre, before each and every show, throws on the screen an appeal to the audience to refrain from giving vent to any audible signs of sympathy or antipathy whenever any politically debatable line or sequence might tempt them in that direction, the censorship board carefully avoids passing any picture that in any way might be construed as taking part on one or the other side of the parties now waging war.

productions many of which are for free distribution."

Department of the Interior films, mostly on the beauties of the national parks of the country, conservation, power projects, scenic wonders, national resources, gaming, and the like, may be obtained from the Department's photographic section, in Washington. Its Bureau of Mines pictures, however, must be obtained from the Bureau's experiment station, in Pittsburgh.

Other department films may be obtained from their headquarters in Washington, presumably, in lieu of notices otherwise, in the directory.

The Navy Department notes that its films "are available only to schools, clubs, and societies, under restricted distribution, but are shown only in charge of a Service Operator." Prospects are advised to communicate with the nearest Navy recruiting station.

Films about Coast Guard activities, which are under the Department of the Treasury, are obtainable from the commander of the Coast Guard division nearest to the applicant.

Requests for National Youtb Administration films (under the Federal Security Agency) must be made to the nearest NYA state administrator. The new directory lists the cities in which such persons are.

Social Security Board films, issued under the same Federal agency, can be gotten from the "Informational Service Representative, Social Security Board" at the Regional Office serving one's state.

Tennessee Valley Authority films must be secured from the Director of Information of the Authority, at Knoxville, Tenn.

The Marine Corps picture, if wanted, is available from the "Officer in Charge, Publicity Bureau, U. S. Marine Corps, Philadelphia."

War Department films can be gotten from the Chief Signal Officer, in Washington, or from the similar officer of Corps Area headquarters, nearest to one.

The United States Film Service, which issued the new government directory, noted, in instructions on the procuring of films, that "each department is bandicapped by a shortage of prints. Alternate choices of films and dates may enable a department to fill the second part of your request, if the first film is not available. Try to make your application at least three weeks in advance."

Noted are 25 reference publications and 57 institutions and bureaus in 36 states and the District of Columbia.

Appended to the directory is a list of 26 new pictures, as of March 1st. Eight of them were made for the Department of Agriculture, four for the National Youth Administration.

National Decency Legion Classifies Seven Films

Of seven pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week four were approved, two were listed as unobjectionable for adults and one was cited as objectionable in part. The films and their classification follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "The Ghost Comes Home," "House of the Seven Gables," "Little Miss Molly," "Shooting High." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "They Came by Night," "Virginia City." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "The Baker's Wife" (La Femme du Boulanger) (French).

Three of the poster exchanges listed by Advertising Accessories, Inc., were not parties to the merger deals announced February 13th by the subsidiary of National Screen Service, according to John I. Kelley, of Atlanta, attorney for the exchanges. The three companies are the Poster Exchange, Inc., of Atlanta; The Rex Poster Exchange of New Orleans; and the D. C. Poster Exchange of Washington, D. C. The exchanges mentioned continue in independent operation.

TELEVISION TURNS TO AIR GAMES; FCC CALLS MODULATION HEARINGS

NBC Starting Cash Awards for Televiewers Saturday with First Episode of "Minute Mysteries" on Film

Motion picture theatre owners who have pushed their complaints of unfair competition of radio's $1,000 weekly Horace Heidt "Pot o' Gold" giveaway to Congress, the Federal Communications Commission and to the Department of Justice, where action is pending, this week face a new competitive potentiality: Cash giveaways by television, first of their kind.

Although admittedly television in its present limited state can not make now any widespread inroads on box offices, because of the comparatively few sets receiving programs and because of the limitations of distance telecasting, its sponsors, nevertheless, this week disclosed their interest in the new medium for making cash awards, the while exhibitors continue their attacks against radio's "Pot o' Gold."

Based on Mystery Films

National Broadcasting Company, principal telecaster, announced that televiewers will rereceive their first opportunity to participate in a cash award contest Saturday, March 16, at 8:30 p.m. (E.S.T.), when the company presents the first episode of "the exciting Minute Mysteries." Roy Post, who, with Austin Ripley, devised the new game, will introduce the series.

The contest, scheduled weekly for four weeks as a test, by NBC, is "comparatively simple," they say, being based on the televiewer's observation of details in a ten-minute mystery film. At the end of the film, which is in itself a complete mystery subject, the viewers will be asked 15 questions. On a score card, mailed to televiewers from Radio City, the contestant will register his answer. Since the card is in duplicate, one-half of it will be mailed to NBC's television division, the other half being retained by the contestant. Answers will be drawn from a sealed bag during the second presentation of Minute Mysteries, telecast on March 23.

The main prize in the contest has been announced as $25 to be awarded to the televiewer sending in correct answers to all 15 questions. If none of the contestants submits an entirely correct score card, the televiewer with the highest score will be awarded a prize of $15, the remaining sum going to swell the second week's awards. In case of ties, the leading scorers will divide the prize.

Urges "Soft Pedal" on "Gold"

While theatre owners' principal line of attack on radio's "Pot o' Gold" has been through Government agencies at Washington, scores have attempted to meet the competition, which, it is claimed, diverts $1,000,000 weekly from theatre box offices, by running counter offers of $1,000. "Pot o' Gold" requires that a winner must be at home and personally receive a telephonic announcement of his selection in order to collect the prize. This, exhibitors claim, is unfair, and in order to circumvent the home-staying, offered to pay a patron $1,000 if he was in a theatre at the time his name was called at home by the broadcasters. The exhibitors' counter-offers, however, have virtually all been abandoned, on warnings from local authorities of their lottery illegality. Meanwhile the complaining owners await a decision from Washington as to the unfairness of the radio competition.

On the other hand, exhibitors this week were urged by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America to "soft pedal" their attacks, a statement going out from MPTOA headquarters in New York, over the signature of Edward L. Kuykendall, president, declaring "While the 'Pot o' Gold' radio program indicates a dangerous trend towards the use of money prizes by radio advertisers as a direct inducement to keep people away from theatres, consultation with widely separated theatre operators reveals the general opinion that the best treatment for this program is to ignore it. Public controversy and publicity stunts draw public attention to the rival attraction.

"Let's not overlook the fact that the Tuesday night radio programs as a whole are among the strongest in popularity and listening audience. No doubt this makes it tougher to get people to the theatre on that night, but the complete elimination of the 'Pot o' Gold' program would not have any noticeable effect on theatre attendance. The real danger is the spread of cash giveaways to other programs and other nights of the week. The quickest way to bring that about is to build up the 'Pot o' Gold' program into an outstanding program in popularity. If it is ignored, that is not likely to happen," the MPTOA statement concluded. MOTION PICTURE HERALD, on February 10th, pages 13-15, listed 50 different kinds of radio giveaways, headed by "Pot o' Gold" and other cash awards, as being used on the air today to induce listener attention.

Another viewpoint on exhibitors' disatisfaction over "Pot o' Gold" comes from Edgar A. Thompson, radio editor of the Milwaukee Journal, who refers to the "hulabaloo" as "a

DR. LEVY TO START TELEVISION CHAIN

As a result of the Federal Communications Commission's ruling of last week approving partial commercialization of television starting September 1st, Dr. Leon Levy, president of Station WCAU, Philadelphia, on his return from Palm Beach, this week, said that he will push ahead plans for the "first television network," which was previously announced as expected to get under way this year, with Trenton and Philadelphia the inaugural links.

Dr. Levy hopes to obtain the necessary construction permits in time to allow work to begin by early summer. A relay station at Trenton would pass CBS television programs to Philadelphia, from where they would be broadcast to the city and suburbs, as well as to additional relay stations farther South, by a transmitter operating atop one of the city's tall buildings.

If construction can begin in the summer, Dr. Levy believes the New York-Philadelphia network would be in actual operation before the first of the year.

Major Armstrong, Expected To Be First Witness Before Commission, Sees 300 License Applications Soon

Hearings on frequency modulation (FM) the new transmission system which promises to revolutionize radio broadcasting will begin Monday in Washington before the Federal Communications Commission.

The FCC two weeks ago temporarily settled television matters by authorizing partial commercialization, starting September 1st, but television as well as regular radio broadcasters are expected to present their views at the FM hearings because FM radio and television operate in the same part of the wave-band. Television begins limited commercial operation on September 1st; FM wants full commercial standing.

100 Apply for Licenses

FM experimental stations are operating in many sections of the country and about 100 stations have applied to the FCC for FM licenses. Major Edwin H. Armstrong, inventor of the wide-band frequency modulation system, said that about 300 applications would be filed within the next few months.

More than 30 witnesses are expected to appear before the Federal Communications Commission next week to discuss broadcasting on frequencies above 25,000 kilocycles, a feature of which will be the discussion of the relative merits of the Armstrong frequency-modulation and the currently used amplitude-modulation systems.

Because of the relatively restricted coverage of the high-frequency stations, the shift of broadcasting to channels above 25,000 kilocycles may provide means for a great increase in the number of stations which can broadcast simultaneously.

A large number of appearances already have been filed with the commission, members of which expect that the hearings will require a week or more.

Armstrong To Be Witness

The first witness expected to be heard is Major Edwin H. Armstrong of Alpine, N. J., noted radio inventor who has developed the frequency-modulation system, who will explain the workings of high-frequency broadcasting, with which he has been experimenting for some time.

Attributed to Applications

Commission officials explained this week that the hearing was called primarily because of the considerable number of applications which have been filed for broadcasting stations to operate on frequencies above 25,000 kilocycles, employing frequency modulation.

It was felt desirable to ascertain if such stations had reached a stage of development that is acceptable for rendering regular, as distinguished from experimental, broadcast service to the public.

This, including as it does the problem of the relative merits of frequency and amplitude modulation, is the principal topic of discussion for the hearing, all other subjects being secondary.

CASH AWARDS SET ON TELEVISION

tempest in a teapot," "if one calmly looks over survey ratings. Movie theatres have complained that the $1,000 telephone calls are making people stay home on Tuesday nights—but the survey doesn't bear up those claims.

"Two other Tuesday programs have survey ratings higher than Heidt's. Fibber McGee rates at 32.5 and Bob Hope at 27.8, and both had ratings almost as high as that even before 'Pot o' Gold' went on the air. Obviously, if anything is keeping people home, it's the McGee and Hope combination first—and then Heidt.

"The movie men are complaining because they haven't discovered that radio's biggest week night has shifted from Thursdays to Tuesdays. A year ago listeners had three one-hour shows in a row every Thursday, and the combination of Rudy Vallee, Good News and Bing Crosby did much to keep people at their radios.

"Then Vallee left the air and 'Good News' began to slip, while Tuesday night gained strength as Hope shot to stardom and Fibber McGee gained in popularity. 'Information, Please' drew a terrific audience and another quizzer, 'Battle of the Sexes,' wasn't too far behind. Then Heidt opened his unique show and the theatremen had what they thought was the reason for a slump in Tuesday business. They simply haven't discovered that Tuesday, next to Sunday, is radio's best night.

"Further, if they are worried about empty seats and think 'Pot o' Gold' is to blame, why haven't they done something about Charlie McCarthy, who keeps twice as many people home on Sunday nights?"

Theatres in Air Tieups

A tieup between New York neighborhood film houses and radio has been worked out by Bill Berns in his "Uptown Movie Reporter" show over Station WBNX. Mr. Berns broadcasts Mondays, Wednesday and Fridays with Hollywood comment, reviews and interviews. In addition he announces the current programs being shown at the York, DelMar, Manhattan, Dorset, Central, Ace, Metro, Vogue, Bedford, Decatur, Burke, Laconia, Wakefield and Kimball theatres, all independent houses in Manhattan and the Bronx. In return, the theatres flash an announcement on the screen calling attention to the program and its sponsor, Chateau Martin Wines.

Fabian's 3,700-seat Palace in Albany has inaugurated a Thursday night "Information Please" quiz with Canada Dry Ginger Ale sponsoring the half hour show over Station WABY.

Newspaper space was assured by inclusion on the first night, of the morning and evening papers' film critics as "expert subjects." Educational angle was stressed by choosing college faculty interrogator while the sports field was covered by Johnny Evers, Jr., son of the famous former big league ball player.

The RKO Grand, in Columbus, Ohio, in cooperation with Station WCOL, a CBS affiliate, has inaugurated a theatre-radio quiz program, "What's the Answer," from the stage as a regular Monday night feature. The program, on a sustaining basis, features questions of local and national significance, with weekly awards to patrons answering the greatest number of questions correctly.

Ostrer Visiting U. S. Soon

Isidore Ostrer, chairman of the Gaumont British Pictures Corporation and executive of the Baird Television Company, plans to visit New York soon to discuss the extension of the Baird Television business in the United States.

RCA Offers Price Cuts, Expanded Programs to Place 25,000 Sets

A campaign to put 25,000 television receivers into homes within the 70 mile range of NBC's New York Empire State television transmitter during the next 12 months, was disclosed Tuesday to 400 television dealers of New York and New Jersey by Thomas F. Joyce, vice-president and advertising director of RCA Manufacturing Company. The campaign embraces "substantial" downward price revisions on television receivers, expanded program services, and specialized, cooperative selling efforts by retailers, wholesalers and RCA Victor to acquaint prospective purchasers with the new medium.

Cath-Ray Television on Wednesday announced a New York selling campaign on a reception set priced at $149.

RCA Victor's television model TRK-12, which formerly sold for $600, has been repriced at $395. This receiver has a 12-inch television receiving tube, and combines television functions with an 11-tube radio. Corresponding reductions were announced on all other Victor television models. There is an additional charge for installation and antenna.

Alfred H. Morton, vice-president of National Broadcasting, in charge of television activities, also addressed the dealers and envisioned more rapid progress during the next few months in bringing dramatic presentations, sports and news events, and other entertainment into homes.

Referring to an announcement by David Sarnoff, president of Radio Corporation of America, announcing that RCA Communications engineers have developed a practical television relay system for linking together a network.

RCA Wednesdy on behalf of NBC asked SEC permission for the construction and operation of televisors in Philadelphia, Washington and Chicago to advance its television relay network.

Opponents of FM broadcasting hold that if the FCC granted more space to that type of radio transmission and permitted sponsors, the 45,000,000 receivers in this country might eventually be made obsolete, as well as millions of dollars worth of transmitting equipment. It was reported that the Commission will try to do everything possible to avert undue loss to broadcasters and to owners of radio sets but at the same time take no action that would hinder progress in the radio art.

Organization Formed

Frequency Modulation Broadcasters, Inc., an organization formed by a number of individuals interested in that type of transmission, passed a number of resolutions including the request for commercial licenses, greater power and more channels.

FM enthusiasts claim that it is much farther advanced than television and can render good service to the public and so is entitled to more space.

WHN Programs Used

WHN, the New York station owned by Loew's, Inc., is cooperating with W. G. H. Finch, the facsimile inventor, and allowing his FM station, W2XWF, to use the WHN programs. John V. L. Hogan, owner of WQXR, is conducting tests with his FM station, W2XMN. Columbia Broadcasting System's station in Columbus is also transmitting over the FM station, W8XVH. The Zenith Radio Corporation in Chicago is operating a FM station.

A listener in the New York area can now hear over FM stations CBS programs through Major Armstrong's station at Alpine, N. J.; the Mutual programs over W2XOR and also the WHN and WQXR programs. Dealers are now advertising the "static-less" F M receivers in New York newspapers.

PARAMOUNT PRODUCES A FILM TO SHOW ADVANTAGES OF TELEVISION

Short Subject with Ted Husing Will Tell Theatregoers of Being Able to See and Hear Event as It Happens

Though many in the motion picture industry consider television a potential threat to films as the most important entertainment medium, Paramount Pictures, with a large interest in the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, one of the biggest independent television equipment manufacturers, an independent telecaster, and holder of many patents in the field, is using the motion picture to popularize television. This week it was completing a short subject "Ted Husing's Television Prevue," explaining to the moviegoer, in regular theatres, the advantages of being able to see as well as hear (television's advantage over radio); and the advantage of being able to see and hear an event while it is happening (presumably indicating television superiority over the motion picture newsreel).

RKO is the only other motion picture producer-distributor directly tied in on television, through its relations with RCA.

Film Offerings Limited

Generally, heeding exhibitor attitude, the film companies have shunned cooperation with television. The National Broadcasting Company, which inaugurated the first regular television service to the public last April, and which needed film material in lieu of "live" talent for its program, found itself faced with a virtual "boycott" by motion picture companies: the company could obtain only some independent product, and a few commercial and documentary films. Exhibitor organizations also forced abandonment of plans by several companies to advertise film product by "television trailers."

The Paramount short is one of its Paragraphic series, runs 10 minutes, has narration by Ted Husing, singing of Lanny Ross, and Mr. DuMont appears in the film.

Comedy Treatment

The presentation has comedy filling. What the effects of television upon average radio listeners and movie-goers would be, is illustrated: there's a radio health talk, then a view of a weakling who delivers it; how a television studio operates, with Lanny Ross singing; a note by Mr. Husing to the audience that the picture of him seen by them is several weeks old and that television would present him at the time of speaking, that newsreels are "normally a day or so old" and that the audience "sooner than you think" is going to see "great events when they actually happen."

At this juncture, Mr. Husing remarks, "No longer will you have to stay home from the movies just to hear what's going on in the world; come to the movies to hear and to see. . . ."

The short delves into more aspects: telecasting of fights, police alarms ,and so on.

At the close, with a showing of his face in a montage of television equipment, Mr. Husing says, in part:

"It won't be long before receivers'll be commonplace everywhere . . . telecasting studios familiar to all of us. . . . Yes, it's a real factor today in the entertainment world, and becoming more and more important."

NBC has announced that Cecil Be DeMille's "The King of Kings" will be the chief television presentation on Easter Sunday. The television rights to the film have been purchased from the Cinema Corporation of America. A sound score has been added.

Lowell Thomas, the voice of Movietonews and pioneer radio news commentator, has become the first radio performer to appear regularly on television. Each Wednesday, Thursday and Friday his radio program will be carried by W2XBS. The commercial announcements are included but no additional charge can be made at least until September 1st. Mr. Thomas took part in the "First Night" program on May 3, 1939, and has also participated in several experimental telecasts.

On Sunday a scene from the first act of "Pagliacci" will be presented over television. This will be the first opera program and regular Metropolitan stars will appear. Edward Johnson, general manager of the Opera Company, will be master of ceremonies and will make an appeal for the Metropolitan Opera Fund. About half of the $1,000,000 goal has been contributed.

NBC is now presenting a number of television programs from Madison Square Garden. Both the radio company and Garden officials hope that some day these sports programs will be televised to theatres. At prsent the programs are on an experimental basis but in the future the plan is to "scramble" the signals so that only theatres licensed to receive the sports event can get the pictures.

Sees Double Bill Supplanted

John Reed Kilpatrick, president of Madison Square Garden, expressed the belief that regularly televised sporting events may replace the double feature in many theatres. He also hopes that television of sports events will increase interest and attendance at the Garden. NBC now is given permission to telecast most sporting events at the Garden but when the number of sets in use becomes large the permit will be withdrawn and some kind of a licensing arrangement will be negotiated.

In addition to prize fights, which have been strong television presentations, NBC has telecast hockey, basketball and track meets from Madison Square Garden. The results have been surprisingly good considering the fact that no special lighting has been provided. Much better results are expected when two or more television cameras are used to cover the Garden.

Matinees After School Hours

The National Republic Convention opening in Philadelphia on June 24th will be televised by W2XBS as well as the Philco station in Philadelphia, W3XE, if the coaxial cable is ready by that time. It is reported that the cable, owned by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, is suitable for television relaying up to Princeton.

The juvenile audience already has had its effect on television. NBC's station has advanced its afternoon programs from 2:30 p. m. to 3:30 p. m. so that the matinee performances will begin after the schools are out. Some of the afternoon programs are especially designed for children.

Six shorts and one feature film make up this week's W2XBS motion picture part of the television programs. Included among the shorts is "Miracles of Modernization," a Federal Housing Authority documentary produced by Pathe.

To Represent BBC

Gerald Cock has been appointed to succeed Felix Greene as the New York representative of the British Broadcasting Company. Mr. Greene has been contact man between the English company and the American radio interests for the past four years. Mr. Cock has been in charge of BBC's television activities at the studio outside London.

The BBC has not announced plans to resume television and is not expected to do so until after the war. Sol Sagall, managing director of Scophony, Ltd., pointed out that England would lose its position as world leader in television if activities were not resumed. He said that America would become the leader in the new form of communication unless the industry was revived in England. The parallel with motion pictures was drawn.

LaGrange Radio Company Formed

Arthur Lucas and William K. Jenkins, of the Lukas-Jenkins theatre circuit, are directors of the new radio and television broadcasting company which is being organized in LaGrange, Ga., under the name LaGrange Broadcasting Company. The company plans a broadcasting station to serve West Georgia and Eastern Alabama.

Altoona Television Exhibit

A three day television exhibit at the William F. Gable Company department store in Altoona was called successful. The receivers were installed by station KDKA under the supervision of Joseph Baudino, chief engineer of Westinghouse Electric. The personnel of the program included talent from station WFBG. The display and production were arranged by Ed Callahan, head of the NBC Artists Bureau.

Majestic Radio Plan Considered

Claude A. Roth, trustee for the Majestic Radio and Television Corporation, reported to the Federal Court in Chicago that he was not sure a reorganization plan would be feasible because substantial new capital was needed. Federal Judge John P. Barnes set March 25th as the date for filing a reorganization plan and April 15th for filing of creditors' claims.

Museum Television Program

The Field Museum in Chicago arranged a a television program "Making the Dead Appear to Live" in co-operation with the Zenith Radio Station W2XYZ in Chicago.

RADIO REVIEWS FOR NEWSREELS

A regular weekly radio program reviewing current newsreels and short subjects, and aimed to promote attendance at newsreel theatres, was started Thursday by station WQXR, New York, under the sponsorship of the Embassy Newsreel Theatres.

On the program, with commentary by James Clemenger, will be guest artists from the ranks of newsreel cameramen, editors and others. The guest artist for the first program was Al Waldron, Movietone News cameraman.

The program calls for a five minute commentary on the latest news, a brief interview with a newsreel personality and a discussion of the short subjects.

NEW WAY OF 'FORCING' AD FILMS ON PUBLIC IS THROUGH RADIO THEATRES

National Advertisers Find Opening in Free Film Show; To Entertain Air Audiences Awaiting Broadcasts

The large national advertisers have been unable to get their advertising films on "regular" theatre screens, despite many attempts down through the years, but they have found a new way to "force" them on public groups: Free motion pictures now are presented as part of the free shows at several of the special "radio theatres" in New York. Radio advertisers have found that the audience which comes to the theatres leased by the radio networks "must be entertained" before the broadcast begins, and as a result this appears to be one of the principal outlets for the long commercial films.

New Advertising Moves

Paramount announced several weeks ago that it would produce advertising shorts either in the East or West. The Paramount notice to advertising agencies drew special attention to the type of films presented at radio theatres.

The March of Time's "Tobaccoland, U.S.A.," made for Liggett & Myers (Chesterfield Cigarets), began an indefinite engagement at the CBS radio theatre No. 3 Tuesday night. The film, which was a year in the making and is four reels long, will be shown three nights a week before the Glenn Miller broadcast. At a later date it will be added to the Fred Waring free radio show.

A representative of Newell-Emmett, the advertising agency which handles the Chesterfield account, said that distribution plans for "Tobaccoland, U.S.A." are not complete: "Distribution may be national, may be local; may be theatrical, may be non-theatrical." However, if the picture is shown only at the radio theatres in New York, it was said, an audience of 250,000 would be reached in a year.

Shown First in Theatres

The first engagement of "Tobaccoland" was theatrical. The film was shown for two days at two theatres in Durham, N. C. No admission price was charged and 35,000 people, half the city's population, attended.

Distribution on the Chesterfield four-reel film has not been arranged yet because the agency wishes to test it out before determining a final policy. A spokesman said, "It is not a question of having a picture and not knowing what to do with it. But it takes time to decide what is best."

The most difficult problem with advertising or "institutional" films always has been distribution, it was noted. Advertising films in regular theatres have made little progress. At one time practically every company took on contracts with some of the country's biggest advertisers to make one and two-reel films. Distribution was to be through theatre circuits. Millions of dollars' worth of commercial films were planned but the matter was dropped at the threat of unfriendly action from newspaper publishers. When radio began to take a large slice of the advertiser's dollar, newspapers objected but that campaign was called unsuccessful.

At the present time, the most success in the advertising film field is commonly accredited to the "one-minute movies," which are said to be played in about 8,000 theatres, mostly subsequent runs and small town theatres.

Until Paramount's recent announcement very little interest had been evidenced for several years among large companies. Pathe News, formerly a large producer of that type of film, has resumed activity by making two films for the Federal Housing Authority, and is working on another. However, distribution is being handled by the FHA and not by Pathe.

The March of Time began to make a few advertising films as an experiment but at the moment is not interested in making any more, according to John R. Wood, Jr., treasurer and in charge of commercial film activity. Mr. Wood said, "About a year ago we decided to experiment and see if we could make a commercial picture as different as the March of Time is in the theatrical field. We were not interested in making just a commercial short."

Last year the March of Time made a short on Prestone for the National Carbon Company which was shown as part of a program with a Disney cartoon and a regular issue of the March of Time. It was not to be shown separately but as part of a unit. Mr. Wood said that "it was satisfactory for its purpose but not a pattern for us to follow."

Ad Film Work Suspended

The proposition of making a picture for Chesterfield came at a time when The March of Time had extra cameramen available because work on "Ramparts We Watch" had been delayed and also because it was a subject that interested the company. However, Mr. Wood explained, with the war, work on the feature film and on the regular March of Time issues and other causes, the advertising film activity had been suspended.

The March of Time and its regular distributor, RKO, have nothing to do with the handling of "Tobaccoland, U.S.A."

Others Show No Interest

Outside of the activity in the commercial short field on the part of Paramount, Pathe and the March of Time, the principal motion picture companies expressed no interest in the subject. The other makers of regular short subjects, Columbia, MGM, RKO Radio, Twentieth Century-Fox, Universal and Vitaphone, said that they are not making advertising shorts and have no plans along that line. Twentieth Century-Fox does hire out space in its New York studio to producers of such shorts.

Paramount's decision to make commercial films, said Barney Balaban, president, was based on the wish of Lou Diamond, head of short subjects, to increase the revenue of that department. The company does not plan advertising shorts for motion picture theatre use.

A checkup of some of the leading advertising agencies failed to show any new interest in films as a medium of advertising. The problem of distribution, it was said, is one factor blocking development in this field. Films are used for instruction of workmen, salesmen and the like, but the general agency opinion seemed to be that their clients are not interested in using films for advertising purposes.

U. S. Steel's Venture

Two years ago the U. S. Steel Corporation made two advertising films, one of four reels, "Steel—Man's Servant," the other a one-reel condensed version, "Men Make Steel." The one-reel film was intended expressly for wide theatrical distribution. The four-reel picture also was to be shown in theatres where the corporation's offices and plants are located. Although $200,000 was spent to make the five color reels and advertising was limited to the "U. S. Steel and subsidiaries present.." and one reference to the company, the films did not get theatrical distribution to any great extent.

Perhaps the most serious amusement venture of a national advertiser was the road-show plan of the Standard Oil Company back in 1934. Socony established a touring troupe of variety entertainers to give free shows all over the country. The only admission requirement was an auto license. Exhibitors protested and the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America reached a compromise agreement with the oil company. The company had talent contracts for 13 weeks and was pledged to spend $250,000. Under the MPPDA agreement the show was played in motion picture theatres after all advertising matter had been deleted and the gasoline stations advertised the picture playing at the theatre and theatre ads mentioned the Esso Marketers Show in their advertisements.

Said an MPPDA spokesman of the Standard Oil venture, "They did not know what they were getting into."

SEEKS CONTINUANCE OF MILK CAMPAIGN

State Senator Walter W. Stokes and Assemblyman F. S. Hollowell have introduced a bill in the New York legislature seeking continuance of the state's milk publicity campaign with a $300,000 appropriation to be defrayed by the milk industry. The campaign has been in effect since 1935.

In the current year (fiscal, July 1939-June 1940), the Milk Publicity Bureau has utilized motion pictures for the first time, producing a 10 minute short subject entitled "The Miracle of Milk," which so far has been booked in more than 500 New York theatres. Circuits which have used the film are Schine, Warners, Loew's, Fabian, Shea and Kallet among others.

Artkino Supplants Amkino As Russian Film Agent

Russian films again have an outlet in this country, and in Latin America. Nicola Napoli, former general manager of the Amkino Corporation, and Rosa Madell, its former booker, have formed the Artkino Pictures Company, with offices in rooms formerly occupied by Amkino, at 723 Seventh Avenue, New York City. Amkino, after 13 years of activity here, dissolved several weeks ago. Poor business, resulting from hostility to Russian film fare, following Russia's treaty with Germany and invasion of Finland, dictated the closing, it was said.

The new company is "entirely divorced" of Soviet Russia, it is claimed. However, it will sell new Russian films, and is distributing about 20 Russian pictures which already have been shown here. It will also, as Amkino did, purchase American films, raw film stock, and film equipment.

Bluebook School

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

[Based on the Second Revision of the Sixth Edition, Bluebook of Projection]

ANSWER TO QUESTION No. 8

Bluebook School Question No. 8 was: What three kinds of trouble are caused by overheating in amplifiers? (B) Name three conditions that might cause hum in an amplifier. (C) How may the makeup of amplifiers be best studied?

L. Johnson replies, "First of all, overheating in an amplifier hardens the next-to-the-wire rubber insulation, rendering it very likely to crack when the wire is bent as well as lowering its insulating power. More than this, it bakes the insulating compound out of the overlaying cotton insulation, thus not only lowering or destroying its insulating power, but physically weakening it so that it is much more easily abraided or torn, all of which renders current leakage or short circuits much more likely to occur.

"More than this, overheating may and is indeed likely to boil the insulating compound out of transformer or condenser casings, which may eventually cause their complete breakdown. What is perhaps the third main damage caused by overheating in amplifiers is gradual rise in resistance of the various conductors therein caused by molecular changes in the metal, which will be very slow or very rapid, according to the amount of overheat applied. Such change is wholly negligible until the temperature reaches 75 degrees Fahrenheit. When that degree is passed, but only moderately, the damage is small and slow. When the excess is high it is large and rapid up to the point where the wire fuses, long before which the insulation, both rubber and cotton, will have been ruined. The chief cause of overheating in amplifiers is excessive line voltage, though accumulations of dust and dirt may cause overheating at local points in its structure."

(B) W. Turk answers, "We learn (see p. 575 of the bluebook) that if current be supplied by a rectifier, a defective tube may set up hum. We also learn that in the event either tube of a full-wave rectifier should burn out, or the emission of either tube should drop so far that the tube no longer in effect functions, the rectifier being thus reduced to half-wave action, hum might and probably would result. Such a condition would of course reduce the plate current very substantially. If, when using a rectifier, volume drops off, accompanied by hum, look for this fault first.

"Misplaced wires may cause hum. Great care should be taken so far as possible to isolate sensitive sound circuit wires from possible induction effect of a.c. circuits. If this isn't done, you may almost certainly expect hum trouble."

(C) This question is well answered by L. Goss, as follows: "To understand any equipment, amplifiers included, it is essential that one study both the general and detailed construction and its theory of action. Without the knowledge such a course of study provides, one cannot possibly be in a position to handle such relatively complicated apparatus as the amplifier used in motion picture projection in the best manner, causing it to deliver maximum results; nor can any projectionist be in a position to render first-aid competently in time of trouble.

"There usually is but one means for such study available to the projectionist, but fortunately that means is in most instances available. Certainly no exhibitor or theatre manager should permit the installation of any amplifier unless at the same time a complete blueprint of its wiring be supplied the projectionist. This chart should be permanently mounted on the wall of the projection room. The projectionist is thus enabled to study it, together with such textbooks as will enable him to understand the function of its various parts (we, of course, commend the Bluebook of Projection as best suited for such study), at the same time so far as possible tracing out the various circuits, etc., in the amplifier itself. Personally, I would myself commend a close study of pages 576, 580 and 581 of the Bluebook of Projection in this connection. Those pages were to me worth the whole price of the book."

Question No. 12

(A) Tell us just how amplification is secured in a three-element tube.
(B) Draw a simple amplifying circuit and explain its action in detail.
(C) Explain inter-tube coupling.

Monogram Drive; Weeks Producing

Monogram will launch a "Spirit of Independence" drive, a 14 week campaign for playdates to begin March 30th and ending July 6th, according to Edward A. Golden, general sales manager, who said the drive is dedicated to the American spirit of independence. Monogram, he said, has sold 6,202 accounts out of an average possible 9,550.

Mr. Golden has divided Monogram's 30 exchanges into a National league and an American league, each group consisting of four teams designated as "The Bears," "Giants," "White Sox," etc. A captain heads each team competing for its established quota.

Mr. Golden said that the success of the recent "March for Monogram" drive has demonstrated the interest of the company's exchanges in inter-office competition. The awards in the "Spirit of Independence" contest are the greatest in value ever offered in a similar drive, he said.

A production program of eight to 10 features is planned by George W. Weeks for release through Monogram next season. Mr. Weeks will leave New York for the coast late this week, en route continuing conferences with exchange leaders.

Special Division Managers Awards for Columbia Drive

Columbia has set aside special division managers awards as a further stimulus for the "Montague Fifteenth Anniversary Campaign," which will end May 10th. The district managers' awards will cover a period of eight weeks ending April 26th and will go to the two division managers whose districts show the greatest improvement in billings against quotas set on average weekly billings covering a period from July 15, 1937, to June 30, 1939.

The drive has increased national billings on an average of 40 per cent over the quota set, it was announced this week. Twenty-seven of 31 exchanges are ahead of their campaign quota and the remainder have exceeded average billings, according to the company.

Terry-Toon Contracts

Theatre contracts for Terry-Toons since the first of the year have passed the 10,000 mark in the domestic market, which is an all-time high, according to William J. Clark, short subject sales manager of Twentieth Century-Fox.

FROM READERS

"NO MORE 'WIND' "; PREFERS "TORNADO"

I am in the theatre business, a small town exhibitor. I hope they never make another "Gone with the Wind" if it is to be distributed in the same manner as this one.

My theatre is located within 10 miles of a 20,000 town where "Gone With the Wind" is being played and has been advertised for months previous. The picture has drained my town of customers and their money. It has taken the spotlight so strongly that the advertising of any other picture is useless.

In the past I have always followed the town within three weeks on all the larger productions. This time I cannot. My hands are tied and when my customers ask me when I will have it they notice that funny look on my face and hear that flimsy excuse or that bunch of mean-nothing words.

It sets a precedent for the house that can never be overcome. It impresses the fact upon my customers that my town is too small for big productions.

The manner in which "Wind" was released is a boon to the big boys but hell on the little ones who have to eat, too, even if it is beans.

I know it makes no difference how we feel or how much money we make in our "tank" towns, for we have to swallow and swallow whether we can digest it or not. Just so we can pay off in advance. All this goes for goodwill for the film companies.

Maybe I don't like government in business, but it is this kind of policy that gets Uncle Sam interested.

The past has been okay but it's getting tougher all the time, then comes that new idea. Here's hoping the boys don't let the "Wind" blow off their hats and that it don't make me blow my "topper."—ROBERT H. WILSON, Palace Theatre, Jackson, Mo.

Hudson Named Circuit President

Earl J. Hudson, general manager of United Detroit Theatres Corporation, has been named president of the circuit. Mr. Hudson will be in full charge of the operation of the circuit, which is affiliated with Paramount's theatre operations.

Prior to joining the circuit in 1934 Mr. Hudson was associated with First National Pictures. He organized and managed First National's own production units. He had also been in executive and production positions with other major companies.

Warner Des Moines Changes

Paul Walsh, booker at the Warner Brothers Des Moines exchange, will replace Harry Herman, salesman, when Mr. Herman leaves the exchange shortly to operate a theatre at New Hampton, Iowa. Paul Leatherby, confirmation clerk, will become booker, and John Winn, formerly with Grand National in Omaha, will become confirmation clerk.

A Bill of Divorcement

(RKO Radio)

Sacrifice to Insanity

The third version of the Clemence Dane stage play to reach the screen, and second to be made by RKO Radio, is a picture bearing unmistakable proof of painstaking craftsmanship in all departments: production, direction, writing and acting.

The story is of self-sacrifice on the part of a girl whose mother has been divorced from a husband adjudged insane. Returning unexpectedly, at least partially cured of his malady, he is on the point of preventing his former wife's remarriage when his daughter, told that the disease is hereditary, gives up her own marriage plans to stay with him and allow her mother to begin life anew.

Played almost entirely within the confines of an English country home, the background is attuned to the essential somberness of the story, with lighting in the same minor key as the sonata written by the father which serves as symbol for his maladjusted personality.

Direction and writing, as provided by John Farrow and Dalton Trumbo, retain the mood with a series of incidents rising in intensity to the climax. Character portrayals are on a par with the rest of the production values supplied by Robert Sisk and Lee Marcus, executive producer.

Maureen O'Hara has the role of the daughter played first by Katharine Hepburn and in 1922 by Constance Binney. Fay Bainter plays the mother, Adolph Menjou the father, Herbert Marshall the mother's fiance. Dame May Whitty the cold and domineering aunt.

The Fight for Life

(U. S. Film Service)

Problems of Parturition

Pare Lorentz, that wonder boy of governmental film circles, who in his two previous short subject screen studies, "The Plough That Broke the Plains" and "The River," had taken under serious cinematic consideration a set of the most disturbing problems of Mother Nature, namely soil erosion and flood control, has moved by way of the feature length brackets into the sphere of gynecology. This time, through the munificent assistance of the United States Film Service, he has sounded distressing alarms about the momentous matter of Motherhood. The results of this excursion into the province of parturition is the manufacturing of a semi-documentary and semi-fictional work that is in its pictured effects grim and gripping material, as is to be deduced from thesis and treatment, and possessing an unintentional pictorial fascination, except for the medically initiated, that may border on the sensational and the macabre.

The film was greeted on its initial screening in New York City with accolades of super-superlatives from the typewriter ribbons of metropolitan newspaper critics. However, it is a matter of waiting and calculating to ascertain if these critical effusions are vindicated by the dollars and cents endorsement of the ticket buying lay public.

The production carries the talent trademarks which have been previously demonstrated in Mr. Lorentz's past efforts. The concentration on the topic is severe and unswerving. Camerawork and lighting emphasize the unvarnished reality of the gestatory proceedings. The score from the music table of Louis Gruenberg is remarkable for compositional mood making. In fact, Mr. Gruenberg's score in its musical synchronization of drum beats to the counting fingers of the doctors as they clock the foetel heart beat, a motif similar in effect to the panic producing effects of the tom-tom throbbings in the jungle drama, "Emperor Jones," is a terrifying implement in sustaining the nervous and exhausting tension that cloaks the picture's several confinement sequences.

For the principal players in this round of bedside travails, there was recruited a group of professional actors, more distinguished for stage experience than screen careers. These actors plod through their paces as if the serious duties entailed in their performances had paralyzed their skill in running the range of human emotional expression. They almost invariably display such long faced countenances that at times the spectator may receive the erroneous impression that the actors are portraying embalmers rather than agents of health, succor and life. The background array of pregnant women has been selected from impoverished relief recipients who were patients of a maternity clinic in Chicago. In the shots showing them awaiting clinic treatment and examination, the assembled ladies present a drab and none too complimentary picture of expectant mothers, self consciously aware of their impending predicaments.

Original source material for the obstetrical opus was derived from the maternal welfare chapters to be found in the book, "The Fight for Life," by Paul de Kruif and subjected to variations by Mr. Lorentz. The proceedings open with a fatal delivery and thus furnish the thin thread of plot that the picture possesses. A young doctor present at this unfortunate maternity case resolves to obtain further knowledge and experience in child birth practice. This determination furnishes the film a clue for picturing sequences of mothers-to-be making their periodical clinic visits and a series of field work visits in home emergency deliveries. The material is unvaried and results in a panel of cases that grows to be monotonous and repetitious in situation and treatment. The production concentrates mainly on actual birth moments and only briefly mentions the important matter of prenatal and post delivery care of mother and child. Such an uneven balancing of incidents in the case histories with the emphasis placed on difficult and critical deliveries may prove to be too strong for the average layman to stomach.

A very evident digression is sounded midway in the picture's progress when the young student doctor, surveying the unwholesome home conditions and the residential neighborhood of one of his patients, raises the query if it is worthwhile to bring young life into such surroundings. The camera then embarks upon a sightseeing tour of the district with its ramshackled tenement dwellings and unsanitary living conditions, and picks out some of the district folk scavenging for food among refuse heaps. Adversaries of current governmental policies and practices may translate this bit of footage into New Deal progaganda. On the other hand, the depiction of the sordid and poverty stricken aspects of the patients' homes may be utilized by the advocates of artificial birth regulation as pictorial material for their cause. Indeed, the nation's rapidly falling birth rate will not be checked by the screen services of this morbid manifestation of motherhood.

Three Cheers for the Irish

(Warners)

Comedy

Warners' "Three Cheers for the Irish" is a rollicking, broad comedy of an Irish family, consisting of a veteran patrolman and his three daughters, and their friends and enemies, set in a background of New York City. Thick with brogues and the sort of humor typically associated with the Irish, the film at its Hollywood preview was greeted hilariously, although the audience was in little doubt as to each succeeding occurrence.

Priscilla Lane, as the "stay at home" daughter of a motherless family; Thomas Mitchell, in another excellent characterization as the police officer, retired after 25 years on the force, who runs for office of alderman; and Dennis Morgan, as a Scotch-burring rookie who takes over the father's beat, are given the starring credits, supported by Alan Hale, as the boisterous family friend and who adds this role to a long line of highly commendable performances; Virginia Grey, Irene Hervey, William Lundigan, Frank Jenks and Henry Armetta.

The original screenplay by Richard Macaulay and Jerry Wald provides ample and lengthy opportunities for the protagonists to exercise fully their bent for broad comedy. Lloyd Bacon's direction emphasized the suggestions of the screenplay. Samuel Bischoff was the associate producer.

Retired by order of the police commissioner after 25 years on the force, "Casey" runs for alderman. Anguished by his daughter's love for the rookie, whom he hates because of his dislike for the Scotch, and by his discovery that another daughter had accepted campaign funds from a gambler, "Casey" retraces his steps in the campaign, confessing his acceptance of money from "the interests" and asks that voters support his opponent. Astounded, the voters elect him and his joy becomes greater when his daughter, married to the rookie, bears twins.

Pioneers of the West

(Republic)

Western Melodrama

Based on characters created by William Colt MacDonald, the Three Mesquiteers—Robert Livingston, Raymond Hatton and Duncan Renaldo—pack their hard-riding search for justice with melodramatic action under the direction of Lester Orlebeck.

The story is familiar to western fans. The Three Mesquiteers guide a wagon train of pioneers through unknown territories and Indian attacks to their recently purchased land, only to find that they have been swindled by local politicians. The settlers establish their homes on the worthless land. Then the politicians try to force them off when they hear of an opportunity to sell to a railroad. The Three Mesquiteers protect the settlers' rights and drive out the swindlers.

Noah Beery returns to the screen as the crooked court judge in league with the crooks. Others in supporting roles are Beatrice Roberts, George Cleveland, Lane Chandler and Hal Taliaferro.

They Came by Night

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Mystery Melodrama

Following the English-made production "To the Victor" ("Rob, Son of Battle") which helped bring Will Fyffe to general notice of American audiences, Twentieth Century-Fox, Ltd., made "They Came by Night," again starring Will Fyffe. On completion of the second picture in England, Fyffe went to Hollywood and made for Paramount "Rulers of the Sea." Now "They Came by Night" enters the American market. It was produced by Edward Black, directed by Harry Lachman, who handled Shirley Temple's "Baby, Take a Bow" in 1934, and has Phyllis Calvert and Anthony Hulme in supporting roles.

The story in itself is not so very exciting mystery, but with Will Fyffe in the leading role the picture offers an exploitation basis of value.

The story deals with the Taj Ruby, its disappearance and effect on the lives of those concerned with it. When the ruby is stolen at a London auction by a ring of jewel thieves it is sent to the jewelry establishment of "James Fothergill." By trickery "Fothergill" is forced into league with the thieves, which later gives him the opportunity to avenge his brother's death. Under suspicion by the police, "Fothergill" captures the criminals.

The romantic element is secondary, and is taken care of by Anthony Hulme and Phyllis Calvert.

Primrose Path

Study in Squalor

Producer-director Gregory La Cava's exploration of the seamy side of life along the waterfront is described in studio literature as a "Steinbeck-ish story," and another program note declares that none of the players in it used makeup, as adapted from the stage play of the same name by scenarist Alan Scott and Mr. La Cava. It tells the story of a family provided for by a mother who gets the provender where and how she finds it and of the daughter who is rescued, in the nick of time, by a good man, from obeying her grandmother's advice to go and do likewise after a bullet, presumably fired by her drunken father, has ended her errant but devoted mother's mortal usefulness.

It is essentially a drab and sordid narrative with a relatively happy ending somewhat arbitrarily arrived it. However, the Hollywood preview audience laughed at material not commonly considered amusing. Such matters as the heroine's mother cutting capers on an alcoholic joy ride, the heroine's father staggering drunkenly into his half starved family's home, and the heroine's honest husband making a night of it with the girls at the corner saloon, drew snorts and guffaws mixed with approving applause from a preview crowd not typically addicted to taking its pictures lightly.

Performances in the picture run no more to pattern than the narrative. A variety of subject matter not frequently dealt with in recent years. Ginger Rogers strives to make a complex characterization seem realistic, and succeeds toward the end. Joel McCrea is somewhat more successful in the earlier footage, the script embarrassing his efforts later on. Marjorie Rambeau's portrayal of the mother may be very good or just seem so because there haven't been many of these on the screen since the Production Code was adopted. Henry Travers supplies a lightly effective comedy element, but Miles Mander's delineation of a brilliant scholar brought low by drink is something only a playwright could believe and has the result of evoking laughter at the expense of character and story.

Mr. La Cava's picture is, in sum, a decidedly mixed quantity. A melodramatic and not entirely consistent treatment of the theme indicated in the title. It is not in any sense a picture for children.

Cartoon

The rodent is a much abused creature in real life but a favorite of cartoonists. In this subject the mouse again turns the tables on his hereditary foe, here the feline "Allie Kats." "Allie" is a mouse exterminator, called upon to do a bit of exterminating but the mouse of the story is a slick one who draws on his bag of tricks liberally. "Allie," a soft-hearted cat, is outwitted at every turn and finally winds up in a vacuum cleaner.—Running time, 6½ minutes.

The Three Stooges again are cavorting in the manner to which they have accustomed themselves, which is to say that another of their wacky comedies emerges from this re-traveling of the covered wagon trail of the "old" west. The boys here are transporting a girl show from Kansas to California. Harried by "Indians," a live bear, and one another, the Stooges have a troublous time of it. Say 10 Million Viewed 'Finland'

The extent to which theatres throughout the country cooperated in the drive to aid the Finnish Relief Fund is indicated in a release on the showing of the film, "Finland Fights," shown in connection with the theatre collections. It is estimated the subject was shown to an aggregate audience of 10,000,000. Six hundred prints were used.

The film was produced by the Emerson Yorke Studio and distribution was handled by Al. O. Bondy in conjunction with Jack Connolly of the staff of Major L. E. Thompson, head of the film division.

Hollywood players had voted to turn over to Finland an ambulance with a crew of five.

The amusement industry in Chicago has contributed approximately $12,000 to the Finnish Relief Fund.

Collections at Broadway legitimate theatres for the drive totaled $6,037 in the three weeks of the drive, it is reported by Gertrude Lawrence, chairman of the division.

The Garbett Theatre Company of Des Moines held a benefit for the Iowa Finnish Relief Fund at its Avalon theatre there last week. A Swedish film, "Nothing but the Truth," was shown. A Swedish lodge, the Viking, sponsored the film.

Court Frees Exhibitor In Lottery Case

The first conviction in the New York metropolitan area of an exhibitor on charges of operating a lottery was reversed when the special sessions court in Brooklyn freed James May former manager of the Atlantic theatre, Brooklyn. Last July Mr. May was fined $500 and sentenced to 30 days in jail when Judge Bayes found that the manner in which Screeno was conducted was a lottery. The conviction was appealed to the appellate division of the New York Supreme Court and a new trial was ordered.

Melvin Albert of Weisman, Celler, Quinn, Allan & Spett, Independent Theatre Owners Association counsel, argued that under a New York Court of Appeals ruling in 1937, chance games are legal as long as patrons are eligible for awards even though they do not pay admission.

The Century Circuit dropped chance games after Mr. May was convicted last July.

Included in the new line of Warner displays will be 40x60 and 30x40 upright posters and 24x80 and 24x82 banners. These four units will be prepared on all future productions, starting with "Virginia City."

Talley Talks to Hull On European Affairs

Conditions in Allied and neutral Europe as seen through the eyes of a newsreel executive were portrayed to Secretary of State Cordell Hull last week by Truman Talley, vice-president and producer of Movietone News.

One week returned from a trip which took him over a good part of Europe, Mr. Talley, accompanied by Tony Muto, head of Movietonews, Washington office, had a 40-minute visit with Secretary Hull, in acquiescence to a suggestion, made before he left for Europe, that the State Department would be interested in receiving his views.

While in Europe Mr. Talley visited England and France, where he saw those countries under war conditions, and Italy, Switzerland and Holland, important neutrals. He was unable to visit Germany under the war-time rule which permits visas from only one belligerent.

The newsreel executive is understood to have acquainted Secretary Hull with activities of the American news-picture cameramen abroad and the difficulties with which they must cope in the way of censorship and other war-time restrictions.

He also is understood to have discussed conditions abroad generally.

WARNERS WEST FOR "VIRGINIA CITY"; "WIND" REACHES $15,000,000 MARK

Field "Showmanship-of-the-Week" also Includes Campaigns for "Johnny Apollo" and for "My Son, My Son"

Large distributors' attention to field showmanship-of-the-week was directed this week principally to Warners' "Virginia City," in Nevada; to Fox's "Johnny Apollo," at Ossining, within the shadows of New York's Sing Sing Prison, and to campaigns and contests for "My Son, My Son," United Artists, and "Till We Meet Again," another Warners' subject.

"Virginia City" Saturday

The "opening of the week," that of "Virginia City," will be held in Reno and Virginia City, Nevada, on Saturday. Guests are being brought from the East and West coasts, and points between, for Warners' "annual" cross-country junket for editors and critics of trade, news and magazine publications. Last year the company held a similar opening at the scene of the story's locale for the world premiere of "Dodge City," at Dodge City, Kansas.

Mort Blumenstock, director of advertising and publicity in the east for Warner Brothers, led the delegation of correspondents and trade press men which left New York Wednesday afternoon. In the party were: George Tucker, Associated Press; Ira Wolfert, North American Newspaper Alliance; Lucius Beebe, Herald Tribune Syndicate; Howard Barnes, New York Herald-Tribune; Frank Farrell, New York World Telegram; Eileen Creelman, New York Sun; Jack Lait, New York Daily Mirror; Herbert Cohen, Brooklyn Eagle; Ely Jacques Kahn, The New Yorker; Sam Shain, Motion Picture Daily; Chick Lewis, Showmen's Trade Review; Jay Emanuel, The Exhibitor; Frank Tinsley, Reuter's; Andre Peron, Havas Agency; Joe Miller, Philadelphia Inquirer, and Elsie Finn, Philadelphia Record.

Warner Brothers home office representatives included Jacob Wilk, Ralph W. Budd, John Harkins and Sid Rechetnik. Dr. Duncan Emrich of Columbia University and his wife were also members of the party.

In Chicago a group of journalists from Midwestern cities boarded the train and at Truckee, Cal., the Eastern train met the studio "Virginia City Special."

Group from Hollywood

Jack L. Warner, Hal B. Wallis and Charlie Einfeld are to lead the group of executives, stars and correspondents from Hollywood for the opening. The delegation is to include 50 stars and 150 writers and radio personalities. The train leaves Los Angeles on Friday noon, to reach Reno at 9 a. m., Saturday. Stops will be made at Bakersfield, Fresno, Modesto, Merced, Stockton and Sacramento.

Another special train for the premiere will leave San Francisco and stop enroute at Salt Lake City and Omaha.

The star delegation is headed by Errol Flynn, Miriam Hopkins, Randolph Scott and Humphrey Bogart of the "Virginia City" cast. Among the other fifty stars to attend will be Hobart Cavanaugh, character actor, a native of Virginia City.

Part of the Virginia City celebration will be an auction, at Piper's Opera House, of old handbills and program recordings of famous opera stars who appeared there in the town's boom days. Proceeds will go to the $1,000,000 campaign of the Metropolitan Opera Company. The Opera House, closed 25 years, will be opened for the ceremony. The auctioneer will be Errol Flynn and the auction proceedings will be carried by an NBC Blue Network after the regular Saturday matinee opera program.

On Thursday Alan Hale and Guinn "Big Boy" Williams were featured in a preview of "Virginia City," on the "Strange As It Seems" program over the Columbia Broadcasting System.

"Wind's" $15,000,000

"Gone With the Wind," which has grossed almost $15,000,000 in the first three months, is now dated in 852 cities. The first neighborhood runs, in New York City, and the first foreign showings, in London, also are scheduled.

The bookings of the Selznick International production now total 956 in 852 cities. Additional engagements include the following:

"Wind" opens March 21st at the Paradise in the Bronx, and Valencia, Jamaica, and one week later at seven theatres in New York and four in Westchester. The evening and Sunday performances will be reserved. It will run continuously from 9:00 a. m. through the afternoon on weekdays, and one show in the evening beginning at 8 o'clock. Over 685,000 tickets have been ordered for the subsequent run engagements in Greater New York.

Subsequent run ads for New York carry the line, "You'll see 'GWTW' in its entirety, exactly as it is being presented on Broadway." An advertising budget of about $50,000 is planned and from six to ten additional employees will be added to each theatre's staff for the "Wind" engagement.

The neighborhood runs in New York of "Wind," it is claimed, will establish a number of precedents: the first time a picture has played in the neighborhoods while still running on Broadway, the price scale the same as charged for the Capitol's run, the first time that the subsequent runs charge an admission scale of $1.10.

A special opening is planned for Harlem at the Loew's Victoria on April 4th.

Loew's Circuit is spending $30,000 building special boxoffices to handle "Wind" tickets and the cost of numbering seats (for the reserved showings) will be more than $25,000.

"Wind" will have a triple premiere in London. The film will open simultaneously the middle of April at the Empire, Palace and Ritz theatres, in the West End. Sam Eckman, Jr., managing director for MGM's distribution organization in Great Britain, is handling arrangements. These London openings are expected to be the first public presentation of the film outside the United States and Canada. There have been special private showings of "Wind" abroad for the benefit of officials.

The Selznick picture continues to set run records, including the following: five weeks at Fox's Palace, Milwaukee; six weeks at Loew's State, St, Louis, where 280,000 saw the film. The St. Louis subsequent runs begin March 28th. For the sixth week of the run at the Music Box in Seattle the picture played one afternoon performance, instead of two.

"Edison" and Legislature

Edgar Williamson, Jr., assemblyman from Essex, introduced a resolution which was passed by the New Jersey State Legislature, calling on MGM to hold the national premiere of "Edison the Man" in the Oranges and Maplewood, Essex County, which were closely connected with the inventor's life. Schenectady and Dearborn, Michigan, are reported to have put in their claims for the opening. MGM is reported to be spending $325,000 on advertising on the two Edison pictures.

MGM reported that "Northwest Passage" is running ahead of "The Women" in 22 of 32 spots and leading "The Wizard of Oz" in 24 locations. Business was reported to be substantially over normal at Loew's Akron; Loew's Rochester; Palace, Indianapolis; State, Cleveland; Place, Albany; State, Syracuse; Midland, Kansas City; Grand, Atlanta; State, Providence, and Penn, Pittsburgh. The film opened strongly at the Capitol in New York.

MGM is conducting tests in Jacksonville to find a boy to play the role of Jody in the film based on "The Yearling." Expense of the search is said to be $35,000. The producers would like to obtain a Florida boy for the part. The picture may be made in the area of Silver Springs, Florida, where Victor Fleming and Jay Merchant have been looking over the country.

"Dr. Cyclops" Test Runs

Paramount reported that "Dr. Cyclops" had established outstanding grosses in its five test runs following the opening in Denver. In its first five days at the Denham theatre in Denver the film was reported to have bettered the gross of every Paramount hit with the exception of "Beau Geste" and business was within 10 per cent of that record. Business at the Newman theatre in Kansas City, at the Paramount in Nashville, at the Olympic in Altoona, and the Allyn theatre in Hartford was also better than for all other Paramount pictures except "Beau Geste." Opening day in Altoona was said to be 33 per cent over normal and opening day at Nashville was the best business the house has had for the past year. At the Strand in Providence receipts on "Dr. Cyclops" was reported about equal to those on other major Paramount films.

GRANT FUEL FOR THEATRE SERVICE

E. M. Hall, technical director of the Western Electric Company, Ltd., of London, who is now in New York on leave, reports that, despite severe rationing measures, the company's fleet of over 200 automobiles, which is constantly in operation for theatre servicing and studio technical staffs, has been granted a full supply of gasoline. The British Government, he said, has also assisted the company in the performance of its functions by granting equipment importation permits.

Mr. Hall said that, in addition to these peace-time operations, the company also provides a number of advisory services to the British Government in connection with war-time technical problems in the field of acoustics and sound transmission.

Alec Moss directed the exploitation of "Dr. Cyclops" from the New York office. Six exploiters covered the pre-release test cities. Each field man reported to Mr. Moss each day and his report was forwarded to the other five men. Posting and cooperative ad campaigns were used for the openings in the six cities. A different publicity campaign was tried in each city; the best ideas will be presented in detail in the press book.

The "Vox Pop" radio program on April 11th will originate in Albany, Ga., as part of the premiere ceremonies for "The Biscuit Eater," at the Albany theatre. The broadcast will be made from the Radium Springs Georgia Casino on the Barron Collier estate. Wally Butterworth and Parks Johnson, radio interviews and conductors of the "Vox Pop" program will go to Albany to handle the broadcast.

Robert M. Weitman, manager of the Paramount theatre in New York, announced that "Seventeen," co-starring Jackie Cooper and Betty Field, began the second week with a gross equal to opening day's receipts. The first week's business was $60,000. During the first week several "name" band leaders substituted for Glenn Miller, who was taken ill.

"My Son" National Contest

United Artists has arranged a series of contests in 26 newspapers to pick the "perfect son" as part of the promotional campaign on "My Son, My Son!" Each contest will be timed for the two weeks prior to the opening of the Edward Small production in that city. A national winner will be selected from the finalists and a complete four-year college scholarship is the grand prize.

The papers which are sponsoring the contest in their cities are the Philadelphia News, Los Angeles News, Cleveland Press, Houston Press, Dallas Journal, Rochester Democrat and Chronicle, Syracuse Post-Standard, Binghamton Press, Boston Record and Advertiser, Washington News and Chicago Herald-American.

Record New York Run for "Wrath"

"The Grapes of Wrath" will complete an eight-week run at the Rivoli theatre in New York on March 21st. This will set a new record for length of run at that theatre, previous record holder being "Wuthering Heights," which ran seven weeks. Darryl F. Zanuck's film version of John Steinbeck's novel also broke the opening day attendance record and set a new high for first week's receipts.

The picture is being shown in several places at advanced prices and in others at the regular scale. Prices were raised at the Fox's Wisconsin in Milwaukee and Parkway in Madison. Regular scale was asked at the Sheboygan, Kenosha and Venetian in Racine and at the Strand in Oshkosh.

On Friday night editors of 34 eastern college newspapers will be guests of Twentieth Century-Fox at a preview of "Johhny Apollo" at the Victoria theatre in Ossining, N. Y. The film stars Dorothy Lamour and Tyrone Power. Ossining was chosen for the preview because of its proximity to Sing Sing prison, where part of the story is centered. New York newspapermen, syndicate writers and trade paper representatives also will attend the special showing.

The college editors will be quartered at the St. Moritz hotel. On Saturday they will be guests of the film company at a performance of the musical comedy "Too Many Girls." Some of the visiting editors will be invited to participate in a special broadcast arranged for Sunday morning by the Collegiate Public Relations Bureau of CBS.

"Pinocchio" Easter Dates

Ned E. Depinet announced that there will be approximately 300 Easter Week engagements for Walt Disney's "Pinocchio." Every available print has been booked into the most important key towns and the number of day-and-date runs will reach a new high for any production in the company's history, according to Mr. Depinet.

Because of continued exhibitor opposition and the necessity of clearing theatres of children who stay through for repeat performances, "Pinocchio" no longer will be sold on a single bill policy, an announcement from Roy Disney said in Hollywood Wednesday.

"Pinocchio" has been held over in all regular engagements outside of resort towns. The film is in its fifth week at the Center, N. Y.; fourth at Hillstreet and Pantages, Los Angeles; second week at the Great Lakes, Buffalo. It played two weeks at the Criterion, Oklahoma City and at the Stuart, Lincoln, Neb. Over 25 circuits have booked the picture. The Feiber and Shea Circuit is the 26th major chain which has booked the Disney cartoon.

Campaign on "'Til We Meet Again"

Warner Brothers are arranging a national fan magazine advertising campaign for "'Til We Meet Again," starring Merle Oberon and George Brent, with Pat O'Brien, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Binnie Barnes and Frank McHugh. The ads are to appear in the May issues of 15 national fan magazines which go on sale April 1st.

The home office of Warner Brothers has cabled Australia for details on the ban on "The Fighting 69th" by the Commonwealth Film Censor.

Protests on "Cavell"

Protests by German consulates and other official Reich sources against the exhibition of "Nurse Edith Cavell" are becoming increasingly numerous in South and Central America. RKO and its sales representatives in Latin America, in some instances with the aid of the State Department, have averted official bans. In Chile and Costa Rica the governments recently rescinded a prohibition of the film, caused by German protests.

FIVE WOMEN WITH METRO 20 YEARS

They are Marion Ryan, Buffalo office manager; Adeline Kerr, Chicago office manager's secretary; May L. Cassidy, Denver cashier; Mary Vaughn, St. Louis chief inspector, and Effa Baxter, Cleveland chief inspector.

Spellman of New York, who has been given authority to decide whether it will be shown in the United States.

The Vatican, however, has imposed certain restrictions, namely: That the 550-foot film be screened in its entirety wherever shown and not be inserted in any other newsreel.

Edgar Smith has been reelected president of the Gulf Theatre, Tampa, Fla., employees' credit union at the annual meeting of the board. INCOME DOWN 10 TO 15%, BRITISH DEMAND LOWER RENTALS AND TAXES

Proposal to Ration Entertainment Brings Up Single Feature Issue Again; and the Unions Want a Raise

by AUBREY FLANAGAN

in London

With a new official year for the British exhibitor underway this month, problems more difficult than ever face him, demanding even more wisdom and concentrated effort than is the norm.

Most of these problems, not excluding that of the Quota, which is only superficially political, are economic. Not war alone, but trade conditions which had gathered force before September, 1939, have impelled this new concern. War, however, with its disorganization of the machinery of the industry, has aggravated some of the problems and created new ones. So it is that in the next twelve months the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association will be called upon to tackle what many believe to be the institution of a new system of trade economics.

Demand Lower Rentals

The foremost standard in the ranks of the exhibitor battalions is that labelled "rentals." Already the exhibitors note that the first job, and the most important, will be bringing down the level of film hire. National discontent and regional demands put this on the agenda of the new General Council for its first 1940 meeting.

Second in urgency is the expressed need for a reduction in the theatre tax, a necessity if the picture house operator is to deal with rising commodity costs and labor demands for war bonuses. To these must be added the not much less urgent matters of rating valuations, undoubtedly affected by the changed conditions of living and trading, of restrictions, rendered frequently ridiculous by the blackout, and not least of all by the present and intensifying film shortage.

Income Down 10 to 15 Per Cent

Official exhibitor circles assess the drop in income at least 10 per cent on prewar. Less rosily-bespectacled mathematicians, mainly of circuit origin, say it is a drop of 50 per cent. While the losses in evacuated areas frequently may be balanced by the increased takings in those areas termed "reception," there probably still remains a general deficit on the pre-war receipts of between 10 and 15 per cent. To this consideration must be added the increased cost of operation which, with the rise in the prices of raw materials and commodities generally, has put up overheads by a figure varying between 17½ and 20 per cent. Influenza, laryngitis and German measles epidemics have not helped the exhibitor to smile any more broadly while pondering on his problems.

One policy which has been considered in the councils of the trade, and, with the decrease in available product, will be considered more widely and more seriously is that of rationing entertainment. With limits imposed all round on the consumption of certain commodities, many exhibitors are saying that it would be politic to ration the films they give their patrons. Thus the single feature program has come again to the forefront of discussion.

It has been explained that there are complex reasons why the exhibitor does not find it economic to put up the price of his seats unless he is granted an equivalent cut in the theatre tax. Concentration now is on persuading Sir John Simon that it would be not only fair but economic to do this. The budget is not due just yet. Meanwhile CEA campaigners are bent on proving to Sir John that if he conceded a cut in the tax on lower priced seats and adjusted it on the higher priced tickets, he would more than make up on the swings what he would lose on the roundabouts.

Granted an adjustment of the tax the exhibitor would find it less difficult to meet the nation-wide demands for a wage increase—war bonus—for his employees. Exhibitor groups have discussed these demands all over the country. Already at least one group, London, has given pretty clear indication to the Union that it is sympathetic towards the demand, and is negotiating on a basic minimum. In others an attitude of adamantine opposition is obvious. At least it is notable that the men's union, the National Association of Theatrical and Kine Employees, has made it a national matter.

URGE 10% START FOR EXHIBITORS QUOTA

The foremost plank in the exhibitor platform facing the Government's new legislation is a demand that the starting level of exhibitor quota be not higher than 10 per cent. It is flanked by demands that the principle of investment in a cooperative production scheme should not debar the investor from blind-booking films, and that acquisition of British cinemas be limited to Britishers.

Chief concern is expressed by the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association at the need for ensuring a steady and increasing production. The Credit Bank is welcomed, but comment is reserved pending details. The estimate of 60 films in the first year of any new legislation is regarded as "too sanguine"; 40 is seen nearer the mark.

On the monetary quota as planned for American operation, the CEA doubts that the Board of Trade would accept as adequate the suggested 14 films a year from the seven majors. They point out that the Americans have sponsored 33 films in ten months, which, with 18 others, brings the full total to only 51 quota productions. With 40 compulsory films, and 40 aided by the credit bank, they think it reasonable to rely only on 80 pictures in all.

Therefore, since it was under an estimate of 100 films in the first year of the 1938 act that exhibitors quota was set at 12½ per cent, they argue that in this first year of new legislation it should not exceed 10 per cent, and there should be a fair margin of choice.

Fearing the use of frozen credits in the acquisition of British cinemas, they ask safeguards.

Amendment of the blind-booking clauses to permit operation of cooperative schemes also is canvassed.

Calls Problems Peculiar

Charles Metcalfe of the Leeds Branch, an erstwhile president of the CEA, eloquently has pointed out the fundamental differences between the film industry and any other. "No other trades," said Mr. Metcalfe, "had such a problem to face. The prices of beer, wine, spirits, tobacco, tea, sugar, et cetera, could all be increased without any corresponding increase in duty. . . . Any increase of prices would entail the increase of taxes too. . . . Patrons might decide that instead of paying any increase they would effect an economy by resorting to lower-priced seats."

Mr. Metcalfe, a politically-minded campaigner, looking over the wider field, commented: "Sectional increases of prices or wages bore unfairly on those who did not participate in them. If wages and prices had been fixed at pre-war levels—as house rents were—subject only to the usual seasonal increases, there would have been no justification for increases of prices of any home products."

Terms Called Exacting

The rentals problem however, though wartime conditions have aggravated it, traces back to a longer distance. Film hire terms, it is claimed, have been too exacting for some time. More and more films are being rented at the 50 per cent rate, films which, it is suggested, do not merit the financial distinction.

The discontents, who are by no means a lone minority, claim that many films which are rented in the United States at 25 per cent are the subject of a 50 per cent demand here. It is believed here, too, that an American exhibitor can book a whole program on a 25 per cent basis, though both films when distributed here cost the English exhibitor 50 per cent each, booked singly of course. To the distributor contention that English running costs are lower, the reply is given that the purchasing power of the dollar and that of the pound are vastly different, that, though wages are higher, commodities in general cost twice as much in the States.

More Distribution in U. S.

Wider distribution in the United States of high grade films and the consequent increase in British production is understood to be one of the aims of the new Government export program.

It is understood that revenues derived from the release in the United States of pictures produced by American interests in England may be retained in the United States.

Such films would be released in the United States under the reciprocity clauses of the Flms Act.

An initial step is the formation of an Exports Council, under the chairmanship of Sir Andrew Rae Duncan, president of the British Board of Trade.

Audience Limitation Dropped

West End film houses which had to limit their audiences to 2,000 during the blackout hours, may now increase that number, provided no standing is allowed.

Sir William Brass has been appointed chairman of the British Film Institute. He succeeds Sir George Clark. Thelma Cazalet has been elected to take over Sir William's previous post as Board of Trade nominee on the governing board of the Institute.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Young Blood

Not true in Hollywood is the cry heard loud and long in the land that no frontiers are left for youth, that only nepotism or death affords the generation emerging from the country's schools or colleges a chance at success. Today, behind desks marked Executive on the lots of the eight major studios, sit some 50 men and women under the age of 35—editors, writers, director, producers.

Included are four story editors, more than a dozen writers, nine directors, 15 producers, and representatives of talent and music departments, as well as a studio manager and a studio advertising and publicity director.

The percentage of young men holding down the post of story editor is considerable, both in studio and home office. William James Fadiman. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer eastern story editor, has held the same position for Columbia and Samuel Goldwyn, as well as having been general manager of the Leland Hayward agency. Richard Halliday, Paramount's story editor, had been that company's eastern editor prior to assuming the job on the Coast. Samuel Marx, who recently resigned as Columbia story editor, in order to enter production, has been an editor for a decade. At Universal, Leonard Cripps has succeeded to the editorship just left by Marshall Grant, now an associate producer.

Among the younger writers are Paramount's Robert Carson, Academy Award winner; Steve Fisher, who wrote the story on which "Typhoon" was based; Virginia Van Upp, who wrote "Honeymoon in Bali"; Hal Roach's Mickel Novak; Owen Crump, of Warners; Columbia's Claude Binyon, whose latest is "Too Many Husbands"; Karen de Wolf, Al Duffy, now working on the next in the "Blondie" series; Lew Metzler and George Seatin. Jack Jungmeyer, Jr., and Edith Skouras are collaborating on stories for Twentieth-Fox, and Norman Krasna continues to write for RKO and other producers.

Formerly writers, Irving Reis and Vincent Sherman have turned to direction, Reis at RKO and Sherman at Warners.

Robert Sinclair, MGM director, came to pictures from the stage, his latest stage play having been "The Philadelphia Story," with Katharine Hepburn. His most recent film was "Joe and Ethel Turp Call on the President." S. Sylvan Simon's last was "Dancing Co-Ed," also at MGM. Young directors at RKO include Frank Woodruff, Jack Hively and Garson Kanin, whose first picture was "A Man to Remember," the latest "Bachelor Mother."

Paramount's Edward Dmytryk had been a film editor before becoming a director. At that company, also, is Kurt Neumann. Henry Koster, at Universal, has directed four of Deanna Durbin's seven pictures.

(This is the first of two studies of younger members of the industry. The second will appear in a forthcoming issue.)

PRODUCTION IN UPSWING

A burst of activity descended upon Hollywood's studios this week, and accounted for nine pictures finished, three more than last week. Started were six, one less than the week before, while 32 were shooting, against 35 last week; 20 were being prepared, one less than in the preceding period, and 60 were being edited, three more than in the earlier week.

Completed were "The Man Who Would Not Die", Columbia; "And One Was Beautiful" and "Dr. Kildare's Girl", Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; "Son of the Navy" and an untitled "Renfrew" subject, Monogram; "Our Town", Principal Productions, for United Artists release; "The Saint Takes Over", RKO Radio; "La Conga Nights", Universal, and "An Angel from Texas", Warner Brothers.

Columbia started "Dead Man's Isle", MGM "Boom Town", Monogram "Tom Boy", Paramount "North West Mounted Police", Republic "Women in War" and Universal "I Can't Give You Anything but Love, Baby".

MGM continued to lead in the number of pictures shooting, with eight, while Paramount had three, RKO one, Republic three, Hal Roach (for United Artists release) one, Edward Small (also for UA release) one, Twentieth Century-Fox three, Universal two, and Warners four.

Invites Students

In a movement directed toward the building of goodwill and closer cooperation between producers and schools, students and parents, Wesley Ruggles has invited the class in dramatics of the University of Arizona to spend two instruction periods a week witnessing the production of Columbia's "Arizona" at a reproduction of a village near Tucson. Ruggles will produce and direct the picture.

The plan includes the allotment of an hour or two by the producer on those evenings for lecturing on the work and the reasons for the methods of operation. Impromptu discussions will follow, with the players participating.

Ruggles also has agreed to direct the university's drama class in an abbreviated version of the film, the final performance to be given in the university auditorium before the film unit leaves Tucson.

SAYS 98% OF TEXAS OWNERS OPPOSE NEELY

Mrs. McClure in Chicago Calls Bill Discriminatory; Louisville Council Withdraws Backing

Roy L. Walker, independent exhibitor of Texas, president of the Theatre Owners Protective Association, reported this week that in a survey of the theatres in Texas, out of 473 towns in which theatres are operating, 401 towns have signed up opposing the Neely Bill, eight are reported for the bill, and 64 are unreported.

Out of a total of 899 theatres in these towns, 789 have signed protesting passage of the bill, 17 have reported for the bill and 93 are unreported.

A total of 86.4 per cent of the towns operating in Texas have been contacted and of this number 98 per cent have signed petitions protesting against the bill. 88.5 per cent of the houses in operation have been contacted and 97.8 per cent of the shows have reported against the bill. The towns unreported are all less than 5,000 population and 38 of these towns have a population of 1,000 or less.

In connection with this survey, the Theatre Owners Protective Association reorganized and its reorganization provided for 21 directors, one to be elected from each Congressional District. A majority of the directors must at all times be independent theatre owners. Meetings were held in various Congressional Districts. The following were elected directors for 1940: F. L. Wolf, Clarksville; Julius Gordon, Beaumont; C. H. Cox, Gilmer; Harold Robb, Dallas; R. J. O'Donnell, Dallas; George Chatmus, Hearne; O. L. Smith, Alto; F. D. Wilke, Houston; L. O. Wallace, Bay City; Tom White, Burnet; J. C. Chatmus, Marlin; C. W. Sadler, Weatherford; W. J. Wilke, Graham; H. A. Daniel, Seguin; D. J. Young, Brownsville; Roy Pringle, Fabens; M. D. Cook, Strawn; W. J. Wooten, Canyon; Herschel Crawford, Slaton; J. J. Jiminez, San Antonio; Henry Reeves, Menard.

Clubwoman Attacks Bill

Other trade practices are worse than block-booking, according to Mrs. Richard M. McClure, president of the Better Films Council of Chicago. Although Mrs. McClure did not ask the members of the organization to take any stand on the bill, except after a careful study, she gave her own personal views.

"I concluded," she said, "that the Neely bill is not a remedial measure but a discriminatory piece of legislation which, if enacted, cannot be enforced without government regulation. Such legislation is dangerous and cannot but develop additional chaos in an industry which is now faced with grave problems."

After the members of the Better Film Council have considered the bill and talked it over with theatremen and read material on the measure, they were asked to send a letter to their Congressman giving reasons for backing or opposing the Neely bill.

Mrs. McClure said that the Bill would increase prices because an exhibitor could not purchase films on a wholesale basis as is permitted in other industries. She pointed out that while films could be purchased in quantities, the price must be on a single picture basis. The synopsis clause of the Neely bill was also attacked.

Reconsiders Support of Bill

The Better Films Council of Louisville and Jefferson County decided to reconsider its earlier action in endorsing the Neely bill. The decision was made following a talk by George N. Hunt, Jr., local manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who presented arguments against the bill. He pointed out that the bill gave no moral protection or assurance that better pictures would be made. The measure, he said, was merely a proposed law to regulate buying and selling. Mrs. Harry E. Sibley, president of the Better Films Council decided that the whole question should be reconsidered.

Columbus Council Against Bill

The Columbus Motion Picture Council has reversed its former stand and now is opposed to the passage of the Neely bill. Rev. Floyd Faust, president of the council, explained the new position by saying that the council first thought the Neely bill would benefit the small exhibitor and improve standards within the industry. He said that further study of the measure had convinced the group that "passage of the measure would prove highly detrimental to the entire industry." Rev. Faust also said passage of the Neely bill would result in a lowering of quality in films.

Wilbur Attacks Bill's Opponents

The Motion Picture Research Council, headed by Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur of Stanford University, has issued a vigorous denunciation of opposition and propaganda against the Neely bill which would make full-line buying of pictures optional with exhibitors and prohibit compulsory block booking and blind selling of films. The Research Council and Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors, headed by Abram F. Myers, chairman and general counsel, have led the fight for the Neely bill.

Dr. Wilbur declared, "Freedom of choice of films is essential to preserve ideals of American democracy. We have but little chance to escape all sorts of war propaganda these days and we should keep the tremendous influence of the films sensitive to the communities where the films are to be shown."

New Orleans Group for Bill

The Women's Missionary Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church in New Orleans passed a resolution condemning block booking and blind selling and urging the passage of the Neely bill. Block booking and blind selling, according to the resolution, kept "wholesome, educational and worthwhile motion pictures" off theatre screens. Mrs. Maude Turpin, chairman of the publicity committee of the Bureau of Christian Social Relations which circulated the resolution, did not give any specific instances where the trade practices which the group opposed kept films out of the theatres which were "wholesome, educational and worthwhile."

Lederer Heads Merit

Otto Lederer has been elected president of Merit Pictures Corporation, independent distributing organization. Jerome Wilson has been elected vice-president; Etta V. Segall, treasurer, and Samuel Brown, secretary. In line with expansion plans, the company is adding a new program of pictures.

MPTOA'S "REFORM BY CONTRACT"

Continual discussion of late, mostly informal, pointing to a renewed interest in exhibition in reestablishing contact between distributors and exhibitors on a trade practice program, now brings the MPTOA to the fore with the proposal for effecting reforms through license agreements. The proposals that the MPTOA believes each company should put into their contracts, "and which we [MPTOA] are certain will meet with the approval of 99 and 44/100 per cent of the small, independent exhibitors, regardless of party line," include:

"(1) A minimum unconditional option to cancel at least 20 per cent of the pictures licensed on reasonable notice as they are released. The code proposal should be simplified as much as possible for this purpose. Or, as an alternate suggestion, an option to cancel upon reasonable notice one picture out of each group of five or more, in the order of release.

"(2) An option to cancel any picture on reasonable notice which it can be demonstrated is locally offensive on moral, religious or racial grounds. The question of fact, if disputed, can be left to simple arbitration.

"(3) An option to change percentage pictures designated for preferred playdates on reasonable notice that the picture is considered unsuitable in fact for the dates designated, subject to simple arbitration if there is any dispute.

"(4) A provision that no score charge shall be added to the film rental specified in the contract.

"(5) A provision that prices and terms for each picture licensed must be fixed by the distributor not later than the date of the notice of availability.

"(6) A provision that the option to reject pictures on selective contracts must be exercised within 21 days after notice of availability, otherwise the option is void and the picture released in due course to subsequent runs."

O'Connor, general manager of RKO theatres; Leon Netter, Paramount theatres executive; and executives of Warner Brothers including Samuel Schneider, Gradwell L. Sears, Carl Leserman, Mort Blumenstock, Harold Rodner, A. W. Schwalberg, who was general manager of the event, Jules Levy, Ben Kalmenson, Roy T. Haines, Arthur Sachson, Mitchell Rawson, Clayton Bond and Eddie Schnitzer.

On his two month tour of Columbia's branches in South America, J. A. McConville, foreign manager, arrived Tuesday in Santiago and was met by the territorial supervisor, Louis Goldstein. Both of them will proceed overland to Argentina, where conferences with branch managers will be held. From Argentina, Mr. McConville makes his return trip by boat, stopping over at Uruguay, Brazil and the British West Indies before arriving in New York about the middle of April.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

The New York Daily Worker, Communist mouthpiece in the U.S., discovers great devastation in Hollywood. Motion picture distributors and exhibitors out in the field have been contributing much of their time and pocketbooks putting on benefits for memorials and for the Finns, for Variety Club benefits, and other charities and drives in droves, yet its own cinema brethren and sistren in Hollywood have been wallowing in great distress, starving—we have the Communist Worker's word for it.

The newspaper sent Mike Quin, writer, to investigate at first hand. "When I arrived the studios had been idle for three months," Mike Quin wrote. "Thousands of ordinary workers in the industry had pawned their possessions, sold their furniture, sent their wives and kids home to roost with their families, and borrowed all the money off each other that anybody had. Families were doubling up in houses and single men were flopping on the front room couches of friends."

Quin found "one man sitting amidst a splendid library in a handsome overstuffed chair praying to God the studios would give him a call before his unemployment insurance ran out." He found "two families living in a dream house—all modern and perfect. Both families were on relief and slept at night with their feet in each other's faces."

Quick, Mr. WPA Administrator, send relief, send food, send more needles.

Still a little early for the U. S. newsreels to receive shots of the Russians' infantry equipment in the Finnish War, but Edwin Hartridge, Columbia Broadcasting correspondent in Helsinki, nominates the inventor of the gadget for the Rube Goldberg prize. It's an infantry-attack-shield that almost completely hinders movement of the user. In fact, said Hartridge, he has about one chance in ten of escaping injury or death. Nobody, even the Russians, seem to have figured how to make use of the gadget. The infantry shield resembles a small iron snowplough, about three feet wide at the base and mounted on a pair of skis. The Russian soldier is forced to push it along in deep snow, while crawling on his stomach. The shield weighs about 100 pounds and Hartridge says it's no joke to move across a snowy field and then try to revive enough to take a pot shot at the enemy through the peephole.

Quite appropriate at this time of dawning Presidential campaign arguments, of the continuing Hitler-Chamberlain verbal exchanges, is the title of a new Columbia comedy: "To Beef or Not to Beef."

Leonard Lyons, conductor of The Lyons Den in the New York Post, tells the Hollywood story about the accident at the Paramount studio the other night when all the lights in the town went out because of a faulty power-line from Boulder Dam. It happened during a press showing of "The Road to Singapore," and the audience remained in darkness for half an hour. Finally, the press agent in charge arose with great disgust and told the reviewers: "The hell with it, boys, Crosby gets the girl—let's go home."

Then there's Lyons' story concerning Truman Talley, head of Fox Movietonews, who returned the other day from a European trip. Seems that Talley visited the Maginot Line for one week and there received not only a silver medallion commemorating his trip, but also a "gold" bracelet, on which was inscribed his name and address. "This certainly is a nice gesture," Talley acknowledged. "This lovely bracelet, with my name and address on it. It's so nice of you" . . . "But it's the customary thing," Talley was assured, "so that in case your arm is blown off, the finder will know where to send it."

Leap year works out all right for some persons who are already married. Take, for instance, the case of R. W. "Bob" Huffman, city manager of Lincoln Theatres Corporation, Lincoln, Neb., who was approached by W. P. Dietz, Station KFOR radio time salesman, for renewal of Lincoln Theatres' radio period. It features Barney Oldfield, Sunday Journal and Star movie editor, in five minutes of nightly Hollywood gab. RKO Radio formally records, for the non-benefit of competitors, its intention to produce "Captain Kidd," with Charles Laughton doing the pirate. A most promising decision, we'd say, dealing, as it does, with one William Kidd, privateer and pirate in the last part of the 17th century, who started out respectably enough. In 1691 he received an award of 150 English pounds from the Council of New York for his services during the disturbances in the Colony, and was commissioned to chase a hostile privateer off the Coast. He served against the French in the West Indies and in 1695 went to London with a trading sloop of his own. He next received the King's commission to arrest and bring to trial all pirates, and for this purpose sailed to Madagascar. Instead of pursuing pirates, though, he turned pirate and plundered on the coast of Malabar. After three years of piratical life, he was apprehended, brought to trial in London and was hung by the neck 'til it broke.

> "Mae West, of "Come up and see me some time" fame (and now of Universal Pictures' 'My Little Chickadee'), made her first appearance at the age of five in a church social."

Not all the atrocity stories come from overseas. Take a look at what the men's hat industry perpetrated in Chicago the other day, and presumably intends to scourge the nation with throughout the year, clear through to exhibition and production in motion pictures, to Will Hays, to Thurman Arnold, and all others:

New styles in male headgear were unveiled, with much flourish, at the conclave of the National Association of Retail Clothiers and Furnishers. They include:

1. An affair that looked like a charlotte russe, with a peacock feather replacing the cherry.
2. Something with long brown whiskers fastened to a curling bouquet of plumage at least ten inches long.
3. An emerald number like the Swiss yodelers wear, with the smallness of the feather at the front compensated by a bunch of pale grapes at the stern.
4. A beribboned brown grassy hummock surrounded by a foot or so of wilting brim.
5. A confection which, in the apt phrase of a feminine reporter for the Chicago Tribune, resembled a sewing basket of rough straw enhanced by a dainty little felt brim.

The vagaries of giveaways are perhaps best exemplified as viewed at "Farmers' Day" staged at the Plaza theatre in Burlington, Wis., operated by Jack Yeo, when a man received a finger wave and a woman was the lucky winner of an ax. REPUBLIC GROSS UP 7½%; "U" GAIN IS ESTIMATED

Universal's Net Earnings for Quarter Reported at $300,000; Two Annual Meetings

Republic Pictures' 1939 gross income increased 7½ per cent over 1938, Herbert J. Yates, president of Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., said this week in his annual report to stockholders. The report also showed that Consolidated's net income for 1939 increased over that of 1938, and that its investment in its subsidiary, Republic, remained the same as when it was made in 1937.

Consolidated's stockholders are to hold their annual meeting on March 28th in New York, with reelection of the directors expected.

$300,000 Universal Net Estimated

Wall Street estimated that Universal Picture's first quarter net earnings will be $300,000, nearly double the period last year. Universal's stockholders were to meet on Friday in Wilmington, Del., with directors scheduled for reelection.

Mr. Yates named Republic's gross income in 1939 at approximately $7,960,000. In 1938 it was $7,373,972. Consolidated's net income for 1939 was $628,297. In 1938 it was $616,696.

He said Consolidated was continuing the financing and production of Republic Pictures "from which this company derives, and which enables it to maintain, a large volume of laboratory work and accessories." The year 1939 showed "further progress and expansion of the organization and business of Republic," he said.

Consolidated's 1939 earnings are equivalent to $1.57 a share on 400,000 shares of preferred stock outstanding, compared with $1.54 in 1938. The company's net sales were $7,409,452 in 1939; $8,799,875 in 1938, including sales of the American Record Corporation. Stock in that company was sold to the Columbia Broadcasting System in December, 1938.

The net sales in 1939 were approximately $500,000 higher, exclusive of American Record.

The net income, before federal income taxes, for 1939, was $758,297; for 1938 they were $731,696. This increase was recorded in the face of increased labor costs.

Consolidated's current assets, on December 31st, last, were $5,973,226, including $461,897 in cash. Current liabilities were $1,790,233.

This compares with the current assets of $5,076,657, cash of $368,908 and current liabilities of $1,235,989 on Dec. 31, 1938.

Arrearages on the 400,000 shares of $2 cumulative preferred stock are $3,200,000, equal to $8 a share.

SEC's January Report

With the exception of a series of sales of common voting trust certificates of Universal Corporation by William Frieday, New York, director, totaling 2,800 and reducing his holdings to 100, and the acquisition of 10,000 Universal common voting trust certificate warrants by Nathan J. Blumberg, New York, officer, under an employment agreement, representing his entire current holdings in that class, no large transactions by officers or directors of film companies in the securities of their corporations are shown in the first January summary of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The next largest transactions reported were the disposition, by gift, of 500 shares of Keith Albee Orpheum convertible preferred stock by Michael J. Meehan, New York, beneficial owner, reducing his holdings to 26,004 shares; the acquisition of 500 shares of Trans-Lux Corporation common stock by Leslie E. Thompson, New York, director, as compensation, bringing his holdings to 4,500 shares, and the disposition of 300 shares of Twentieh Century-Fox common stock by Sidney R. Kent, New York, officer, reducing his holdings to 3,155 shares.

The only other film transaction reported were the acquisition of 100 shares of General Theatres Equipment common stock by Robert L. Clarkson, New York, director, representing his entire holdings; disposition by gift of 100 shares of Loew's, Inc., common stock by J. Robert Rubin, New York, officer, reducing his holdings to 29,918 shares; and the acquisition of three shares of Pathe Film common stock by Thomas P. Loach, New York, officer, bringing his interest to 16 shares.

A report on Columbia Broadcasting System showed the disposition by gifts of 170 shares of Class B stock by Leon Levy, Philadelphia, director, reducing his holdings to 42,932 shares, and 506 shares of Class A and 15 shares of Class B stock by Isaac D. Levy, Philadelphia, director, reducing his holdings to 61,475 shares of A and 22,819 shares of B stock.

Disney Stock Offering

Walt Disney Productions on Wednesday applied to the Securities and Exchange Commission for the registration of the first public stock offering in the Disney enterprise which heretofore has been wholly in the hands of the Disney family. The offering comprises 155,000 shares of six per cent convertible preferred stock, of $25 par value, and 155,000 common shares of par value $5, the whole to be underwritten by Kidder, Peabody and Company, and Harriman, Ripley and Company, in New York, and by the Pacific Capital Corporation. Some $4,030,000 is estimated to be the return from the preferred stock.

Walt Disney's company has been self and privately financed for 17 years. Big budgets and a new $3,000,000 studio now under construction at Burbank, are said to have dictated the new move. Last year's earnings of the company are said to have been more than $1,250,000.

Consolidated Corporation, formed in 1938, with an authorized capital stock of $2,000,000, is the Disney holding corporation.

Western Electric Dividend

Income from operations was $969,856. Income from several tenants is determined by the tenant's gross receipts. The cash on hand December 31st last, totalled $38,080, and accrued liabilities $90,527. Property and equipment is listed at $10,949,885. The total deficit, on that date, was reported as $756,689. The deficit on the same date in 1938, was $537,364.

Sonotone $252,559 Net

The Sonotone Corporation, manufacturers of apparatus, to decrease deafness, used in theatres and elsewhere, reports a net income of $252,559, for the year ended December 31st, 1939. This is equal, after preferred dividends, to 31 cents a share (par $1) on 788,878 shares of common stock.

In 1938, the company had a net profit of $242,902, or 30 cents a share on 789,178 common stock shares.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

AMAZING MR. WILLIAMS, THE: Melvyn Douglas, Joan Blondell—The previous Douglas-Blondell comedies went over very well here and this one adds considerably to their future draw. It is a fast moving comedy with some extremely funny moments in it. The part where Douglas dresses as a woman nearly brought the house down. The receipts were higher than I expected, as the snow is still in a great plenty around here. Running time, 86 minutes. Played February 23.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

BLONDIE TAKES A VACATION: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—Played with "Fast and Furious." We did a nice business on this double program matinee, Sunday, February 25th, but it dropped badly at night, giving us as a whole just a fair or little below average for the day. "Blondie Takes a Vacation" is up to the standard of the Blondie pictures. (See report on "Fast and Furious" for remarks on radio appearances of screen stars).—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

HIS GIRL FRIDAY: Cary Grant, Rosalind Russell, Ralph Bellamy—This was very well liked. Rosalind Russell and Cary Grant are very good. Customers liked it. Played February 11-13.—Emmett F. Roche, Hart Theatre, Hart, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

LADY AND THE MOB, THE: Fay Bainter, Ida Lupino, Lee Bowman—This picture is light material and will not do business alone. Running time, 66 minutes. Played March 1-2.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON: James Stewart, Jean Arthur, Edward Arnold, Claude Rains, Thomas Mitchell, Guy Kibbee, Eugene Pallette—An outstanding picture from any angle. My only criticism is that it ended too abruptly. "Mr. Smith" should have been shown returning in triumph to his home town. Having seen this at a special showing and several times at this theatre, the work of the players impressed me to the extent that I nominate James Stewart for tbe Academy Award and Claude Rains for the award of supporting player. Of course, everyone connected with the making of this is entitled to some sort of an award. By the time this appears in print the awards will have been made public but as this is being written, I have no knowledge as to who the winners are. This picture drew above average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

MUSIC IN MY HEART: Tony Martin, Rita Hayworth. Edith Fellows—A fine little midweek programmer. That's where we put it and did OK. Tony Martin's acting is very much improved and his singing is tops. Rita is also very nice to look at and the film boasts a song hit, "It's a Blue World." Running time, 70 minutes. Played February 13-14. —J. Harry Abbott, Grant Theatre, Georgetown, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

WESTERN CARAVANS: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith, Sons of the Pioneers—Unusually poor business for a western in spite of best weather in three weeks. Played February 3.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

First National

CASTLE ON THE HUDSON: Pat O'Brien, John Garfield, Ann Sheridan, Burgess Meredith—Good picture; good business. This compares favorably with "Angels With Dirty Faces," "The Roaring Twenties" and "Dust Be My Destiny." Running time, 77 minutes. Played February 25-26.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DUST BE MY DESTINY: John Garfield, Priscilla Lane—Our customers liked this one and told us about it when they came out. Garfield is certainly cut out for a role of this kind and Miss Lane comes in for her share of credit. The court room scene at the end of the picture was very well done and the ladies in our audience all enjoyed a good cry but they seemed to like it. Running time, 88 minutes. Played February 18-20.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

DUST BE MY DESTINY: John Garfield, Priscilla Lane—This picture pleased everyone and presented a splendid thought. It is pictures like these that will make the nation as a whole realize the truth about many existing situations of graft and misunderstanding. Let's have more of them. I am sure they do much good. Running time, 88 minutes. Played March 1-2.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

OLD MAID, THE: Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, George Brent, Jane Bryan—A fine picture. Excellent performance by Davis but the plot seemed a bit thin. Everything hinged on one point that was possible but not probable. Period duplication, costuming and direction I thought were very well done. Running time, 95 minutes. Played February 18-20.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

OLD MAID, THE: Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, George Brent, Jane Bryan—She may be a great actress but Ozarkians want shootin', not actin'. Running time, 93 minutes. Played February 18-20.—L. Woody, Jr., Palace Theatre, Golden City, Mo. Very small town and rural patronage.

PRIVATE DETECTIVE: Jane Wyman, Dick Foran—A good little action picture which seemed to please. Running time, 55 minutes. Played February 22-24.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BAD LITTLE ANGEL: Virginia Weidler, Gene Reynolds—A dandy little picture, not big, but will please the masses. Would recommend double billing on Friday-Saturday change. Don't pass it up. Played February 14-15.—Norman Goodin, Goodin Theatre, Carlton, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

BALALAIKA: Nelson Eddy, Ilona Massey, Charles Ruggles, Frank Morgan—Well, I don't know what is wrong but feel that the title and too much Russiaan ruined this wonderful opera. A swell picture but no box office. Feel that the feeling against Russia has a lot to do with it. Run it if you want an exceptional picture but only for a short run and not the best days in the week. Running time, 100 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

CONGO MAISIE: Ann Sothern, John Carroll, Rita Johnson—Another very fine picture, which should add to the "Maisie" series. Picture well received. —Emmett F. Roche, Hart Theatre, Hart, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

FAST AND FURIOUS: Franchot Tone, Ann Sothern—Very fast and peppy. Below average business. Bad weather. Running time, 71 minutes. Played February 15-17.—L. Woody, Jr., Palace Theatre, Golden City, Mo. Very small town and rural patronage.

FAST AND FURIOUS: Ann Sothern, Franchot Tone—Played with "Blondie Takes a Vacation." We did a nice business on this double program matinee, Sunday, February 25th, but it dropped badly at night, giving us as a whole just a fair or little below average for the day. "Fast and Furious" is a fast, snappy picture. Could it be possible that radio competition is hurting our Sunday night's business, especially the Gulf Oil program? Every week in both leading Detroit papers there is a good sized display ad: "Tonight at 7.30 (which is the best theatre hour) WJR-Gulf Screen Guild Theatre (date, Sunday, February 25th) Edward G. Robinson and other stars of note." Sunday, January 14th, Bette Davis and other stars. Sunday, January 28th, Charles Boyer, Claudette Colbert. Sunday, February 11th, Myrna Loy, William Powell,—and so I could go on week after week. Can you imagine what that does to us theatremen during our best show hours of the week? It is like someone building a fine theatre and on the next corner putting up another theatre in which the foremost stars put on a free show in competition with the theatre that charges admission. I understand that the stars appear on the Gulf program free of charge and that the Gulf Company turns over to a Charity Fund ten thousand dollars. But is that a proper excuse for injuring theatres out of many, many times. Wouldn't it be much cheaper for the industry to finance that charity some other way? Talk about biting the hand that feeds you. Here is an industry that rewards its leading workers fabulously and that's how they repay the theatres who made those high salaries possible.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

GONE WITH THE WIND: Clark Gable, Vivien Leigh, Leslie Howard, Olivia de Havilland, Hattie McDaniel—I saw this picture in Bartlesville where it showed for a week to about half a bouse most of the time. I don't think the theatre, which seats about 750, was full at any time. I found it a pretty good double length show, worth about 40 or 50 cents. Running time, 228 minutes.—Played February 25-March 2.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HENRY GOES ARIZONA: Frank Morgan, Virginia Weidler—A swell little western with plenty of comedy and a swell cast. Just a good little show that pleased all. Running time, 67 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

I TAKE THIS WOMAN: Spencer Tracy, Hedy Lamarr, Verree Teasdale, Kent Taylor—After reading an editorial in this week's "Film Bulletin" as follows: "There are two examples of tbis very argument currently on the nation's screens. 'I Take This Woman,' according to the critics, is a waste of Spencer Tracy's talent and Hedy Lamarr's beauty." It was made a year ago, shelved, then remade and released with quite some ballyhoo. Our Hollywood reviewer says it 'should have remained on the shelf,' for the story is a miserable concoction of a lot of nothing." I really believe it necessary to make a few remarks regarding same. So many times reviewers in their reports put a damper on efforts you might make in trying to exploit a picture. Who are these autocrats of the reviewing profession, both radio and magazine writers, that they can condemn pictures for the masses? It may be that the picture was held up and parts remade. Nevertbeless, we ran the picture last Sunday, Monday and Tuesday and it gave general satisfaction to the paying customers; their comment of "swell picture" was more than gratifying. Maybe the story's weak and the acting not up to what some reviewers might expect. Despite this the customers liked it. Did average business with icy roads and a lot of snow. Running time, 97 minutes. Played February 25-27.—Emmett F. Roche, Hart Theatre, Hart, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

IT'S A WONDERFUL WORLD: Claudette Colbert, James Stewart, Guy Kibbee, Nat Pendleton, Edgar Kennedy, Ernest Truex—Apparently MGM made an effort to imitate tbe hilarious "It Happened One Night" in which Miss Colbert was co-starred with Clark Gable. While "It's a Wonderful World" falls short of equalling "One Night," it is a pleasing strip of the "wacky" in motion picture. For example, our boys inform me that the arresting officers never delivered tbem to their present abode, tbat being the duty of the sheriff's office. Miss Colbert, ever satisfying as far as our boys are concerned, gives her usually good performance and James Stewart's fine job as a comedian moves him along another station in the eyes of "our critics." Guy Kibbee, Nat Pendleton and Edgar Kennedy brought plenty of laughs, but the biggest of all came from the inebriate "Willie-the Pooh," alias Ernest Truex. Running time, 86 minutes. Played March 2.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

JOE AND ETHEL TURP CALL ON THE PRESIDENT: Ann Sothern, Lewis Stone, William Gargan, Walter Brennan—I still think this is very good for the smaller bracket it is allocated in. I doubled it with "Gulliver's Travels" and an immense crowd told me how much they liked both of them. This should be one of those rare pictures that will please both city and rural crowds. However, you must depend on something else to draw them in. Continuous chuckles throughout are the reactions of the audiences. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 2. —W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town anad rural patronage.

MARX BROTHERS "AT THE CIRCUS": Marx Brothers, Florence Rice, Kenny Baker—Your Marx Brothers fans will like this but will think it not as good as some of their other pictures. The song about the tattooed lady made the deepest impression here. Personally, I thought it very much below the usual Marx average but the noise from the audience changed my mind. We did well at the box office, which is what counts anyway. They could have omitted the singing to good advantage. Running time, 27 minutes. Played February 24.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college and rural patronage.

WIZARD OF OZ, THE: Judy Garland, Frank Morgan, Ray Bolger, Bert Lahr, Jack Haley, Billie Burke, Margaret Hamilton—Very poor draw in small towns for this kind of picture. Picture is excellent but the crowd won't take it. Played February 13.—John Leveck, P.T.A. Theatre, Benoit, Mass. Rural patronage.

Paramount

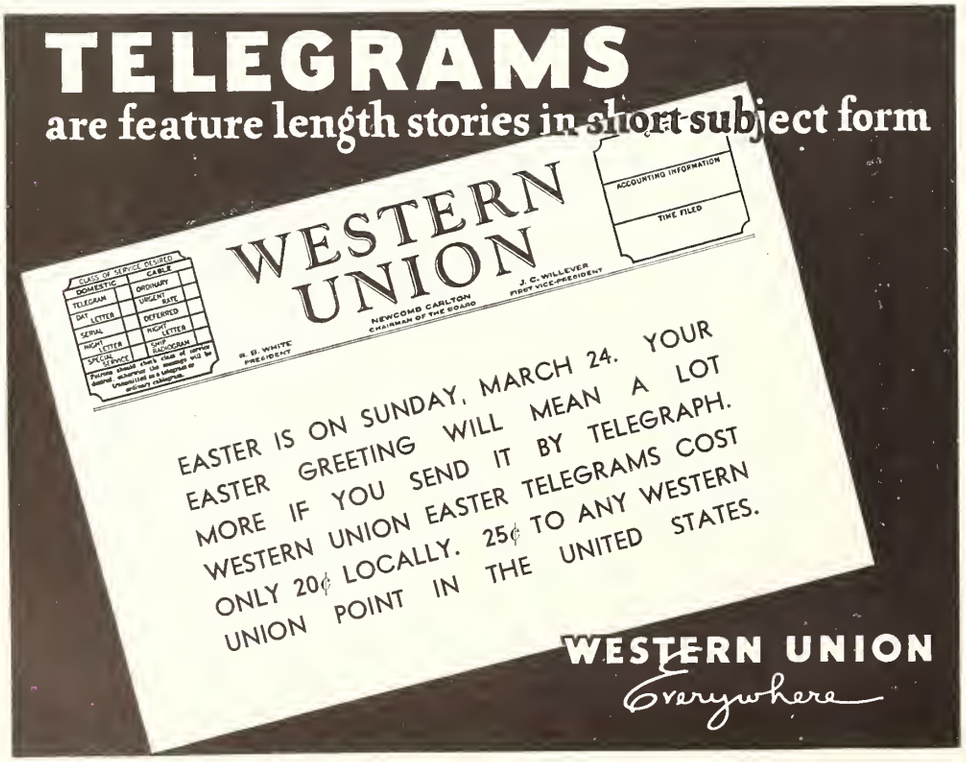
BEACHCOMBER, THE: Charles Laughton, Elsa Lanchester—There is no doubt as to Charles Laughton's ability as an actor but there should be a jail sentence for any film salesman who sells this kind of a picture to a small town situation who depends on patronage for money to keep open. Played February 16-17.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

BEAU GESTE: Gary Cooper, Ray Milland, Robert Preston, Brian Donlevy—Do not make my mistake and play it on Sunday. Business poor. Running time, 110 minutes. Played February 25-27.—L. Woody, Jr., Palace Theatre, Golden City, Mo. Very small town and rural patronage.

GERONIMO: Preston Foster, William Henry, Andy Devine, Ellen Drew—Another big western epic that failed to click for us. No star names to pull at the box office and not enough real old timers to tell of the days of "Geronimo" to the younger generation. Would have made a good Saturday western. Running time, 90 minutes. Played February 4-5.—J. Harry Abbott, Grant Theatre, Georgetown, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

GREAT VICTOR HERBERT, THE: Allan Jones, Mary Martin, Walter Connolly—Who likes to report on a picture like this? You like it personally, very few of your audience do, business is poor, your film rental is much too high for it, and you can't do anything about any of them. It's really a swell picture but definitely did not go here. Even the thoughts of a violin scare my prospective patrons so far it takes a month to get them back. Running time, 91 minutes. Played February 11-12.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Rural and small town patronage.

GULLIVER'S TRAVELS: Color Cartoon Feature —If all pictures grossed as much, I'd be more than satisfied, although it isn't the hit I expected. It is too short; a cartoon feature should be at least 100 minutes long, longer would be better, and they must have more conversation by the principals. After seeing this, practically every adult said it was cute but there wasn't enough to it. "Gabby," "Sneak," "Snoop," "Snitch," in fact, all the principal participants should have been called by their names. "Gulliver" wasn't lifelike. I think the contrast in size hurt more than anything else. I'll never book a cartoon feature that is any shorter than this. The songs were swell; in fact, the only solid reason for adults seeing it. Running time, 79 minutes. Played February 17-19.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Rural and small town patronage.



GULLIVER'S TRAVELS: Color Cartoon Feature—Maybe you fellows are right when you say this is a kid's picture. However, everyone in my town must therefore be a kid because I had the largest one-day crowd in ten years. Everyone liked it and I intend to bring it back. I managed to squeeze an early one-day in on this or I would have booked it two days in the beginning. I would have dusted off the SRO sign only we haven't any. I always thought my place was far too large for the size of the town but it certainly wasn't for this show. Don't compare it with other pictures. In itself, it proved to be grand entertainment and a great drawing card. I ran "Joe and Ethel Turp Call on the President" with it. I couldn't see a thing the matter with "Gulliver" from beginning to end. Running time, 77 minutes. Played March 2.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

HERITAGE OF THE DESERT: Donald Woods, Russell Hayden, Evelyn Venable—Played late but this picture will never get too old to draw as long as they have a good print. Good story, good acting, far ahead of the general run of shoot 'em up westerns. Running time, 74 minutes. Played February 26-27.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

LLANO KID: Tito Guizar, Gale Sondergaard—A good picture but the story is too slow for the western fans. Played with "Should Husbands Work?" Running time, 70 minutes. Played February 29-March 2.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

$1,000 A TOUCHDOWN: Joe E. Brown, Martha Ray—I played this picture old and did not think much of it myself but business was above average on it. The answer is star power, I think. Running time, 73 minutes. Played March 1-2.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

OUR NEIGHBORS—THE CARTERS: Fay Bainter, Frank Craven—Very good family picture for situations similar to mine. Did a nice business and was appreciated by all the patrons. I'm no authority on such matters but would call it a swell job of directing. A plausible story, which few pictures seem to have, and enough comedy to make it good entertainment. Running time, 85 minutes. Played February 2-3.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Rural and small town patronage.

Republic

DAYS OF JESSE JAMES, THE: Roy Rogers, George "Gabby" Hayes—Tried this dandy Rogers western on a midweek booking and did very well. Had a number of patrons comment that the "Jesse James" of this western was much more convincing than our friend Mr. Tyrone Power. Running time, 61 minutes. Played January 30-31.—J. Harry Abbott, Grant Theatre, Georgetown, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

JEEPERS CREEPERS: Weaver Brothers and Elviry, Roy Rogers—Boys, here is a dandy; grab it quick. A positive natural for a small town. Played January 26-27.—Norman Goodin, Goodin Theatre, Carlton, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

VILLAGE BARN DANCE: Lulu Belle and Scotty, Richard Cromwell, Doris Day—Blossomed out with a world premiere on this one, with the stars, Lulu Belle and Scotty, appearing on the stage in person. Made quite a splurge. The picture is good and we were blessed with a fine day after sub-zero weather. Hung out the SRO sign at 1 P.M. and kept it there all day. Now what is worrying me is what I'll ever get to break that house record. Running time, 74 minutes. Played January 28-29.—J. Harry Abbott, Grant Theatre, Georgetown, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

ALMOST A GENTLEMAN: James Ellison, Helen Wood—A fair picture. It is moving enough to hold the attention of an audience. The dog highlights the film. Running time, 65 minutes. Played February 28-29.—Simon Gelitzki. Co-ed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

BACHELOR MOTHER: Ginger Rogers, David Niven, Charles Coburn—I know your adult patrons like to enjoy excellent comedy that they might laugh until their sides hurt and I know you like to provide them with such comedy at least once in a while, so here's a tip: play "Bachelor Mother" if you haven't already done so. Our audience was in stitches for the entire 80 minutes, as one uproarious situation after another was revealed. Miss Rogers, who again proves she can act as well as dance, and David Niven (it was his first appearance as a comedian before our "critical critics") both scored 100% with our audience. To RKO, congratulations and a sincere hope that they will screen many more as light and entertaining as "Bachelor Mother." Running time, 80 minutes. Played February 24.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME, THE: Charles Laughton, Maureen O'Hara, Basil Rathbone, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Thomas Mitchell, Walter Hampden—I saw this picture screened and found it good entertainment. Should please all.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MEXICAN SPITFIRE: Lupe Velex, Leon Errol—A riotous little comedy with Leon Errol in a dual role that had my bargain night crowd rolling in the aisles. Winds up with a good old fashioned custard throwing scene that really brings down the house. Running time, 66 minutes. Played February 1.—J. Harry Abbott, Grant Theatre, Georgetown, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

ROOKIE COP: Tim Holt, Virginia Weidler, Frankie Thomas—A programmer which was satisfactory to the few who attended. Played February 24. —C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BARRICADE: Warner Baxter, Alice Faye—A dud. I understand this one was slated for the top brackets, but it missed fire, and how! The cash customers were in the know on this one so we suffered in silence and solitude. Miss Faye appeared to be as out of place in this picture as a bartender at a Sunday school picnic, and I do not think the picture will help Baxter any. Running time, 71 minutes. Played February 23-24.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK: Henry Fonda, Claudette Colbert, Edna May Oliver—A picture of this type usually does good business in this town but this one failed to draw after the first day. It is a good picture but some parts of it could have been left out. Our patrons do not like too much baby stuff for their entertainment and this feature seemed to have more than necessary. Running time, 103 minutes. Played February 26-28.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK: Claudette Colbert, Henry Fonda, Edna May Oliver—A great picture that should be seen by everyone who calls himself an American. The color was good and the cast did a very convincing job; in fact, too convincing according to some of the ladies in the audience. However, the picture couldn't have been made in any other way and I don't see how it could have been improved on. The only complaint I have is that I couldn't have an early date on it while the weather was good. Running time, 103 minutes.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK: Henry Fonda, Claudette Colbert, Edna May Oliver—Excellent color and good picture, but for some reason failed to draw. Believe people are tiring of this type of picture. Played February 18-20.—Norman Goodin, Goodin Theatre, Carlton, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

HEAVEN WITH A BARBED WIRE FENCE: Jean Rogers, Glenn Ford—Suited the man who pays the film rental, although I didn't expect much when I booked it. Nice down-to-earth story that everyone enjoyed. Business good, considering a basketball tournament. Jean Rogers OK. Running time, 62 minutes. Played February 9-10.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Rural and small town patronage.

HERE I AM A STRANGER: Richard Greene, Brenda Joyce, Richard Dix, Roland Young, Gladys George—This fellow Greene seems to get under the public's skin. He has something we have been waiting for. Good story, good acting. Otherwise very satisfactory. Running time, 83 minutes. Played January 19-20.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, THE: Richard Greene, Basil Rathbone, Wendy Barrie, Nigel Bruce—A picture that pleased but wasn't much of a drawing card. The film seemed to lack the spark that held my interest when I read the book. Photography fine. Running time, 80 minutes. Played February 23-24.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

LITTLE OLD NEW YORK: Alice Faye, Fred MacMurray, Richard Greene, Brenda Joyce—Good picture; good business. Running time, 100 minutes. Played February 28-29.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

QUICK MILLIONS: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—This Jones family is tops here. If the producer would make them about 75 minutes long, they would be better yet. When a crowd don't have plenty of laughs at a Jones Family picture there is something wrong with the crowd. Running time, 62 minutes. Played February 23-24.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

RAINS CAME, THE: Tyrone Power, George Brent, Myrna Loy, Brenda Joyce—This picture went over big with us, and why not? How could you get a better cast and how could you expect more picture? That Joyce girl is about the best find of the year and unless something slips she will be tops. Running time, 104 minutes. Played February 9-10.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

SECOND FIDDLE: Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power, Rudy Vallee, Edna May Oliver—This was a very fine picture all the way. This star has never failed to draw here and has helped to keep us going. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 3-4.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

SUSANNAH OF THE MOUNTIES: Shirley Temple, Randolph Scott, Margaret Lockwood—This little lady is not the draw she was a year ago and unless Fox digs up something she can make a comeback, she seems to be on the way out. Running time, 72 minutes. Played October 13-14.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville. Kansas. Rural patronage.

20,000 MEN A YEAR: Randolph Scott, Preston Foster, Margaret Lindsay—An average program picture with a good cast. Did not seem to draw in any extra business but pleased the regular patrons. Played with "Private Detective." Running time, 84 minutes. Played February 22-24.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

20,000 MEN A YEAR: Randolph Scott, Preston Foster, Margaret Lindsay, George Ernest—Good entertainment with adequate performances by Scott and Lindsay and another swell job by George Ernest. This boy gets better with every picture. Can you imagine having a picture like this allocated to you in the next to highest group? It was. Running time, 84 minutes. Played February 15-16.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Rural and small town patronage.

United Artists

HOUSEKEEPER'S DAUGHTER, THE: Joan Bennett, Adolphe Menjou—This feature was much enjoyed by my patrons, and a few good laughs and, of course, a very beautiful star. Would recommend this will stand alone. Running time, 80 minutes. Played February 28.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

RAFFLES: David Niven, Olivia de Havilland—Just another entertaining society jewel thief comedy-melodrama that failed to warrant a Sunday playdate. Failed to draw at the box office. Running time, 70 minutes. Played February 11-12.—J. Harry Abbott, Grant Theatre, Georgetown, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

WUTHERING HEIGHTS: Merle Oberon, Laurence Olivier, Geraldine Fitzgerald, David Niven, Flora Robson—This is truly a wonderful picture. Genius of the industry is reflected throughout this production. I find few pictures of this type that can even begin to compare with it. Some failed to understand the film; for those I can only feel sorry, and live in hope that some day they will appreciate it. Here is a picture that will live as long as time itself. Running time, 103 minutes. Played February 25-27.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

ZENOBIA: Oliver Hardy, Harry Langdon, Billie Burke, Alice Brady, James Ellison, June Lang, Jean Parker—Can't say much for this picture. They have taken comedy material, it seems to me, and attempted to stretch it out feature length. Sequences were very unrelated. Might be all right for some houses but not here. Running time, 73 minutes. Played February 23-24.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre. Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

Universal

BIG TOWN CZAR: Barton MacLane, Tom Brown—Business continues poor. Program generally pleased. Played February 17.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

CALL A MESSENGER: Billy Hallop, Huntz Hall, Mary Carlisle, Larry Crabbe—Cannot give much of a comment on this picture as it did not amount to much. Would suggest playing it on a week end. Running time, 65 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DESTRY RIDES AGAIN: James Stewart, Marlene Dietrich, Charles Winninger, Mischa Auer, Brian Donlevy, Una Merkel—Tops for any situation. One of James Stewart's finest performances. Dietrich also very good. Played February 18-20.—Emmett F. Roche. Hart Theatre, Hart, Mich. Small town and rural patronage.

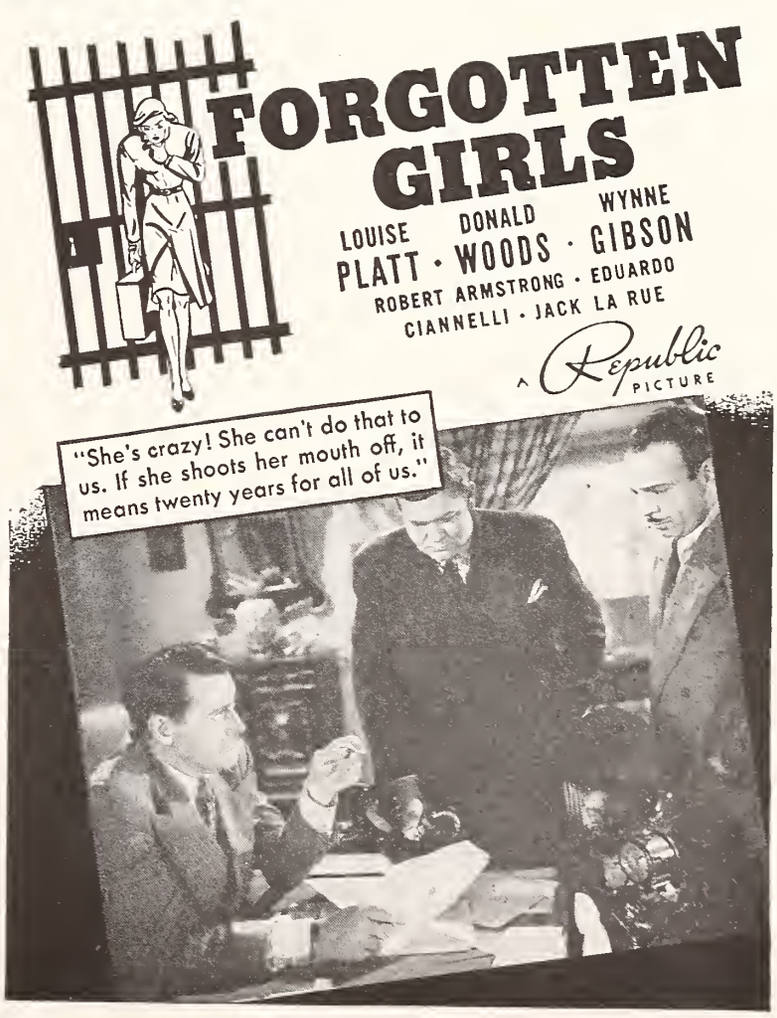
FAMILY NEXT DOOR: Hugh Herbert, Joy Hodges, Juanita Quigley, Eddie Quillan—Opinion divided on this, though for the most part considered good programmer. Business poor. Played February 10.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre. Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

FIRST LOVE: Deanna Durbin, Helen Parrish, Robert Stack, Eugene Pallette, Leatrice Joy—Nice picture. Grossed well and was favorably received by the audience, but would have done 25 per cent more business with a little comedy blended with it. Running time. 84 minutes. Played January 26-27.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Rural and small town patronage.

MIKADO, THE: Kenny Baker, Jean Colin—Dumb! Say, after playing this, I wondered myself how I ever happened to be a theatre operator. Absolutely worthless for rural or small town situations and personally doubt if it ever grossed more than two cents anywhere. Thought I had to use it to fill a date, but if I had it to do over again would rather charge my customers for a single reel cartoon. For myself, I really enjoyed the picture and I was in on a pass. Running time, 91 minutes. Played January 28-29.—Everett Clapp, American Theatre, Sidell, Ill. Rural and small town patronage.

SUN NEVER SETS, THE: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Basil Rathbone—This picture pleased everyone. Held up very well. Plot is well constructed and the acting is good. This type of picture is of special interest at the present time. Running time, 96 minutes. Played February 21-22.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

Warner Brothers



BROTHER RAT AND A BABY: Wayne Morris, Priscilla Lane, Eddie Albert, Jane Bryan, Ronald Reagan, Jane Wyman—Generally not as well liked as "Brother Rat." Wayne Morris is too doggoned silly in his role. All in all a good midweek double biller. As in "Bother Rat" Jane Wyman and Eddie Albert steal the show. Running time, 85 minutes. Played February 9-10.—J. Harry Abbott, Grant Theatre, Georgetown, Ohio.—Small town and rural patronage.

CHILD IS BORN, A: Geraldine Fitzgerald, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George—Was out of town on this one but did almost double our regular business. Appealed especially to women patrons and was well received. Running time, 79 minutes. Played February 6-7.—J. Harry Abbott, Grant Theatre, Georgetown, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

DEAD END KIDS ON DRESS PARADE: "Dead End Kids," John Litel—A "B" flat. Running time, 59 minutes. Played February 22-24.—L. Woody, Jr., Palace Theatre, Golden City, Mo. Very small town and rural patronage.

DEAD END KIDS ON DRESS PARADE: "Dead End Kids," John Litel—Nice little picture which pleased those who came to see it. Ran on a Wednesday and Thursday, however, and the take was very poor. It seems that nothing will induce small town people to go to the show in midweek and I guess that is why the producers insist on a Sunday playdate for the percentage pictures. Maybe we should have Mr. Roosevelt move Sunday to the middle of the week. Running time, 62 minutes. Played February 21-22.—H.

Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

DODGE CITY: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Ann Sheridan, Bruce Cabot, Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, Victor Jory—Played this very late, but what a picture. A good thing they are not all this good or we would have to build bigger theatres or run more shows. Every minute a thrill. Every customer satisfied. Almost a dream come true. Running time, 104 minutes. Played February 2-3.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

PRIVATE LIVES OF ELIZABETH AND ESSEX, THE: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland—My all time low gross record on Sunday, Monday, Tuesday. Played February 11-13.—Norman Goodin, Goodin Theatre, Carlton, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

PRIVATE LIVES OF ELIZABETH AND ESSEX, THE: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland—Excellent color, fine acting and masterful photography make this one of the outstanding pictures of the year for class theatres. The few who came and I thought the above to he true. However, we had very weak husiness with it so there must have been a lot who suspected otherwise. Business would have been worse if it had not been for the college in town. Well, you can't win all the time. Running time, 106 minutes. Played February 29-March 1.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

WATERFRONT: Dennis Morgan, Gloria Dickson, Marie Wilson—Good little action picture; fair business. Running time, 59 minutes. Played February 27.—E. M. Freihurger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Miscellaneous

FIRST FILM CONCERT: World Pictures. Prominent European Artists—At least, this is something new and, if you can attract a crowd of high class music lovers in your district, you might be able to make a little on it. They would like it for a change but would have plenty of suggestions for improving it. There is no plot. A group of artists simply play or sing one after the other and some of them are pretty high class things. I am in a college town but our receipts were too, too slim. If you run an art theatre, it might he worth thinking ahout, though. Running time, 52 minutes. Played February 27.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

MONTMARTRE MADNESS: Music Hall Vanities—Just an average single reel. Running time, one reel.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

OILY TO BED, OILY TO RISE: Three Stooges—Our trade like these comedies. Plenty of laughs and all in all extra fine comedy so far as the audience is concerned. Give it a little billing and do extra husiness. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

THREE SAPPY PEOPLE: Three Stooges—Pie throwing slapstick, but it is good of its kind. Slapstick fans will eat it up, pie and all. Running time, 18 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ART GALLERY: MGM Cartoons—This is an unusually clever color cartoon that was well liked here. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college and rural patronage.

ASH CAN FLEET: MGM Miniatures—A very interesting and timely educational short. Show it, Mr. Theatreowner, that you and your audiences might, as we did, learn about David Bushnell and his "depth bomb," a bad news gadget to submarines. Running time, 11 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

FISHING BEAR, THE: Ising Cartoon—He has made better but we have seen worse. A good colored cartoon. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HOT ON ICE: Pete Smith Specialties—A descriptive analysis of that "sissy game" (who said that?), hockey. How these boys can take it and dish it out, too. Lovers of sport will get a kick out of this one. Running time, eight minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

RHUMBA RHYTHM: MGM Miniatures—We have seen hetter and a lot worse, too. As one might expect, the rhumba dance proved to he the highlight of the short. Running time, 11 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

WHERE TURF MEETS SURF: MGM Miniatures—Another outstanding short from this company. How do they do it? They do not make anything that is poor. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BITS OF LIFE: Paragraphics—These are very short stories with a surprise ending. The first one is well done and clever and cveryone got the point. The second one is rather amateurish and it took three shows for me to get the idea. Maybe I am dumb but so are a lot of others in town. The idea is good but this suhject missed fire somewhere. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college and rural patronage.

GHOSTS IS THE BUNK: Popeye the Sailor—An average cartoon. Not good enough to he a Popeye. Running time, eight minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

IT'S THE NATURAL THING TO DO: Popeye the Sailor—Not too good. Popeye hetter pep up. Running time, eight minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

MUSICAL MOUNTAINEERS: Betty Boop Cartoons—Best Betty Boop in a long time. Running time, eight minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

PARAMOUNT NEWS: Find these newsreels getting poorer. Running time, one reel.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

SONG IS BORN, A: Headliners—This is a nice band short with good singing and should satisfy anyone. Running time, 10 minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

TOUCHDOWN REVIEW: Paragraphics—If you have people interested in football, don't pass this up. It will wow them. Plenty of humor in it. It definitely surprised me as I was not expecting much of it. Of course, don't forget that I am in a college town. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

WAY BACK WHEN A TRIANGLE HAD ITS POINTS: Stone Age Cartoons—This is the first of a new series that has so many gags in it that I don't see how there will be any left for the next one. It isn't exceptional but it is a darn better than the "Betty Boops" it has replaced. Running time, seven minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college and rural patronage.

YIP YIP YIPPY: Betty Boop Cartoons—This is a dandy Betty Boop. Ahove the average. Running time, eight minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

RKO Radio

ARCADE VARIETIES: Nu-Atlas Productions—A light fast short in which the comedians, East and Dumke, run second to the Frazee Sisters and the Philharmonicas, but surpass Lillian Roth, who makes an honest hut very unsuccessful attempt to sing a song. In the opinion of our audience, if Miss Roth can do anything better than she can sing, she had better forget about singing. As might be expected, the Philharmonicas made a perfect score here. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

INFORMATION PLEASE, NO. 3: John Kieran, Franklin P. Adams, Oscar Levant, Clarence Budington Kelland—These are altogether too short and they get better all the time. I definitely can use the drawing power connected with this series. This one stresses humor more than previously. In case some of you folks wonder why I usually say shorts are good, here is the reason. I find out about them before I book them. In that way I don't miss very often. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 11: War, Peace and Propaganda—Played this very late but I find them the hest of the short suhjects. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

SLIGHTLY AT SEA: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—This one has more action and pep than preceding ones. It is mainly concerned with trying to put a collapsible rowboat together. It is no riot but they laughed quite a lot. Running time, 20 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

WEST WALL: Reelisms—This is exceptionally good. In addition to showing scenes of the Maginot and Siegfried Lines, it gives military strategy hy means of animated diagrams. My crowd thought it was exceedingly different and educational. It certainly shows the futility of war, if nothing else. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

DOG IN A MANSION, A: Terry-Toons—Just another cartoon. This producer does not seem to have the knack of turning out a good cartoon except in rare instances. Running time, eight minutes.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

HITCH-HIKER, THE: Terry-Toons—This is a dandy. Almost a show in itself. Running time, eight minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

OLD FIRE HORSE, THE: Terry-Toons—Due to a little novelty of treatment, this is above the Terry-Toon average. Comments afterward rated it as too silly but they liked it. It reminds one a little of some of the old Keystone Cops comedies; only this is a cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

ONE MOUSE IN A MILLION: Terry-Toons—This Terry-Toon was the best we have had and as good as any one bas allowed us to show. Running time, eight minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

PRIZE GUEST, THE: Terry-Toons—Just a cartoon. I firmly believe that this producer has the worst cartoons on the market but some of their other short subjects offet this handicap. Running time, seven minutes.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

SILLY SEASON, THE: Lew Lebr—This is a very ordinary subject but it has some slightly off-color comments in it that made a hit with the students and brought on more laughter than the subject really was worth. Better skip it. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-op Theatre, Alfred, N Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

TOPNOTCH TENNIS: Ed Thorgersen (Sports)—The people interested in tennis sat back and liked it; the others just sat back. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

TWO HEADED GIANT: Terry-Toons—This was a dandy. Good color and very interesting Running time, eight minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

VIKING TRAIL, THE: Magic Carpet Series—Very good subject on Norway. We played this with "Barricade" so not many people saw it. However, I believe that most people enjoy subjects of this kind and tbey are the next best thing to traveling. Running time, 10 minutes.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

WATCHDOG, THE: Terry-Toons—A good black cartoon. Not quite up to the colored series of Merrie Melodies. Running time, seven minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

Vitaphone

EARLY WORM GETS THE BIRD: Merrie Melodies—This is anotber rung in Leon Schlesinger's climb toward the top in color cartooning. The accent on the blackbird and the worm pleased my patrons as much as anything, although tbe whole tbing is full of action, humor and clever gags. Use it in a good spot. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

IT'S THE McCOY: Clyde McCoy and His Orchestra—Very good orchestra reel featuring Clyde McCoy, the hot trumpeteer who wrote and plays "Sugar Blues." Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

JEEPERS CREEPERS: Looney Tunes—Just another cartoon that failed miserably. Running time, six minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LAND OF THE MIDNIGHT FUN: Merrie Melodies—This was a good one. Plenty of action and interesting. Running time, eight minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

LITTLE LION HUNTER: Merries Melodies—Another good colored cartoon that pleased the audience, including the grownups. Running time, eight minutes.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

LITTLE LION HUNTER: Merrie Melodies—A good color cartoon that pleased. Running time, eight minutes.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

LITTLE LION HUNTER: Merrie Melodies—A honey. About the best cartoon we have had. If all Vitaphone shorts were this good, the others would have to pep up or quit. Running time, eight minutes.—John Stafford, Royal Theatre, Leonardville, Kansas. Rural patronage.

MECHANIX ILLUSTRATED, NO. 2: Color Parade—An excellent variety of subjects that made this color reel better than average. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MIGHTY HUNTERS: Canyon Kiddies—A very good cartoon in color. Running time, eight minutes.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

ORGAN NOVELTY, AN: Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Crawford—Good, high class musical reel. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PORKY'S LAST STAND: Looney Tunes—Good black and white cartoon. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

REMEMBER WHEN: Broadway Brevities—Here is a short good enough for a repeat run. This is tops in any house and we cannot say enough good about it. A relief from the usual run of tap dancing. Save it for a weak feature and build up your program. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

REMEMBER WHEN: Broadway Brevities—Very good two-reel minstrel show with plenty of music, singing and dancing. One of the best. Running time, 20 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RIDE, COWBOY, RIDE: Dennis Morgan—Very good. Running time, 18 minutes.—L. Woody, Jr., Palace Theatre, Golden City, Mo. Very small town and rural patronage.

SCREWBALL FOOTBALL: Merrie Melodies—Good cartoon in color.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SIOUX ME: Merrie Melodies—Good colored cartoon. We always try to have one subject on our program directed at the kiddie trade and what could be more suitable than a good colored cartoon? Running time, eight minutes.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill.. Small town and rural patronage.

SWING STYLES: Melody Masters—One of the best musical singles I have ever seen. Starts out at a tornado pace and maintains it right through to the end. I really believe this subject warrants extra billing. No one left our theatre while this subject was on the screen. Running time, 10 minutes.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

VINCENT LOPEZ AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Good name band act by an organization which has been at the tops in musical circles for a good many years. Running time, 10 minutes.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

Serial

Republic

DAREDEVILS OF RED CIRCLE: Charles Quigley, Herman Brix—Just average; no extra drawing power.—L. Woody, Jr., Palace Theatre, Golden City, Mo. Very small town and rural patronage.

CURTAILED LIBRARY SERVICE PROTESTED

Curtailing of the service rendered by the circulating picture department of the New York Public Library has brought protests from many sources, including the film industry. Harold Hendee, director of research of RKO, has written to Franklin F. Hopper, head of the library's picture department, expressing the hope that the service will be resumed on a full-time basis, since it is of considerable research value as a source material.

An increase in subscribers and the growth of the collection, in contrast to a cut in the appropriation for its maintenance, has forced the department to close on Wednesdays and Fridays, effective this week.

Film companies use the picture collection for authentic material on backgrounds, costuming and the like in film production. The collection numbers about 1,000,000 illustrations, including about 50,000 motion picture stills.

Many stage and screen players appeared at Mr. Moore's Playhouse. Bette Davis was an usher at the theatre for three seasons before Mr. Moore gave her the stage part that started her on the road to fame. Mr. Moore also produced several plays on Broadway.

IN COURTS

Crim Sued by Three Majors

Charging that L. N. Crim, Kilgore, Tex., oil man and former owner of four North and Central Louisiana theatres, sold his interests, "while there were heavy debts outstanding," three major companies have filed civil suits in Tyler, Tex., seeking judgments totalling $42,829.05 which they claim was an unpaid balance on motion picture licenses. The plaintiffs are RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., Universal Film Exchanges, Inc., and United Artists Corporation.

They charge that Mr. Crim was director of the C and C Enterprises which operated theatres in Shreveport, Alexandria and Minden, La., and that he was responsible for letting liabilities exceed assets and being transferee of the property, for selling the theatres while there were debts outstanding. Liabilities were $96,620.71 and assets $81,178.10, the petition charges. The Centenary, Venus, Glenwood and West End theatres in Shreveport, the petition added, were sold in April, 1938, to Saenger-Ehrlich Enterprises, Inc. Mr. Crim now operates a theatre in Kilgore.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

THE FINAL WORD

An average of some 85-odd million admissions weekly is registered by the ticket machines of the nation's motion picture theatres. A relative handful of newspaper and magazine critics command sufficient editorial weight to influence a respectable number of these admissions. How wisely this power is directed continues to concern the theatreman, currently in the Round Table forum instigated by Julian Tuthill's recent article on film reviewing. On another page in this section, three representative Round Tablers add their opinions to those already set down in previous issues.

The most common charge taxes the critic with unfairness in saddling a picture with his personal opinion. Well, even if true, the critic is not entirely to blame. He is rather a result than a cause. The cause would lie in the lap of the theatreman who wall-papers his front and heads his ads with big type critical puffs.

Your picture critic is not especially bred to become an Olympian. On the contrary, he starts his career humbly enough with a laudable ambition to do a job for his paper, the public, the theatre. Then the theareman takes over by quoting and crediting the newspaperman until it is only a question of time before the critic has impressed upon him that his typewriter commands a lot of box-office attention. From then on, most anything can happen.

The critic may develop a critical arrogance, a patronizing condescension, a detached casualness, a bending backward to be fair, a gushing over to be kind. Or, after long years in the mines, he may conclude, to quote Mr. Tuthill, that "a motion picture critic who sets himself up as a critic of public taste and cinema art, is assuming a vast responsibility," and change his reviewing approach to one less subjective.

However, critics who seriously assume this "vast responsibility" are obviously in the majority. And little is to be done about it until exhibition wants it changed. That will come about only when the theatreman realizes that the motion picture has outgrown the nose-ring of film criticism; that the final grosses depend, as George Tyson, Harry Botwick and Bill Powell point out, on the word-of-mouth of the customers who have seen the picture after it opens rather than upon the good or bad notice the critic gives it in advance.

CONSIDERATION THAT PAYS

Recently, moved from manager of the FPC Tivoli, in Toronto, the city manager of the circuit's five houses in Hamilton, Dan Krendel now sends along a batch of campaigns with a cheery note of praise for the personnel under his supervision. Evidently the new skipper and his crew are pulling mightily together. That would be indicated in the thoroughness of the exploitations he reports.

There is no surprise in learning that in doing the job expected of him, Krendel has the solid support of his associates. It becomes the same species of staff appreciation long won by the Canadian for his ability and willingness to develop from among his personnel, trained manpower for the bigger job ahead.

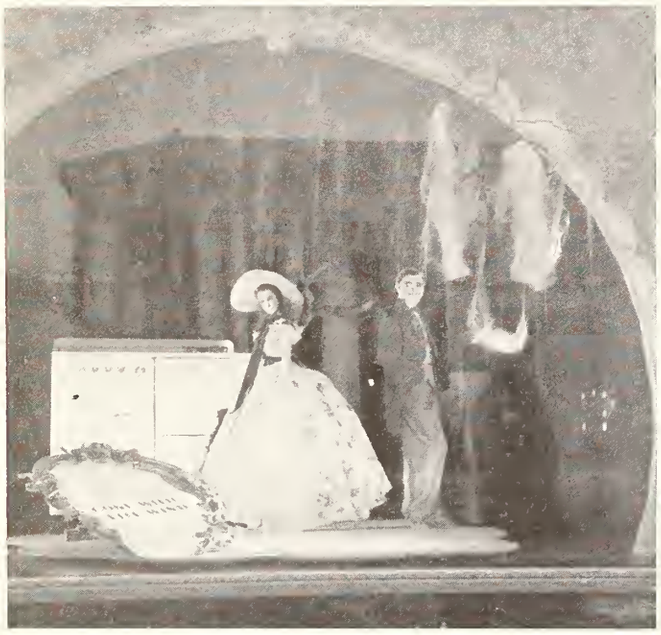
SOMETHING TO CONSIDER

That there is profit in giving is indicated in the account, on another page, of the policy pursued by the Lucas & Jenkins theatremen in Athens, Ga., in donating the Georgia Theatre for meetings of civic and religious groups. The personnel helps out when needed and there is no charge for theatre facilities. According to Moon Corker and P. E. McCoy, the added publicity and prestige have tapped sources of extra business for the circuit's houses in other situations as well as the local units.



Theatremen are not always able or expected to throw open their doors on behalf of even the worthiest causes. Where these requests can be met, the boxoffice ends may often justify the means.

Corker Offers Theatre For Church Lectures

Following the policy of offering their theatre to such organizations as Boy Scouts, City Playgrounds, etc., L & J city manager Moon Corker and P. E. McCoy of the Georgia Theatre, Athens, garnered much additional goodwill through the recent proffering of their auditorium for series of lectures by local church group having no pulpit of its own. Editor of local paper was contacted with resultant two-column five-inch ad donated daily for two weeks ahead calling attention to the lectures and where they would be held. Paper also sent out stories through their AP service to papers over the state, all giving theatre prominent mention. Additional theatre credit was gained through the broadcast of the lectures over Station WGAU.

Theatre is always thoroughly cleaned and aired before services, which usually take place on Sunday afternoons. In the winter, heat and lights are supplied with extra chairs and tables for the speakers borrowed from local furniture store. Attendants at the theatre are on duty to assist.

I., distributes a four-page mimeographed weekly newspaper to his kids, starting with the first 15 weeks of the "Shadow" serial. Grocer runs off the paper in exchange for advertising, membership cards and gifts promoted from cooperative merchant for mention in the newspaper and entire stunt is costless to Sirkin.

Round Tablers Tie 'Name' Band Dates To Ace Campaigns

To celebrate the first local broadcast by a "name" band, Pat Notaro put over a comprehensive campaign to exploit the personal appearance of Eddie Duchin and his orchestra, appearing for one day at the Warner Columbia Theatre, in Sharon, Pa. The broadcast took place from the stage of the theatre and was stressed in all advertising. There was no expense to the promotion which Pat reports aided in breaking a few records for a one-day stand.

Newspaper radio editorials were especially cooperative in signalizing this unusual presentation. Tieup with leading music shop, with Duchin autographing his latest records in the theatre lobby brought quarter page display ad.

Cracks Paper on Cummins

For the personal date on Bernie Cummins and orchestra at the Majestic, in Johnstown, Pa., Manager Charles E. Schiffauer emphasized a strong newspaper campaign, the best break being a scene mat and story on back page of his local paper. This was important, reports the Round Tabler, since it was the first time in five years that that spot had been cracked for a theatre attraction.

In addition to the theatre campaign, added publicity was secured by the appearance of the band at a benefit dance for Finland, this being carried in advance and also on the night of the event.

Leand Stages Band Contest

Bands from Revere, Mass., and neighboring towns participated in a "Musical Battle Royal," staged by Harold Leand at the Revere, to bolster grosses on Monday night, when business is usually off. Four orchestras participated, two local and two out-of-town, players being mostly from the high schools who agreed to appear for the prizes. These were stock arrangements of orchestra numbers for the winners, plus an engraved plaque. Leand found that the arrangements were a more satisfactory prize, since the entire band could use them, thus avoiding cash prizes which would have been too small per man to make a good showing.

Harold gave a lot of attention to staging the "Battle Royal," obtaining a special drop with musical brackground and flood lighted from wings and booth. Each band played two numbers, total running time being 35 minutes. Stage procedure was handed by Assistant Henry Price. While each band was setting up, the Round Tabler acted as master of ceremonies in front of closed curtain, giving history and highlights of each of the entires. As a build up for the musicians, he emphasized that the theatre would keep the names, addresses and phone numbers of each orchestra leader on file for the information of local organizations in the market for musical talent. Winners were decided by audience applause and reception was enthusiastic enough to warrant doing something similar in the near future, says Leand, in crediting Henry Price for the idea.

Exploitation Briefs Here & There

Printed in newspaper style is the new herald gotten out by Louis Marcks at the Strand, in Westfield, Mass., to advertise his shows, printed on yellow stock with news headlines and masthead, theatreman carries copy on forthcoming attractions and merchants' ads which helps defray costs. In addition, heralds are lucky numbered, guest tickets going to those holding numbers corresponding to list in theatre lobby.

On his cooking school tieup, Marcks sold superintendent of schools idea that it would benefit pupils in the home economics classes to attend the session. High school paid for the admissions of all classes and declared half holiday so students could attend.

Promoting an automatic 12-record victrola, Henry Sutton stationed it in the lobby of the Regent, Pittsburgh, playing Kay Kyser recordings with card atop saying that the songs could be heard in "That's Right You're Wrong" coming soon. During run, cards were distributed containing questions on various scenes in the picture and to winners promoted gifts were awarded.

A three-week cooking school tieup, entirely costless, was promoted by Charlie Moyer at the State, in Hanover, Pa., with local utilities company cooperating. Latest model range was awarded to grand winner with lesser prizes of promoted nationally advertised groceries going to runnersup. Merchant tying in on the deal paid for and distributed heralds selling the school and advertised the sessions in their windows.

With an empty store adjacent to his theatre, Al Fowler at the Palace, Pittsfield, Mass., for "A Child Is Born" advertised that he would admit free anyone who came to the theatre wheeling an empty baby carriage. Bannering part of the "contraband," Al stationed them out front and in the store window. Bookmarks were distributed at circulating libraries and leading book stores featured window displays of the book with appropriate tie-in copy.

Inexpensive item used by F. Tickell, at the Capitol, Calgary, Canada, for "Light That Failed" was the distribution of packets of book matches. Inside cover carried title, playdates and cast, were inserted in small envelopes with copy reading "Look inside for the light that never fails," etc.

All lettering on the changeable sign, upside down, leaves patrons to guess what the feature picture would be. Novelties were the old-time gag nail and match which were distributed in imprinted envelopes. Two weeks ahead build-up started on the classified page with gag teaser ads.

All paper in house frames for coming attractions will be turned upside down and the water fountain adjusted for a surprise spray. Limerick has purchased a punch board which each patron is required to try their luck at. All numbers ending in "0" will be admitted free. Ushers will use lanterns to conduct folks to their seats and staff vendors will run up and down aisles selling peanuts and popcorn. When a patron wants to buy some, they will be thrown a bag "on the house."

For the show itself, the operator will place the picture title at the end, run a cartoon upside down making the dialogue in reverse and while he rethreads his machine a slide will be run reading "Time out . . . the operator is calling his wife to tell her he won't be home till the show is out." Public address system will be rigged up so that the audience will hear him talking to his wife.

To start the Prevue, a large grey rat constructed of compoboard will be pulled across the stage by invisible wires while the assistant manager yells "kill that rat." Two ushers will then jump on the stage with brooms, pounding the floor in an effort to capture the rodent. During the show some of the help will ride up and down the aisles on bicycles, while others dressed in baby clothes will puff large black cigar. Regular doorman attired as a girl will make the rounds of all cafes, drug stores, etc., plugging the show.

News Policies, Sports Writers and "Critiques"

Customers Are the Real Reviewers, Say Theatremen

Still more of the members are heard from on the Tuthill "reporter" reviewing style, the discussion on which started a few weeks back. The forum continues with the voices of George Tyson of Pittsburgh, Bill Powell of Holyoke, Mass., and Harry Botwick of Portland, Me. What they have to say is herewith set down.

PITTSBURGH ADMAN FAVORS REPORTING

DEAR MIKE:—

There is no question in my mind but that the reportorial method of reviewing a picture would be much better if we could persuade the larger newspapers to do it. We formerly fought with the critics here at length about their severe criticism of just fair pictures, and while we accomplished some good we were not able to overcome the policies of the papers, all of whom engage critics and who figure they owe it to their readers to tell them what kind of a picture we are playing.

However, it is our opinion over a period of a few years the movie-going public becomes familiar with the type of pictures liked by the critics and therefore doesn't pay too much attention to them. We have found that pictures the critics liked so well and raved about, often do the poorest business, whereas others which they rap unmercifully oftentimes do a great business. It all depends on whether or not the public likes the picture, and I think the word of mouth of the public is far more important than the criticisms of the critics.

I do not think industry is being short sighted in stressing critical opinions. We might as well get as much out of good reviews as possible, and since we cannot overcome the policies of the larger papers, we might as well make the best of it. We make use of the rating of stars, bells, etc., and have found they have helped us on a number of pictures.—GEORGE D. TYSON, DIRECTOR OF ADVERTISING AND PUBLICITY, HARRIS AMUSEMENT COMPANIES, PITTSBURGH.

SAYS SPORTS WRITER DID THE BETTER JOB

DEAR MIKE:—

I have been getting a real chuckle out of the debate on motion picture reviews. I remember once, when just fresh out of newspaper work myself, telling a hard-bitten managing editor of the old school that I would be better satisfied if he would send one of his sports writers to cover my next show instead of the dramatic critic. Asked why, I told him that the sports writer would probably convey more facts about the show in the lead paragraph, from a reader point of view, than would the critic—all mixed up with a sense of personal likes and dislikes, ten dollar words and exaggerated self esteem—in his whole story. Darned if he didn't do it, and believe me when I say I still remember the review as one of the best and most interesting the theatre or a picture had received in many a day.

After all, it gets back to the individual. A reviewer who remembers he is a newspaper man, who keeps his feet on the ground, retains his sense of balance and writes honestly about the picture and the audience re-action as he is best able to judge it, will by and large do a worthwhile job for his paper, its readers and the theatre. It is only when the reviewer lets the adulation of a few readers turn his head, forgets his duty to his paper and all its readers, and in an effort at self glorification begins to write from the standpoint of personal taste and exaggerated literary ego, that he really fails as a reviewer and becomes a "critic." There is a vast difference between a reviewer and a critic. When newspapers themselves realize this fact they, and we, will be better off. We have neither reviewers nor critics here. After all, the customers are the real reviewers.—WM. T. POWELL, MANAGER, VICTORY, HOLYOKE, MASS.

INEXPERT REVIEWING DECRIED BY BOTWICK

DEAR MIKE:

I heartily agree with Julian B. Tuthill's breakdown of "reportorial reporting," especially the first sentence: "When a motion picture editor sets himself up as a critic of public taste and cinema art—he is assuming a vast responsibility." In far too many newspapers, the reviewer's job is handled by a reporter who wants to go to a show or by another employee on his day off. When these chaps get back to their desks and start writing their reviews, they are mostly self-opinionated presentations of what they, themselves, liked or did not like. Yet, these same reporters, when sent out by their city editors to cover a story, intelligently and graphically write a word-picture that presents all the necessary facts in a way that elicits interest and definitely tells a story. I don't know why it is, but when these same fellows sit down at their typewriters to write about the movies, they suddenly know all about art, directorial touches, acting ability, story qualifications, etc.

I know that, in our city, the people do not care what the critics say unless the latter's reviews appear to coincide with popular opinion and popular opinion is the opinion of those who buy tickets at the boxoffice, not those who may attend a dozen or so pictures during the course of a year. I like Tuthill's "four divisions." The lead is always important; the story, naturally, interests everyone; the work of the leading players is highly important and, too, audience reaction in the theatre or word-of-mouth comment is of far more importance than any other type of opinion.

Botwick Attacks Bells and Gongs

It is my belief that the industry should not stress critics' opinions because every time they quote "columnists" or "reviewers" in trade journals and other advertising mediums, it is just so much "malarkey." This is true inasmuch as the industry is, invariably, quarreling with these same reviewers on the one hand and building them up into prominent names, on the other.

As for "stars," "bells" and other marks of rating, etc., these affect our grosses very little, although I will say that if a picture is bad and gets a poor rating, it definitely kills the attraction. On other hand, if a picture has popular appeal and is definitely worthwhile, poor rating may handicap it for a time . . . but it will eventually come through at the boxoffice.—HARRY BOTWICK, MANAGER, STATE, PORTLAND, MAINE.

MEL BLIEDEN

has been a theatreman since 1934, starting from the first rung of the ladder. He ushered at the Indiana Theatre, Indiana Harbor, then moved to the Hoosier in Whiting, where he performed his duties as assistant manager. Mel was also the booker for the Indiana-Illinois Circuit for two years, then became manager of the Capitol in Whiting. At the present time he is managing the Forsythe in East Chicago, Indiana, and is doing a fine job of work. Come visit us again, Mel. It was nice meeting up with you in person.

became the manager last year of the Empress Theatre in Kelowna, B. C., which house belongs to Famous Players Canadian Corp. He started his career in the theatre in 1928, when he was the janitor and doorman in a house in Kamloops. Because he could swing a sign brush he was soon put on to advertising. In 1930 Leslie was made assistant manager, handled all the display work and remained in this spot until he was promoted to his present situation.

acts as the publicity director at the RKO Albee Theatre, Providence, R. I., and has a wealth of experience in the theatre as his background. Bill started in as a movie reviewer on a local paper, wrote sports and did football publicity. At personal appearance of well-known film folk in his vicinity, Bill did all the local puff work. He also was the advance man for sponsored circuses and candy shows and worked as press agent at summer theatres. In 1939 he became associated with RKO as a press agent and we learn of the fine things for which he is responsible.

manages the Van Der Vaart Theatre in Sheboygan, Wisconsin. Acting as an usher in 1932 made him realize his interest in the theatre business. His next step was working as doorman and soon after he became assistant manager. In 1934, together with his brother, he operated a theatre at Weyauwega, Wis., known as the Opera House. He returned to the Van Der Vaart two years later, in a managerial capacity but again left to operate the Ozaukee house, for a short period. At the demise of his partner, Lester sold out in Port Washington, Wis., and came back to his present situation, at which spot we hope to hear from him at not too infrequent intervals.

broke into showbusiness at the age of sixteen as a theatre organist during the silent picture days. Two years after, he was solo organist at Loew's Midland in Kansas City, billed as America's youngest theatre organist. With the advent of sound he went to work for the Mutual Circuit as assistant manager and circuit booker and then secured the skipper's post at the Southtown Theatre in Kansas City, Mo., where he has been employed for the past ten years.

THE RELEASE CHART

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Com.-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

RADIO'S PROBLEM

WHEN the motion picture was confronted with an impending technological revolution with the coming of sound, it had to fight it out and reach a decision by experience.

This week radio, faced with a revolution in technique by the development of the "frequency modulation" system, invented by Major E. H. Armstrong, went to Washington to talk it out, before the Federal Communications Commission.

It is claimed for the new Armstrong system* that it escapes the interference of static discharges, also that inherent are important extensions of scale and perfection in rendition.

With costly television on hand to be dealt with immediately, there are those in radio who would like to let what they consider well enough alone in the voice department just now. Others in radio contend that improvement if available must be had, regardless of the fact that it may be costly.

If the issue were left to an uncontrolled field it would seem certain that competitive effort would force the frequency modulation system in, regardless of majority opinions. If, however, federal control of the air can be used to maintain present methods yet a while, the invention will have to wait.

Radio is the first and only big industry to be born and developed entirely under government control and license. It becomes, therefore, a crucible of experiment.

*(See MOTION PICTURE HERALD on frequency modulation system, issues of December 9 and 16, 1939.)

INTO PRODUCTION

THE announcement that Mr. Frederick Ullman, Jr., is going from the post of operating executive of Pathe News to the Hollywood production staff of the allied RKO brings the reflection that there are few changes indeed in newsreel personnel; also that only rarely the makers of films of fact move into the world of the films of fiction.

At the moment only two prior movements of the kind come to mind, the instance of Mr. Emanuel Cohen, of Paramount, and Mr. Charles Ford, of the Universal newsreel, who went picture-making in Hollywood.

Many more publicity persons have gone to dramatic production, possibly more especially because of propinquity, as well as, may one venture, a certain inevitable familiarity with the art of make-believe. At the moment one recalls two contemporary names, Mr. Robert Sisk, of RKO, and Mr. Hal B. Wallis, ascendent at Warner Brothers.

That adjacency does not exist for the newsreel makers. The newsreel is more remote from Hollywood and studio production than any other ramification of the business, farther than the home office, even. No one in the motion picture business knows much about the newsreels outside the working staff. It is a field of operation that is the very antithesis of dramatic production. The basic material, world events, insists on occurring without schedule. There are no story conferences that last over two minutes. There are no retakes, no previews. The newsreel producer designs his product at full gallop and shoots from the hip. It is good the first shot, or else.

Also new to the Hollywood production tradition is the newly announced Paramount assignment to Miss Margaret Webster, Broadway director and actress, on a six-months deal by which she may "write, act or work with any producer or director". At the end of that time she is either to continue with Paramount or else agree not to work for any other picture concern for a year.

That sounds like a mutual exploration arrangement, a searching for new creative capacities.

If it develops, as seems probable, that Miss Webster becomes a director, she will be the only woman active in that capacity in Hollywood. In view of the many creative contributions which women have made and continue to make in script writing and related activities, it is remarkable that so few have ever attained directorships. The last, who was the first for a long time, was Dorothy Arzner, now for a while inactive.

It is just possible that women do not generally get along with actors.

COPY MAN'S LAMENT

PLENTY has been recorded in these pages about "giveaways", their uses and consequences in the region of the box office. The malady of the free-deal and the premium seems to have sore beset some aspects of the art of advertising, too.

Mr. T. Harry Thompson, a stellar writer of advertising for the printed page, gave voice the other day in Printers' Ink:

"Words alone fail all of us today. Even detonative words, as Kenneth Collins calls them, explode with the feeble fizz of a wet firecracker . . . unless they are accompanied by . . . a hook of some kind . . . a Tasmanian fly-swatter absolutely free in return for three box tops. Without such a hook our most lyrical copy rates reaction from readers of 'Came the Yawn'.

"We are definitely back to the era of gimmicks, gadgets and gimmes. When Colonel Stoopnagle said: 'Just tear off the top of a Pontiac and mail it to your nearest dealer,' he was playing for a laugh, and got it. But the idea has multiplied. . . . Don't judge daytime radio and premiums by your personal reactions. It's for millions of women."

Now, even advertising finds that giveaways—device of radio to prove audience—are as endless and incurable as "relief".

A WORLD'S FAIR publicity promoter was in the office the other day, working on the subject of motion picture cooperation. "Down to the movies at last," the editor observed in his customary doubtful mood. "Thought the Fair was too high hat for that."

The agent leaned over to whisper.

"Haven't you heard our new slogan on Flushing Meadows: 'We've buried the Gardenia'."

FOR sheer gauche illiteracy one can always find the most perfect specimens in the show business. A loud lobby in New York's Forty-seventh Street this week proclaims an act entitled "The Coster and Beale Girls". It is a "Black Crook" imitation and an endeavour to ride the historic fame of Koster and Bials' Music Hall in old Herald Square.

This Week in the News

Neely Air Split

REPRESENTATIVES of the organized industry in New York were well along in conversation the other day on the subject of taking the fight against passage of the Neely anti-block booking bill in Congress to the public via the air waves, when all talk stopped abruptly after one of the participants made his colleagues realize that radio presentation of their side automatically gave the other side the opportunity to present theirs—and some of the conferees began to wonder whether a "rebuttal" by the Neely proponents might overshadow the majors' arguments, giving the proponents, as it were, the last word.

Possibility of such a "counter-attack," always a worry to the party of the first part in any political, economic or legislative battle, arises out of the code of practice of the National Association of Broadcasters, which requires that radio stations shall provide free time for the discussion of controversial subjects in such a way that conflicting viewpoints in public matters have a fair and equal opportunity to be heard.

Because in no event may time be sold for such controversies, except for out-and-out political broadcasts, the plan to "air the Neely bill," reputedly conceived by Harry Brandt, president of the New York Independent Theatre Owners Association, was to obtain from a network at least a half hour for a coast-to-coast anti-Neely presentation, possibly with Hollywood name talent. NBC is said to have been approached and with favorable results. Next Wednesday, March 27th, had even been pegged as the date for such a program, or even the starting date for a series of programs.

First presentation of the idea to corporate officers resulted in the immediate calling of a meeting in the third-floor offices, Loew Building, Longacre Square, New York, of Howard Dietz, director of advertising of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. On hand, besides Mr. Dietz, were Mr. Brandt; Lionel Toll, his publicity director; Oscar A. Doob, director of advertising for Loew theatres; Silas Seadler, advertising manager of MGM; Al Wilkie, Paramount publicity manager, and Alec Moss, Paramount advertising manager.

It's "disposition" was later described by a spokesman for the film companies as, "It was merely a matter to consider." But, Mr. Brandt's offices said, "the matter has not been disposed of, it was merely postponed."

A proposal of 100 independents in Michigan to substitute a trade practice program by Federal statute in place of the socalled "onerous" Sections 3 and 4 which are now in Senator Neely's document, is described on page 14.

Union Trouble

FOR THE FIRST TIME since the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees signified intentions to aid Philadelphia musicians of the American Federation of Musicians in "breaking" the four month old deadlock between the musicians union and Warner theatres in Philadelphia the IATSE on Monday served notice on Warners that unless the music controversy was settled by April 1st the IATSE's projectionists, stagehands and electricians would walk out in a "sympathetic strike," thereby crippling the largest center of Warner operations.

Disney Reissues

TRAILERS went to all RKO exchanges this week incorporated in prints of a reissue of Disney's Academy Award winning short, "The Ugly Duckling," asking audiences to indicate by applause whether they would like to see a reissue of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," the industry's first feature cartoon which grossed millions on its original runs two years ago.

The test of public reaction was taken first at the Center theatre in New York where the prints were shown with "Pinocchio," which next Wednesday will conclude a seven-week run at that theatre. "Pinocchio" this week began 300 day-and-date openings across the country without the single bill and advanced admission requirements originally planned for inclusion in the license agreements. RCA-Victor, a "first cousin" of RKO, Disney distributor, will contribute to "Pinocchio" merchandising by a "Pinocchio" radio broadcast of the musical score and playdate mention in 51 of the 300 playings.

Following the reissue test at the Center it was reported that "Snow White" would not follow "Pinocchio" there "because the house is too big." (The Center seats 3,381; the Music Hall, nearby, where "Snow White" played to 800,000, who paid $565,000, in late '37 and early '38, seats 6,200).

Paris cabled RKO's New York office this week that Disney is experimenting in France, Belgium and Switzerland with a sort of Grand Parade of six "hit" Disney shorts linked into a single film in the manner of a story book of children's fables, each subject representing a separate chapter with music and narration welding the series together. "Ferdinand the Bull" and "The Practical Pig" are included.

The story of Walt Disney Enterprises becoming "big business," via $4,000,000 stock flotation, his first, is told on page 46.

War Time Project

HERBERT WILCOX, producer of many films to which the British Government has given an approving nod,* plans to set something of a precedent by making a unique Allied film in the United States, according to reports in Hollywood, New York and Washington.

The British Ambassador to the U. S., Lord Lothian, and the RKO president, George J. Schaefer, were consulted by Mr. Wilcox before he returned to Hollywood from New York, last weekend. RKO has been releasing Wilcox productions for several years. His latest, "Irene," is scheduled for release next month.

Dr. A. H. Giannini has been appointed chairman of a board of trustees, as yet unnamed, to administer the allocation of the profits of the picture which, according to an announcement in Hollywood Wednesday, would be produced exclusively in the interests of charity with top flight players and production talent representing the international industry contributing their services gratis. RKO Radio will advance funds for financing the project free of charges save interest and the picture will be distributed internationally through that company's exchanges at actual cost, the announcement said.

The entire profits are to go to the Los Angeles Community Chest of which Dr. Giannini is chairman and which embraces 88 member charities, the British and French Red Cross and the war charity organizations of Belgium, Finland and each nation where the film is exhibited.

Stars who have pledged their cooperation are Brian Aherne, Charles Boyer, Madeleine Carroll, Ronald Colman, Errol Flynn, Cary Grant, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Charles Laughton, Vivien Leigh, Herbert Marshall, Ray Milland, Anna Neagle, and Laurence Olivier. Directors and producers volunteering their services in addition to Mr. Wilcox are Alfred Hitchcock, Frank Lloyd, Victor Saville and Robert Stevenson. Also said to be interested are Charles Chaplin, Alexander Korda and Merle Oberon.

The picture will be feature length and the story, not yet chosen, will be entirely fictional and for entertainment purpose without propaganda content, according to the announcement. William Moorin, Hollywood representative of the Odhams Press, British publishing house, has established headquarters at the RKO studios to handle publicity on the enterprise and will function independently of the studio publicity department.

The Fair Scare

INDUSTRY PARTICIPATION in the New York World's Fair, regarded by some exhibitors to be potential box office competition, was voted down this week. A number of plans had been suggested and some of the companies, led by some Paramount executives, favored having a film exhibit of some kind at the Fair. But the companies could reach no unanimous agreement on a type of exhibit, and all planning has been called off. Furthermore there was the little question of who would pay the bill, some half-million dollars.

Meanwhile negotiations for a "Hollywood Stunt Week" at the San Francisco Fair continue. Y. Frank Freeman, of Paramount, president of the Motion Picture Producers Association, is also reported to have authorized the sending of the replica of the S.S. Dog Star, used in "Rulers of the Sea," to Treasure Island for the California Fair.

Strike Film

GENERAL MOTORS has frequently "sold" its cars to the public via the "sponsored, educational" film, usually 16 mm, and usually shown to dealers, churches, clubs, and the like.

"Why can't we do the same?" apparently have reasoned the members of the United Automobile Workers of America, which fought the corporation for several years, precipitated several strikes, and won some concessions in a settlement last summer.

The result is a 16 mm film called "United Action," 33 minutes long, produced by the union, and being released by it and Garrison Films, Inc., New York.

The film depicts organization efforts of the union, the strike, the settlement. It was shot on the scene, at Detroit. The sound—labor songs, and so on, sung by the American Peoples Chorus—was supplied by Frontier Films, Inc., New York.

Garrison Films this month began releasing it to school labor-study groups, and other non-theatrical outlets, on a percentage deal with the union. The union itself is distributing the film to its locals, and to other unions who may want to study "strike technique," The Daily Worker, Communist newspaper, New York, describing the film as "a valuable case history for educational use by trade unions in all fields."

Garrison disclaims intent to distribute to theatres, said a spokesman for the company, which last year released such documentary features as "Return to Life," "Fight to the Last," "People of the Cumberland."

Frontier Films now is working on a full length film on "civil liberties."

The Arnold "Problem"

MOTION PICTURE LAWYERS and corporation executives currently engaged with the big problem of the anti-trust prosecution that is being pushed toward a May 1st trial by Thurman Arnold, might find some interest in that which Washington is describing as "the Arnold problem," styled by some political writers at the Capitol as "a great problem to business, banking, labor, the professions, the New Deal."

Frank C. Waldrop, political writer for the Washington Times-Herald, says Mr. Arnold is a problem "because he is enforcing the anti-trust laws without mercy and without discrimination" . . "the first time such a policy has ever been undertaken in this Republic."

Mr. Waldrop observes that if the assistant attorney-general, "who chatters through the frayed ends of a wet cigar, flies around the room like a movie producer and wisecracks real wisecracks . . . isn't dampened down before the end of this campaign year he may have half the people in the United States serving subpoenas on the other half as monopolists.

"If he is tampered with, on the other hand, he is just quick-triggered enough to bellow 'I quit,' and his policies happen to be too popular around the country for any political party to have that happen. Some problem, Thurman!"

Meanwhile the organized motion picture business moves along with its problem of federal courtroom preparation and pre-trial testifying in the "key" New York Arnold trust prosecution. This week's developments in that case and other anti-trust matters affecting the motion picture industry are reported on pages 15 and 16.

Samuel Untermyer

PAGES of important motion picture history were reopened this week, pages which told the dramatic story of the sale by William Fox, in 1929, of his "great movie empire," of Fox Films and theatres, to the Chase Bank, pages which told the story of the sharp controversy between Warner Brothers and the American Telephone Company over Warners' financial remuneration for launching the Telephone Company's invention of the day—"talking movies."

Samuel Untermyer, lawyer, died last Saturday in his 82nd year at his winter home in Palm Springs, California. In his 61 years at the bar, during which he participated in some of the biggest cases of corporation, utility, banking, transit and political litigations, it would be expected that motion pictures would come across his horizon of activity. This happened most importantly in the Fox case when he was paid $1,000,000 for three months' service, and a short while later was an arbitrator in the Warner-Telephone Company dispute.

The Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League, which Mr. Untermyer headed from the beginning, started the boycott against German motion pictures which eventually resulted in almost complete elimination of German films from American screens.

Aviation & Movie $$

FLOYD B. ODLUM, president and chairman of Atlas Corporation, $63,000,000 investment trust, on Tuesday morning announced that his company is merging with Curtiss-Wright Corporation, a leading aircraft manufacturer, whose securities approximate $106,000,000. Thereby, because of the Odlum-Atlas substantial investments in RKO ($3,414,311) and Paramount Pictures ($412,650), emerges another mixing of aviation and motion pictures, preceded by aviation-film associations of Howard Hawks, Howard Hughes, et al.

Atlas Corporation declared that the transaction in no way will affect its film industry holdings, which will be assigned to a new corporation known as Special Situations' Company. Special Situations' will be assigned $25,000,000 of the Atlas portfolio, all shares of which will be owned by Atlas' common stockholders.

George Newell Armsby, banker and industrialist, who was chairman of Curtiss-Wright, is, like Mr. Odlum, a participant in motion pictures. He is a member of the board of Loew's, Inc.; a member of the board of Capitol Theatre Corporation, New York, and of the Moredall Realty Corporation, owner of the Broadway Capitol.

The European war with its demand for airplanes obviously figures prominently in Curtiss-Wright operations.

100 INDEPENDENTS GIVE SUBSTITUTE FOR NEELY

Propose Local Arbitration Boards, 20 to 25% Cancellation, Ban on Forced Shorts and Playing Time, Score Charges

Marking a line down the middle of the road between those in the industry who insist upon passage of the Neely anti-block booking bill as it now stands in the Senate (S. 280) and those fighting against any form of such trade practice legislation, 100 independent theatre owners of Michigan, banded together as Co-operative Theatres of Michigan, Inc., six-year-old film booking cooperative, this week explained a substitute set of proposals which would supplant socalled "onerous" block and blind buying clauses with a seven-point trade practice program placed on the federal statute books, as follows:

1. "A mandatory provision that all disputes on contracts, over-buying, clearance, etc., be submitted to a fair arbitration board to be set up locally. This board to be comprised as set forth in the final drafts of the 'Code' or as Allied suggested recently, but in any event equitable to all concerned, with the deciding vote always in the hands of an outsider or a neutral. This would still allow the right, granted under the Constitution, of appeal to the Federal District Court.

2. "A mandatory 20 to 25 per cent elimination or cancellation clause on all 'block-booking' contracts.

3. "Prohibition of 'forcing' of shorts, newsreels, trailers, and reissues.

4. "Prohibition against 'forcing' selected playing time on percentage pictures.

5. "Prohibition against distributors charging 'score charges'.

6. "A provision providing 'identification' of pictures contracted for, to eliminate, reasonably, 'blind buying'.

7. "Provide for cancellation by producers of parts of 'blocks', not to affect exhibitor's cancellation percentage arrived at numerically originally."

Talk of "substitutions" for the Neely bill has been growing. The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America is also among the most recent. Unalterably opposed to legislation for years, the MPTOA says it is prepared to talk substitution, "rather than have the harsh and costly requirements of the Neely bill jammed down our throats by misguided pressure groups," adding: "It may be well for the industry, which refuses to provide a uniform option to cancel, to consider a more practical statute," and, "if statutory regulation is inevitable, we believe exhibitors should have something to say about the law they must live or die under."

In this connection it was suggested by the MPTOA that a "block booking law" might be in the form of "a simple statute providing that no license agreement for the exhibition of five or more copyrighted motion picture films over 2,000 feet in length shall be valid and enforceable at law unless it provides an option to cancel upon reasonable notice one picture out of each group of five in the order of release without liability."

ACTION AWAITED ON TRADE PROGRAM

Action upon the suggestions made in a recent bulletin of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, over President Ed Kuykendall's signature, that six trade practice concessions be included in new season contracts by the majors, still is awaited in New York. It was expected that the MPTOA executive committee might confer with the executives of the majors, or have written suggestions discussed.

Could Cancel One Out of Five

"Further, if the distributor fails to provide in the contract such a minimum option to cancel pictures as they are released the whole contract will become invalid and unenforceable, this making the cancellation privilege 100 per cent."

This MPTOA proposition would bring cancellation privileges of, say, 20 per cent, which is about the present maximum—minimum being 10 per cent, but, more important than present practice, it would provide that one out of every group of five could be cancelled in the order of release, rather than 20 per cent of a total block of releases, as at present.

The Cooperatives' Plan

The trade practice program which the 100 Cooperative independent owners of Michigan would have placed on the federal statute books has many of the concessions demanded by exhibitors down through the years. It has many of the proposals which the majors brought to Washington last year to have ratified by the Department of Justice, after their formulation by majors and exhibitors, but which the Department nullified on the grounds that they were "incompatible" with the Department's charges in its "key" anti-trust suit in New York.

Cooperative Theatres already has filed its proposed "amendments" to the Neely bill with the Senate interstate commerce subcommittee, where the measure is awaiting a public hearing.

Anticipating reactions that their amendments "call for a more strict regulation (of the industry) by the Government than the present Neely bill," Thomas McGuire, an executive of Cooperative, declares that any such reactions would be a misunderstanding.

"There would be no supervision by the Government needed under these proposals," he said, "A complaint to the local (federal) district attorney by any injured party that the law was being violated would be sufficient to cause an investigation by that government agency.

"Action against a wilful violator could be rapidly obtained through the district attorney or the federal district court."

A spokesman for the organized industry in New York on Tuesday disparaged this aspect of the proposal, adding that civil actions in no way would bring a solution, "as witness the 50-odd civil anti-trust actions now pending against the majors in federal courts all over the land."

"As we stated to the Interstate Commerce sub-committee," continued the independents' spokesman, "our proposals are made to allow the industry to wash its own linen, and to stay away from government regulation other than passage of these amendments (enforcing a trade practice program), rather than Senator Neely's Sections 3 and 4."

From "inside tracks," the independent group discloses, it has heard that "many independent owners and groups have agreed that these seven amendments would be desirable and would go a long way toward eliminating most of the grief now plaguing the industry, but their groundless fear of 'too much government regulation' deters them from publicly approving our stand."

To "Wash Own Linen"

The independent group further warns, "If those in the industry who do not want the present Neely bill provisions, do not so advise their congressmen and the members of the Committee on Interstate Foreign Commerce and get behind a set of amendments that they do want, to help clean up the industry, they will most likely find the present Neely Bill provisions enacted, with the good possibility of getting that added bugaboo 'Community Selection,' which the proponents have sold to the nation's social and women's groups, and this 'Community Selection' will saddle the industry with about 6,500 local censorship boards."

The Screen Actors Guild in Hollywood, campaigning among talent for defeat of the bill, is using the following argument set up by Co-operative Theatres: "While the bill would prohibit distributors from forcing blocks of pictures on exhibitors, it would do nothing to prevent an exhibitor's competitor from buying the major's blocks, and the exhibitor would have to raise his price or bid and this would tend to raise the price of the bid on the whole block in order not to be left without pictures.

"A delay of from three to four years could be expected if the bill was passed, because of legal fights against the measure throughout the nation."

Cooperative Theatres of Michigan, with headquarters in the Fox Building, Detroit, buys and books films for the following houses in that territory:

ONE CITY OUTLAWS CHAINS; ANOTHER ASKS CUT SCALE

Morrilton, Ark., Bars Anyone from Operating More Than One Theatre; Minneapolis Grand Jury for 10¢ Saturdays

Governmental and individual insistence upon upsetting the status quo of motion picture trade practice, through the many anti-trust suits and legislative attacks awaiting action on the calendars of courtrooms and lawmakers from coast to coast, took several most unusual turns this week.

The City Council of Morrilton, Arkansas, enacted an anti-chain ordinance, first of its kind on local books, prohibiting any individual or firm from operating more than one theatre within its limits; a grand jury in Minneapolis recommended that exhibitors charge children no more than 10 cents on Saturdays; and a "private" fight was waged on the floor of Congress between Representative John G. Alexander and W. A. (Fighting Al) Steffes, in proxy, over the Neely Bill.

All of these movements stirred up a greater muddle over the manner and method of motion picture operation, with following developments in or related to the federal courts and the motion picture business:

Rumblings grew louder of very-inside negotiations pointing to a settlement of the Government's "key" anti-trust suit against the majors in New York, through a "consent decree", or its equivalent, as reported in Motion Picture Herald, March 16th, on page 8.

Regardless, the Department of Justice continued questioning executives of defendant companies, this week querying Joseph M. Schenck, Spyros Skouras, Y. Frank Freeman and others, and at the same time abandoned an earlier decision to question witnesses in Hollywood.

A third anti-trust attack by independents against majors in Philadelphia was filed Tuesday, for $330,000 damages, while a Dallas action for $315,000 was settled and various other trust suits in the field assumed advanced positions on calendar or in trial.

An ordinance adopted last week in Morrilton, Ark., and said to be the first anti-chain legislation against theatres, on a city statute book, prohibits "any person, firm, corporation, or association of persons" from operating or being interested in the operation of more than one film theatre within the city's limits.

The ordinance immediately was protested by the Malco Realty Corporation, holding company for Malco, Inc., which has bought property on Railroad Avenue and was expected to build another house there, to implement its Rialto, now in operation.

The other house in town is independent; it is the Ritz, operated by Sid Metcalf and S. B. McSwain. It burned down recently, and is being rebuilt. Mr. McSwain and Mr. Metcalf appeared before the Council, for the bill, and claimed that erection of another house in opposition to them, and especially if run by a chain, would freeze them out.

ASK APPROVAL OF JUSTICE DEPARTMENT

The approval of the Department of Justice is being sought for a proposed deal by which Keith-Albee-Orpheum and the Skouras Theatre circuits would acquire eight theatres, in the Bronx, New York, from the Springer-Cocalis circuit. Under the deal, each circuit will obtain four houses.

The reporting of the transaction to Washington was made under the standstill agreement in the Government's New York anti-trust prosecution. The circuits affiliated with producer-distributors agreed not to acquire more theatres without knowledge of the Department of Justice. The Government agreed not to force through its petition for an injunction against further theatre acquisitions by the major company circuits.

Discuss Minneapolis Cut Price Suggestion

The Minneapolis-St. Paul Allied organization on Monday discussed a Minneapolis grand jury recommendation, advanced recently, that children of up to 18 years of age be admitted to theatres on Saturday afternoons for 10 cents.

A special committee was to discuss the matter with the Minnesota Amusement Company. Action, in any event, was expected only after the return to the city of W. A. (Al) Steffes, head of the Allied of Northwest, who has been convalescing in Florida.

The grand jury recommendation concerned, particularly, suburban houses; the recommendation was for a reduction to ten cents, most prices being higher.

Congressional Argument On Floor Over Neely

Suggestions, advanced two weeks ago, by Representative John G. Alexander (Rep., Minn.), that the motion picture industry clean its own house without the enactment of federal legislation, have drawn fire from Al Steffes, president of Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest, who charged the Congressman's remarks helped the "trust."

Inserting Steffes' letter in the Congressional Record last Friday, Congressman Alexander observed that "my remarks in the Record of March 5 regarding the motion-picture industry bill have received widespread notice and attention, and in all but one case my statement was received with approval. The one word of criticism," he added, "is from my good friend, W. A. Steffes."

Mr. Alexander also inserted a letter of approval from an Indiana exhibitor signing himself "A. H.," which said "We were coming along nicely with some swell concessions from the producers, all that we needed; and that publicity hound, Arnold, threw a monkey wrench into the whole proceedings.

"I have yet to see the time that if I had a grievance I could not sit down with the manager of the district and iron out the trouble," "A. H." concluded.

In his letter, Mr. Steffes reiterated that the "trust" was leaving no stone unturned in its propaganda drive against the Neely bill, and suggested a Congressional investigation of the methods used. The efforts of the proponents, he declared, "were necessary to prevent the bill from being swamped in a sea of propaganda."

The Allied official denied flatly that distributors would make concessions voluntarily, should the bill be delayed; and he outlined the efforts to bring voluntary reforms.

"It would be a denial of justice to stay action on the Neely bill on the theory that the abuses at which it is aimed can or will be remedied by voluntary action of the producer-distributors," he said.

"Because of their general soundness," he told the Congressman, "your observations are dangerous in the present situation and have been gleefully seized upon by the trust.

"The independent home-owned theatres mean more to the domestic economy of the state of Minnesota than the producer-owned chains, the earnings of which do not remain in the state but are remitted to the parent companies in New York.

"Your remarks have been given wide publicity in the trade press and unless you cooperate in getting the underlying facts before the public they may do grave injury to the cause of the independent theatre owners."

Congressman Alexander, at the time, March 6th, that he demanded the Government let industry alone, remarked, in expansion:

"(the industry) . . . should rectify its program, so as to meet the criticism on the part of the public which favors the bill. . . . Why is it necessary to make such business problems matters of legislation? Why do we have to try, and I believe foolishly, to legislate business ethics and principles of business management? It is not only foolish; but it is just another one of the many insidious ways in which we are doing away with individual initiative, contaminating business with politics. . . ."

"Consent Decree" and "Key" Trust Suit

Attorneys and other representatives of the five major defendants, in the Government's New York anti-trust case, which have theatre affiliates, have participated in discussions of out-of-court settlements of the case, which is scheduled for May 1st, it was disclosed on Monday. The representatives of the other three major defendants, Universal, Columbia, and United Artists, it was said, did not know of the discussions to settle the case until the past few days.

The reason for excluding the defendants without theatre properties from settlement discussions was that any settlement must have some solution approaching "divorcement" of theatres from distribution and production.

The attorneys of the three non-theatre-owning companies were privately skeptical, on Monday, of the significance of settlement by "consent decree" to them.

Jack Cohn, vice-president of Columbia, denied, on Monday in New York, that his concern had "indicated any attitude to a consent decree." The denial was directed at a published report that the company would refuse to join a settlement of the case. Mr. Cohn added:

"No executives of our company have ever entered into a discussion which would tend to be a basis for such a report. If Columbia Pictures adopts an attitude in regard to this question, an official announcement will be made at the proper time."

U. S. Questions Schenck In New York Trust Action

Profits for the player's reputation are the prime consideration of Twentieth Century-Fox, in lending its stars to other producing companies, Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board, testified on Monday, in pre-trial examination, in the Government's New York anti-trust prosecution.

The part must help the player, Mr. Schenck noted; and, in determining whether to loan a player out, the company carefully considers it, the story, the reputation of the director, and of the cameraman, he declared.

What houses the picture would play in did not enter the consideraitons, he said.

Denies Standard Payment

He denied a standard payment, among all studios, for the borrowing of talent. He asserted that, generally, the technical men, directors, and writers, were paid for the actual time they were borrowed, and that, generally, stars who were under contract to make a specified number of films per year, were paid for the number of pictures they were borrowed for, regardless of time spent.

A company loaning an ordinary featured player would receive the equivalent of the player's salary, plus an extra three weeks' pay, he said.

Concerning loaning out of sets, he remarked that his company charged 10 per cent of the cost of any such set.

It is more difficult now to borrow stars than when he was head of the United Artists Corporation in the late Twenties, Mr. Schenck said, because at that time "stars were anxious to travel in the illustrious company of pictures that United Artists had then."

Mr. Schenck has no active part in National Theatres' management, he said. He confers about 20 times per year with Spyros Skouras, National Theatres' head, he told special Assistant Attorney General Robert L. Wright, who conducted the query.

He denied that discussions on loaning of talent took plan between him and his brother, Nicholas, president of Loew's during their approximately four conferences per year.

Their discussions during these meetings, he treated lightly. The two brothers criticize each other's product, he said. He tells Nicholas that Loew's spends too much money for pictures, and Nicholas replies that Loew's "make good pictures," he said.

He has no interest in the film industry, apart from ownership of stock in his company and in the United Artists Circuit Theatres, he claimed.

He admitted advantage to his company, in the ownership of theatres. Such ownership, he asserted, meant better exploitation of films, longer first run and advertising of stars.

Spyros Skouras Testifies

National Theatres does not "invade" other territories where exhibitors have built up business over many years and it does not acquire houses in those territories, Spyros Skouras, head of the circuit, testified on Tuesday.

Mr. Skouras said that National Theatres had not increased its theatres since the reorganization of Twentieth Century-Fox in 1934 and that he does not confer with the latter's executives on their distribution policy. He said there was no collusion between large exhibitors on the division of territories, as contended by the government.

A Protest

To Motion Picture Herald:

In your issue of March 9, I am one of 550 "named to testify against the major companies."

I cannot speak for the other 549, but it is grossly inaccurate and unfair to me to have my name so listed. This list was the first information I had that the Government intended to call upon me to substantiate its charges.

The Government's answer stating that I am among those alleged to have knowledge of the monopolies of exhibition in Boston is correct. But this in no way means that I am to testify against the major companies.

In the interest of fair play, I wish you would kindly publicize this statement promptly.

For many years I have subscribed to a number of copies of the Motion Picture Herald because I find them invaluable in keeping abreast of activities in our business and because I believe you try to be accurate in reporting.—Irving A. Isaacs, The Humbolt Theatre, Roxbury, Mass.

The inclusion of Mr. Isaacs' name in the list published was due entirely to the fact that his name was in the list officially issued by the U. S. Attorney General's office.—The Editor.

Other points in the testimony revealed that: he holds 5,000 shares of Twentieth Century-Fox stock; he takes no active part in the management of Skouras Theatres, and that he is of the opinion that the clearance system is necessary.

Freeman Explains Policy

On Wednesday Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount executive studio manager, testified that his company first embarked on a policy of acquiring theatres because exhibitor organizations had cut down its film outlets.

In an aside Mr. Freeman gave a personal recipe for settlement of the suit: "One way is to let these fellows (referring to the Government) run a studio for about six weeks and they'll be willing to 'give the whole industry back to the Indians.'"

On the stand Mr. Freeman told U. S. Attorney Wright that an affiliation between producing companies and theatres "is almost essential," in that large theatre groups could not plan ahead in paying film rentals and meeting union wages if they did not have a definite product supply. Mr. Freeman traced the beginning of Famous Players, now Paramount, in exhibition in 1919.

The Government said William F. Rodgers, of MGM, would take the stand on Tuesday, and Neil F. Agnew, of Paramount, would testify Wednesday, and that Adolph Zukor, Paramount board chairman, probably would follow.

U. S. Cancels Plan to Query Coast Witnesses

Its proposal to make pre-trial depositions of independent exhibitors on the West Coast, was dropped by Government attorneys, last week, in New York Federal Court, in the "key" Government prosecution of the majors for anti-trust violations. The exhibitors, it is understood, will testify personally, at the trial.

The notification to this effect was delivered to New York Government attorneys last Thursday by Paul Williams, special assistant attorney general, who has been investigating on the Coast. The Government had originally intended to begin examination of Hollywood witnesses on April 15th, these to be conducted by Mr. Williams.

Regarding the Government's 300 page set of answers to the majors' interrogatories, it was regarded as certain, this week, in New York, that, at a March 27th hearing in Federal Court, before Judge Henry Goddard, who will try the case, most of the Government stipulations will be protested.

U. S. Extends Time For Columbia Plea

Columbia had, beginning on Monday, an additional two weeks, granted by the Government, in which to decide whether the Government's 300-page answer to the other defendants' consolidated interrogatories, met its own requirements. March 28th is the date on which it must accept the answers or petition for more information.

Universal Pictures, last Friday, served answers to all of the Government's 59 interrogatories. Most of them were labeled confidential. They were immediately sent to Washington by the New York Department of Justice officials.

Third Anti-Trust Suit Filed in Philadelphia

David Milgram, head of the Affiliated Theatres circuit, operating 18 Philadelphia territory theatres, filed a $330,000 triple damages anti-trust suit on Tuesday, in United States district court, that city, against the Warner Theatres and the majors.

This is the third anti-trust action in Philadelphia, and the largest damage suit against the circuit and the majors. In addition to the triple damages, it asks suit costs and attorney fees.

The suit names as defendants, in addition to various Warner corporations, Paramount Pictures, Paramount Picture Distributing Corporation, RKO Radio Pictures, Loew's, Inc., Twentieth Century Fox Film Corporation, Columbia Pictures, Universal Film Exchange, and United Artists.

The suit was filed by Maurice Stern, attorney, for Mr. Milgram, in the name of the Affiliated RFS Corporation and the Rialto Theatres Corporation.

Specifically, it asks damages for its Rialto and Walton theatres in the Germantown area, and alleges that collusion between the Warner circuit and the distributors changed the zoning boundaries in that part of the city, after Milgram had acquired the Walton.

The federal district court in Philadelphia still has another suit, filed in January, by the Admiral theatre, for $225,000, against the same defendants, in an allegedly similar situation.

The anti-trust suit by the Landis Theatre, Vineland, New Jersey, against the majors and Warner Brothers, in the same court, will begin April 8th, it is expected. Eugene Mori operates the Landis. He has been backed by the town's officials.

The anti-trust action by the Gary Theatre Company against the Balaban and Katz circuit and the majors, in Chicago federal court, scheduled to reach decision on Monday, was advanced to next Monday because of the illness of Albert Gavitt, plaintiff's attorney. The court last week announced, orally, its intention to dismiss the case for lack of evidence.

The Midwest Theatres, in its suit against Co-Operative Theatres, in Detroit, has prepared a second amended bill of complaint detailing "conspiracy" and other citations.

Bioff Directs Hollywood Unions by Telephone from Chicago While Awaiting Action on Appeal from Remanding to Jail

Collaborators of William "Willie" Bioff on the Hollywood labor scene refuse to abandon him though the West Coast leader of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and chairman of the Conference of American Federation of Labor Studio Unions is trying by a court appeal to avoid being sent to a Chicago jail to complete a 1922 term. Bioff, so ran a statement from the Conference this week, will "remain as our chairman and will continue to direct film labor negotiations, even if he has to do it from a jail cell."

Negotiations in Hollywood between producers and Bioff's studio union groups over the latter's rescinding of a 10 per cent wage increase, continued stalemated this week.

Given Time to Appeal

The statement came after news was received in Hollywood that Bioff last Friday in Chicago criminal court had lost a round when Judge John Prystalski dismissed Bioff's writ of habeas corpus and ordered him remanded to the House of Correction. However, the judge delayed entering the order until March 25th and continued Bioff's $5,000 bail, thus allowing time for a Bioff appeal to the state supreme court. The following day his attorneys in Springfield, the capital, filed a writ of error, asking the supreme court to review the appellate court decision of 17 years ago.

In the proceedings before Judge Prystalski, State Senator Abraham Marovitz, attorney for Bioff, pleaded that his client had rehabilitated himself.

The judge replied that he had no pardoning power, but that, if the facts given him by Bioff counsel were correct, Governor Henry Horner could pardon him.

He also asserted that the issue in the case was whether the state, after 17 years, still had the right to enforce the judgment against Bioff.

Setting of minium number of weeks work guaranteed on deals with free lance directors as well as setting of minimum salaries will be sought by Screen Directors Guild when bargaining contract is reopened for changes, according to a decision made on Tuesday.

The minority group of the Guild met Monday night to offer a proposal to the board of directors and ask that negotiations include two weeks guarantee on each one reel short subject, three weeks of work on two reel subjects and three weeks on westerns and features. Minimum salaries to be sought are $300 weekly on shorts and $350 weekly on serials and westerns and $500 weekly on features. However, all demands to be presented in negotiations with producers must be approved by the Guild board first.

Local 306 To Press Picketing Tactics

Local 306, New York City projectionists union, the largest in the country, next week will picket non-union New York houses, of which there are only about 15, the union's officials said this week. The picketing will not affect houses which employ members of the Empire State Operators union, Local 306's rival.

This week the local and the circuits with whom it has been negotiating for some time on wage raises awaited the report of a five-man arbitration committee which conferred lengthily last week after several months of meetings.

It has been reported, speculatively, that the projectionists probably would win a 5 to 10 per cent pay raise and a second week's vacation. The projectionists had asked for a 25 per cent pay boost.

The IATSE, which holds its annual convention in Louisville the week of June 3rd, has been reported discussing the organization of television technical workers in New York City.

FRANCO-BRITISH FILM EXCHANGE IS PLANNED

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Sir Kenneth Clark, director of the Films Division of the British Ministry of Information, is planning an exchange of documentary motion pictures with France.

Under the plan, and the official made a recent trip to Paris to study the matter, British pictures would be sent to France to be shown with French sound tracks made in England, and French films dubbed in French would be exhibited in England.

Non-theatrical distribution of 16 mm. pictures in rural areas also is a part of Sir Kenneth's idea.

Newspaper Fights Nick Case Contempt Charge

It "rendered a public service," the St. Louis Post-Dispatch asserted on Monday, in answer to a citation for contempt of court by Circuit Judge Thomas Rowe, arising out of the printing of editorials and cartoons, on March 5th and 6th, calling attention to the difficulties with which a lay mind confronts the fact that John P. Nick, former head of the St. Louis projectionists' union, and State Representative Edward M. Brady were acquitted of criminal charges of extortion the while civil cases for the same offenses were successfully prosecuted.

The publication, in its answer filed before Judge Rowe, also asserted that its action strengthened "public confidence in, and respect for, the courts," and it stood, in defense, on constitutional free speech and free press grounds.

Appearing for the Post-Dispatch were Joseph Pulitzer, president of the Pulitzer Publishing Company, and three staff members, Benjamin H. Reese, Ralph Coghlan and Daniel R. Fitzpatrick.

The Missouri Press Association has offered its legal aid to the newspaper.

Nick and Brady were jointly indicted by a grand jury, some time ago, on charge of extortion of $10,000 from theatre owners of St. Louis in 1936. Nick was acquitted, after several mistrials; Brady won a directed acquittal.

Nick remains under indictment, together with Clyde Weston, former business agent of the local projectionists union, on a charge of $6,500 extortion from theatre owners of that city in 1937. Their trial had been scheduled last Monday, but because of the contempt charge against

Executive Secretaries of Four A's Accompany Officer of Variety Artists in Conference with Large Circuits' Leaders

Climaxing the long threatened drive of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America to unionize talent in all film theatres having stage or vaudeville shows, the executive secretaries of its member unions accompanied Hoyt S. Haddock, executive secretary of its American Guild of Variety Artists, to a meeting on Tuesday in New York with executives of vaudeville circuits.

Other Unions Help

Mr. Haddock, a labor consultant, elected head of the Guild several weeks ago, after organization of the AGVA had lagged due to executive changes, was aided in the sessions by the officials of the Screen Actors Guild, Actors Equity, the American Federation of Radio Artists, and Chorus Equity. These unions already had resolved that their members would not work in theatres where the American Guild is not recognized as sole bargaining agency.

The conference, which may inaugurate a new code for vaudeville performers, drawn up by the Guild several months ago, was held in the office of Charles C. Moskowitz, in charge of the Loew circuit's metropolitan houses. Committees were to be appointed later this week to study disputed points.

Conferences with the management of New York's Roxy theatre were attempted several weeks ago by Mr. Haddock but dropped in favor of meeting with all circuits at once.

Present were L. E. Thompson and William Howard of RKO; Irving Lesser of Roxy; Al Reid of the Fabian circuit; Robert M. Weitman and Harry Leonard of Paramount; Frank Phelps of Warner Bros.; Harold Janecky of Skouras Theatres; William Brandt of Brandt Theatres; Marvin Shenck, C. C. Moskowitz and Sidney Piermont of Loew's; James Porter, attorney for AGVA; Stephen Kent of Screen Actors Guild, and Phil Irving, president of the New York local of AGVA.

Challenge World's Fair Leaders

That the vaudeville union's new management was not letting any grass grow was shown by meetings on the same day by Mr. Haddock with authorities of the New York World's Fair, and with an attorney for 24 Brooklyn and Queens night clubs.

Mr. Haddock asked for a closed shop at the 1940 New York World's Fair, and for union conditions at the Brooklyn and Queens clubs.

The organization on Monday announced the signing of a closed shop agreement with the Havana-Madrid night club, the principals' minimum salaries to be $45 weekly, and chorus minima $30 weekly.

The Four A's ruled last week that its members would not be permitted to work at either the New York exposition or the San Francisco Golden Gate Exposition unless every performer belonged to one of the Four A unions.

Last year, the excuses offered for incomplete unionization, by officials of the fairs, was that they had no control of the labor policies of their concessionaires.

The San Francisco unit of the Variety Artists has been organized completely, and an executive board of 21 members chosen.

For some weeks the Radio Artists and the variety artists' guild have been discussing a plan for joint offices in key cities.

Soundmen Present New Demands to Independents

The Soundmens' Local of the IATSE served notice last Friday in Hollywood to all independent studios except Republic, and to all sound servicing organizations, for new pay rates in relation to hours. The new base pay for soundmen on a weekly basis of 42 hours or less would be, under the new demands, $4.17 an hour, for "Class One" men. The scale which had obtained was $2.37 hourly for a basis of 54 cumulative hours.

In specifying the new pay scales, Harold V. Smith, business representative of the local, wrote that if the agreement was "not signed and in my hands within a reasonable time, to be determined at our discretion, no member thereafter will be permitted to violate rules and regulations and to work for less than minimum wage scales." He also wrote that lack of compliance would be referred to the organization for "financial penalties and economic restrictions."

Letters were sent to the Talisman, Selznick International, General Service and Grand National studios, and to the RCA, Erpi, Glen Glenn and other sound companies. It was said that negotiations with the larger companies would follow.

Richmond Local's Party

The 25th anniversary of the Richmond, Va., Local 360, MPMO, will be celebrated next Wednesday, with a banquet in the Winter Garden of the Hotel Richmond. Leroy Ford is chairman.

Wilmington Local Acts

Local B-94 of the IATSE in Wilmington, Del., last week was negotiating for a contract with the Warner and Loew circuit houses in that city.

Rubin in Federal Bar

The New York Federal Court last Friday admitted, to practice before it, J. Robert Rubin, vice-president and general counsel of Loew's, Inc. It is understood the admission was sought so that Mr. Rubin might take an active part in the defense of the company, in the Government's New York anti-trust prosecution, which begins May 1st. Mr. Rubin, a graduate of Syracuse University, has been a member of the New York State bar since 1906.

IATSE Convention in Louisville June 3rd; Minneapolis Rejected

"Louisville, Kentucky, the week of June 3rd"—this was the word sent out this week from New York national headquarters of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Machine Operators of the United States and Canada, on the site and time of their annual convention, at which President George E. Browne is expected to be reelected.

The convention will be at the Kentucky Hotel.

This was chosen over the Brown Hotel, originally selected, reportedly because of difficulties of the union with J. Graham Brown, owner of the hotel. Mr. Brown's employees, up to last week, didn't belong to a union. He claimed he didn't care whether they joined one, but that he would not force them to join one. The union executives of the city refused to hold a union convention in a non-union hotel.

Edward H. Weyler, secretary of the State Federation of Labor, noted that the disagreement reflected three years of controversy with Mr. Brown.

Minneapolis had been the city originally chosen. Then it was discovered there were not enough hotel rooms available that week, with 1,000 reported to be needed by the Alliance.

Kirsch, Smith Top Exhibitor Groups

The Illinois Allied reelected Jack Kirsch president, and extended his term from the customary one year, to three, at its annual convention, last Saturday, in Chicago.

Other officers elected were Van Namikos, vice-president; Richard Salkin, secretary-treasurer; and Harry Nepo, sergeant-at-arms.

Nate Wolf was named to the directors' board in place of John Jones. All other directors were reelected.

Virginia Committee Reports

The legislative committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Virginia reported to its members recently on the session of the Virginia Assembly which "developed into an active one for the membership of the committee." It was noted in the report that no admission tax was proposed; that proposals for increases in personal and corporate income taxes were defeated; that a measure, sponsored by the committee, was enacted, requiring carnivals and circuses, after June 20th, to register and pay a $500 bond; that the committee defeated a bill which would have given the state Department of Labor the power to make rules and regulations having the effect of law, as to the installation, use, and operation of boilers.

The legislative committee report went into other details of measures proposed or enacted at the Assembly session.

On the committee are Charles A. Somma, chairman; Morton G. Thalheimer, vice-chairman; Nat Glasser, Herman Rubin, Frank O'Brien, Allen Sparrow, R. C. Overbey, Hunter Perry, Benjamin Pitts, Elmore Heins, Sam Bendheim, Jr., Harold Wood, Rives S. Brown, Ellison Loth, Sydney Gates, Charles Roth, C. C. Lincoln, C. L. Abercrombie, and A. CENSORS MADE FIRE 'WATCHDOGS'; LOSS UNDER 2 MILLIONS IN 45 CITIES

Theatre Property Damages Maintain Record Low; Not One Death in Year; Local and National Rules Observed

Winter's heavier than usual fire claim on motion picture theatres this year touched 45 houses in as many cities, as of record, with probably another dozen unreported. Auditorium heating, taxing the systems, again added to the seasonal toll, which however, was not greater than in recent years, continuing a remarkably low rate of personal and estate damage, not a single death took place at the scene of a theatre fire, alongside the usual 10,000 annual deaths by all fires in the United States, and actual damages in dollars ran under two millions, compared to the country's annual fire bill of $302,000,000.

Theatres in virtually every locality now are adhering to strict rules controlling equipment and mass assemblages, as promulgated both by local authorities and national associations of fire underwriters, plus a standardization of technical operations.

Fires and Damages

Following is a listing of theatre fires of the year:

Destruction by fire of seven film theatres in Arkansas within 10 days brought a statement from the state fire marshal, Guy E. Williams, that strict adherence to the rules governing fire prevention in theatres will be required. All theatres, he said, are being inspected and new houses will not be allowed to operate until they have been approved.

The remodeled New theatre, Caraway, Arkansas, operated by C. W. Tipton, was burned with a loss of $7,000. The L and L, Cave City, Walter Lee, operating, had $1,100 damages. Clarendon's Paramount was burned, $2,000 loss suffered by J. W. Crabtree. At Dermott, a booth fire destroyed C. H. McCroskey's Allied, losses put at $20,000. Harrison's Plaza burned, likewise Carl resley's Dixie, Huntsville. Sid Metcalf and S. B. McSwain will replace their destroyed Ritz at Morrilton; also destroyed in Arkansas was the Star, at Star City.

Heavy damage, running from $40,000 to $50,000, hit the Paramount of the Martin-Studstill Enterprises, at Andalusia, Ala., and damages of $25,000 were counted after the burning of the Uniontown in the Alabama town of the same name.

In Kentucky, the Warsaw, at Warsaw, Ky., burned while "Some Like It Hot" ran through the projector; damage, $30,000 to $40,000, and in Pittsfield, Mass., the Capital fared better, with only slight damage in a $150,000 block fire. Western Massachusetts Theatres operate.

The Melba, at Ash Grove, Mo., was destroyed, also the Orpheum, at Parsons, Mo., which will be rebuilt. Much of the interior of the Aladdin, Mound City, Kas., was destroyed (damage, $4,000), and a three-hour fire in the Fallon, at Fallon, Nev., cost $10,000.

The Lisbon, at Lisbon, N. H., burned; damage, $15,000; a boiler room fire in the Colonial, North Kannapolis, N. C., cost $60,000 to that unit of the Maurice Legrende Circuit. Another North Carolina fire was at the Carolina, Goldsboro, where Dan Trueblood, projectionist, aided in the orderly exit

Roof Collapses but No Casualties

In Brooklyn, N. Y., the Lido had a fire but since has reopened. The roof caved, but there were no casualties—due to a quick emptying. Coney Island's Mardi Gras was completely destroyed—losses, $50,000. RKO's Academy of Music, New York, had a heavy smoking.

Undetermined origin was the official finding in the destruction of the Dubar, colored, in Cincinnati; damages of $7,500. Also in Ohio: Overheated furnace fire, La Rue theatre, La Rue, cost, $25,000.

In Oklahoma, trash fire, destroyed the State theatre, Beggs, damage $9,000; Cozy, at Stroud.

The Orpheum, Carlisle, Pa., a four-story building, was burned—a Comerford property; $55,000 damages were the cost of the destruction of the Rivoli, at Ebensburg.

The Majestic, at South Carolina, J. R. Patterson operating, was destroyed, also the Dixie, at Metter, Ga., which cost $60,000, and the Rex, Shinnston, W. Va., operated by Miss L. B. Monroe, who will rebuild. Nebraska had fires at George Monroe's Empress, Kearney, damages, $23,000, and at the Pace, at Gordon, with losses above $50,000.

The Alvarado theatre, Alvarado, Tex., had a $15,000 fire, and Franklin Young's Strand, at Marshall experienced a $40,000 blaze. Also in Texas was the Dodd theatre fire, costing $18,000, at Malakoff, and in West Virginia there was complete destruction of E. H. Whitaker's Lyric, at Winona, and C. B. Hager's Slagle, at Slagle.

Mayor W. L. Crooks, at Benecia, suffered $10,000 damages at his Majestic. Benicia, and a $40,000 fire occurred at the completely destroyed Seminole, Homestead, Fla. The Cozy, La Porte, Ind., got off with but $500 damage to sound equipment, but Chicago's neighborhood Main theatre was wrecked, costing $20,000. Also in Illinois was the fire at George Spicer's LaRose theatre, Roseville, and an Iowa fire at the Garden in Des Moines, where Tom Warner, projectionist, was burned.

Stage Shows Hit

Although some changes in the laws were made during the winter for added fire protection, new Connecticut regulations seemed to represent the only serious interruption of the status quo. The Department of State Police there notified exhibitors that stage shows of any kind will be prohibited in houses which do not adhere to the regulations of firproof proscenium construction and the use of asbestos curtains.

Already affected are the Saybrook and Madison houses of Leo Bonoff, and the Plainfield, oprated by Michael Daly.

None of the many newly-constructed neighborhood or small town theatres complies with these restrictions, it was noted. Loew-Poli's older houses in Waterbury, Bridgport, Meriden, and New Haven, however, will be able to continue vaudeville without interference or with minor repairs.

MISSOURI TAXES SHOW BUSINESS IS BETTER

If sales tax collections are any indication, film theatres did over $600,000 more business in Missouri in 1939 than in 1938. The $315,816 collected under the two per cent sales levy in 1939 from "theatres and picture shows," represents a total business of $15,790,808. In 1938, Missouri collected $303,086, which represented a business of $15,154,318. Total tax collections in 1938 were $20,375,730; in 1939, they were $22,264,482, a new high.

Movie competition, represented by other shows, attractions and amusements, athletic contests and dances, did a total business of $4,101,711 in 1938 and $4,216,555 in 1939, on the basis of the sales taxes collected. Dances fell off slightly, from $249,119 to $239,662, but athletic contests increased from $1,524,318 to $1,635,154, and the first group increased slightly from $2,328,778 to $2,341,745.

This, on the basis of reports from the office of Forrest Smith, state auditor, and collector of the tax.

Arrangement with Maryland Insurance Inspector Binds Board Members to Get Answers to 39 Questions from Theatres

Owners of Maryland's 115 motion picture theatres, excluding Baltimore's 90-odd houses, face a unique situation whereunder the Maryland State Censor Board, maintained by taxes paid by the theatres and the reviewing fees paid by film exchanges, will be used in "snooping" duties to check and re-check theatre properties from cellars to garrets to determine anything that resembles a fire hazard. The arrangement was concluded with John B. Gontrum, state insurance inspector.

A New Venture

This is the first instance in knowledge where any but duly authorized and experienced officers of law, fire, building or other related municipal departments have ruled what constitutes a fire hazard; it is the first time, so far as the record shows, where "political" censors will rule on anything in exhibition except the suitability of a motion picture. Why the City of Baltimore was excluded from the order was not disclosed in the report at hand, but, presumably, it is because of its size, protecting local autonomy.

The blank which each censor must carry and apply to his or her inspection of each theatre, from the sub-cellar to the roof, requires answers, which the censor must personally attest, to the following questions, the 39 of them:

Are there any portable emergency heaters in booth? Is there a carbon tetrachloride extinguisher in booth? Are aisles and stairways to fire exits clear? Are exit doors unlocked and in working order when theatre is occupied? Are exit lights properly maintained? Are "No Smoking" signs posted in auditorium? Is smoking permitted by audience or others? Are suitable ash trays provided in rest rooms? Is heating plant enclosure free of rubbish, ashes and odd storage?

Are janitors' supplies and utensils kept in an approved manner? Are janitors' used cleaning rags properly disposed of? Are stage dressing rooms clean and orderly? Are extinguishers in theatre conspicuously located and are soda and acid extinguishers recharged annually and dated? Are ashes deposited in metal containers? Is oil-burning equipment defective, improperly maintained or leaking? Are metal containers provided by paper towels in rest rooms?

Was anyone smoking in booth? Are walls free from posters, pictures, placards, etc.? Is booth clean and orderly? Does booth contain clothing, magazines, newspapers, furniture? Is fire door on entrance in good working order and is it held open or fastened open except by fusible link? Are shutters on peep and focus holes in good working order and are they held open except by fusible links? Is film in booth kept in an all-metal cabinet?

Is there a can with a self-closing lid for scrap film?

Was any film found outside of booth; how much; where? Does amount of film cement in booth exceed three ounces? Is there a sand pail for hot carbon? Is there any temporary or defective wiring in booth? Is a "No Admittance" sign posted at entrance of projection booth? Do ushers or other unauthorized persons frequent booth? Is operator experienced and careful in his duties? Is relief operator competent? Are "No Smoking" signs in booth?

VIRGINIA CITY PARTY

WITH whoopee and parades Warner Brothers, its advertising and publicity department bolstered by recruits from the star roster, took possession of Reno and Virginia City for the premiere of its "Virginia City". They found that ghost towns don't come to life without a struggle.

Virginia City Lives Again, as Warner Party Tells the World

160 Newspaper Writers and 35 Stars at Wild West Premiere

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER
Aboard Virginia City Special

Data provided and sworn to by a staff of extremely fatigued young men in charge of the press car, returning from Virginia City, are to the effect that, up to this point, correspondents aboard have filed approximately four times as many words of copy describing their experiences of the last three days than were filed, in total, on the exploitations expedition to Dodge City, Kan., some eleven months ago. The implication is that the cross-country consequence of all this reportorial enterprise will be a ticket wicket response likewise exceeding that obtained for "Dodge City." "Dodge City" was a double Box Office Champion. (A Showmen's Review of "Virginia City" is on page 42.)

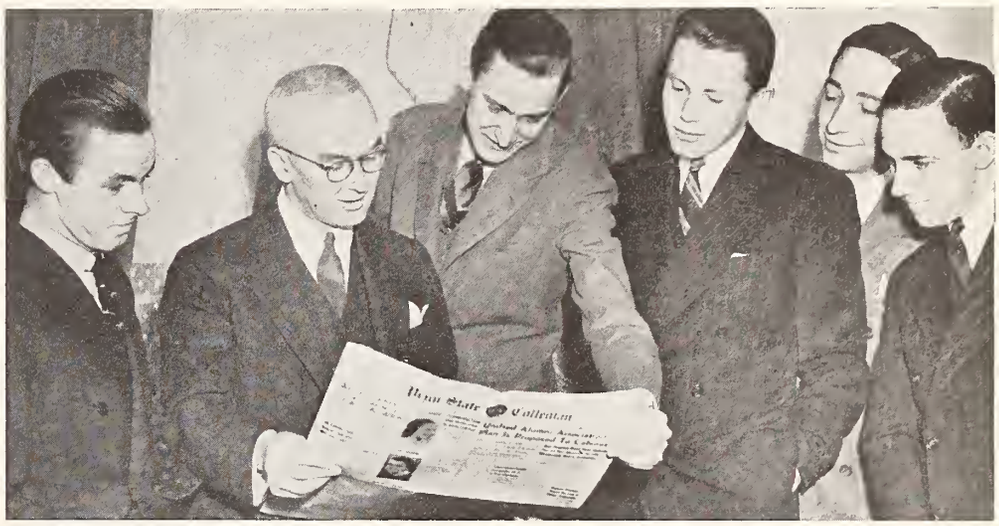
More Aboard and More to Write

There is good reason to accept the above mentioned data as reliable. There are more correspondents aboard—some 160 at last checkup—and there is more for them to write about. There are more stars aboard—35 of them made the rounds of the three Reno theatres presenting the picture last night (Saturday)—and the site of the film story, a ghost town abruptly thriving with the lusty life of a spectacular past, is itself a rich source of copy for columnists. Dodge City had come under the softening influence of civilizing commerce; Virginia City is unchanged, inclusive of the fighting in the streets, not staged.

It is set down here on the authority of S. Charles Einfeld, Warner vice-president in charge of advertising and publicity and guiding spirit of this and the Dodge City invasion, that the present undertaking in behalf of exhibition's box office represents a substantially larger financial outlay. It is of record that "Virginia City" is a more costly production, structurally and technically, and offers a more compelling array of marquee names in the cast. Mr. Einfeld does not go on to declare that the gross intake of the new film will exceed that of last year's enterprise, but his point is inescapable.

25,000 in Spending Mood

It is a complex and arresting exploitation on technique which the resourceful Mr. Einfeld has devised for this wholesale promotion of a motion picture. Possibly only the president of the Reno Chamber of Commerce could tell you precisely how much money the merchants of that gay and money-wise city appropriated toward defraying the expense of bringing 18 carloads of visitors from Hollywood, plus feeder trains from New York and Chicago, but the report that it was plenty goes undenied.



Probably only he knows exactly, too, how much the merchants, dealing in their varied and fascinating commodities on their famous 24-hour schedule, reaped in profit from an attraction that brought 25,000 all-day and all-night visitors to their town in spending mood.

The nub of the matter is that civic organizations along the line of approach, civic hosts at the scene of arrival and thereabouts, together with assorted other indirect beneficiaries of these expeditions, meet most or all of the expense, nationwide publicity contributing to exhibitor profit accruing as a virtually gratis asset.

Naturally, this aspect of these enterprises has not been stressed. A carload of movie stars might attract a lesser turnout of townsmen at the stopovers if their presence were billed in the nature of a Rotarian enterprise. Conducted as they are, gaily and as if without commercial intent, these exhibitions of studio interest in Collegiate Press Sees "Johnny"

Twentieth Century-Fox in New York, last Friday, gave the first soda-pop motion picture "cocktail" party on record—coca-cola flowing right from the bottle, through straws, with aqua pura topping it off as "chaser." And the occasion was one of those big-ballyhoo "field premieres" at that.

Charles Edward McCarthy, director of the company's advertising-publicity department, brought to New York 35 young editors of as many college papers in the east, to get their reactions to Fox's new "Johnny Apollo," produced by Darryl Zanuck, for the reason that "Johnny Apollo" was the alias of a rich college boy whose father's Wall Street depredations caused the boy to take the "road to ruin" via the gangster route, which eventually ended behind bars. Another reason for the assemblage, which went unmentioned, concerned the little matter of obtaining some space for the picture in the college papers, which are read by many thousands of prospective paying customers.

Mr. McCarthy and his press crew, consisting of Rodney Bush, Earl (Pink) Wingart, Bill Chambliss, Irving Kahn and Steve Freeland, gathered at New York's St. Moritz hotel on Central Park South to greet their guests at a little warming-up reception in Suite 414. When the Broadway trade press arrived at reception hour, it found the "party" in full swing, sipping soda-pop, of all things — "there's nothing finer than 'pop' for the youth of our land," said Mr. McCarthy, remembering the 21-year-old average age of the boys.

That and a banquet some hours later led up to Mr. McCarthy's main point—a fast motor cavalcade for all hands to a surprise premiere of "Johnny Apollo" at George Skouras' Victoria theatre at Ossining, in the very shadow of the Sing Sing Prison.

Mr. McCarthy had considered a full-dress arc-light "Hollywood opening" right in Sing Sing, using the prison's emergency searchlights, all of which was okay with the prison authorities, until they learned that the climactic moment of the picture was a first-class jailbreak.

The college boys were given another banquet Saturday night, were taken to see a Broadway play, "Too Many Girls," the same evening, and started home Sunday, after they held a forum on "Johnny Apollo" over CBS that morning, when the picture above was taken. Robert Benchley, Jr., of the Harvard Lampoon, is standing on the extreme left beside Mr. McCarthy and four other young journalists.

Virginia City Gets New Lease on Life crowds, show the citizens what movie stars really look like, and sow good will.

The over-zealousness of some of the natives to get a look at the visiting Hollywood glamour girls and boys resulted in a little roughness, and that, too, was taken by all in their stride.

Complete Coverage

Coverage of the present expedition has been complete beyond precedent. Associated Press, United Press and International News Service have full staffs aboard the train. Metropolitan newspapers, from the august New York Times down to the least august of tabloids, have been represented. The pictorial magazines, and some not so pictorial, have their camera men along, and wherever the train has stopped there has been a crew with microphone to clamber onto the observation car platform and make the air lanes available, this phase of operations attaining peak with a national NBC hookup airing an hour program from historic Piper's Opera House in Virginia City.

It may be interpolated here, so showmen may know, that the worn term, "working press," is not abused in its application to the men and women who go along on these journeys in the public's entertainment interest. On Friday, leaving Hollywood at noon, they covered platform addresses and impromptu ceremonies at half a dozen stops, the last around midnight. Up at 8 next morning, they covered an address of welcome by the Governor of Nevada at Reno, a miles-long parade of floats, bands, exhibits and reproductions of the gay past before noon, and then, filing reports of these exercises, boarded buses to be taken to Virginia City, 30 miles away and mostly up.

Thorough Preparation

Virginia City, populated by about 500 hardy citizens in these latter days, somehow had marshaled a population counting 20 times that number, and the preparation, in the old tradition, had been long and thorough. It was a loud, demanding and peremptory public that had to be dealt with here, as stories seeping out for weeks to come will verify. This matter attended to, the press was rushed back to the train for a scheduled two hour rest period, arriving two hours too late for it, and then there was the premiere to be covered, a ball to be attended after that, and if a reporter had his copy on the wire by 3 a.m. there was still the town and its newsworthy night life to be inspected professionally or however.

Among the stellar personalities making the trip were Errol Flynn, star of the picture, Ken Murray, master of ceremonies, Leo Carrillo, ditto, Humphrey Bogart, Rosemary Lane, May Robson, Alan Hale, Bruce Cabot, Mary Astor, Guy Kibbee, Patricia Ellis, Gilbert Roland, Hobart Bosworth, Tom Mix, Bill Boyd and Jeffrey Lynn.

Six Writers on "History"

Walter Wanger's film "Personal History," inspired by Vincent Sheean's non-fiction best seller of the same title, will give screen play credit to six writers, James Hilton, Charles Bennett, Robert Benchley, Alfred Hitchcock, Joan Harrison and Alma Reville.

Form Jewish Film Company

The Jewish National Film Corporation has been incorporated in Albany, N. Y., by Benjamin J. Weinberg, H. G. Kosch and Jean Sikoff, all of New York City.

ANOTHER CHAMBER BACKS A PREMIERE

City officials of Albany, Ga., have voted to finance a Chamber of Commerce goodwill tour into Florida for the world premiere of Paramount's "The Biscuit Eater," scheduled April 11th at the Albany theatre, Georgia. A. E. Runnels, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, and J. E. Legreve, director of the organization, left Wednesday to make a circuit of every large city in Florida. The two will be press agents for the picture, carrying copy prepared by Paramount for each key city newspaper.

"The Biscuit Eater" gets its title from Georgia vernacular for "no good dog." Billy Lee, Cordell Hickman, Helen Millard and Richard Lane are starred in the picture, with Promise, the dog.

Pennsylvania Censors Fight Obscene Films

A drive against obscene films, to which the Pennsylvania State Board of Motion Picture Censors has pledged its cooperation, was instituted this week in Philadelphia by Sergeant Raymond Latchford, head of the city's vice squad, which recently has directed its attention against punchboards and pinball machines.

The State Board indicated that it would view all films seized and Mrs. Edna Carroll, chairman; John Clyde, vice-chairman; and Workman Druver, executive clerk of the board, will attend all court hearings to aid in the prosecution.

With detectives posing as customers to obtain the necessary evidence, police initiated the drive last Monday, when 100 reels of film and a projector were seized in a raid on a camera supply house in the city. They arrested Benjamin Malena, who was held under $1,500 bail pending a hearing. On Wednesday, police arrested Albert Burry, a radio repair man, for possession of four reels of asserted obscene films, and held on $1,000 for court. Burry was seized in his shop by detectives, who posed as customers. An attorney for Burry insisted that the films had not been offered for sale.

"Birth" Appeal Postponed

The argument on "The Birth of a Baby," scheduled before the Court of Appeals last week, has been postponed until next term. Its ban for exhibition in New York State was upheld last year by the Appellate division. One dissenting vote gave the American Committee on Maternal Welfare, Inc., and Sam Citron, appellants, the right to appeal.

Stock Transferred

The North American Co., of Chicago, will transfer to the Associated Music Publishers, Inc., all the outstanding capital stock of Wired Radio, Inc., a subsidiary. The Associated Music Publishers will retire $500,000 of preferred stock, held by the North American Co., out of cash proceeds, and repay the balance of the North American Co., investment from royalties.

U.S. Films Hold Argentine Mart

American films continued in the dominating position in the Argentina market in 1939, according to unofficial figures from the office of the American Commercial Attaches in Buenos Aires to the Motion Picture Division of the Department of Commerce. The figures show that 309 of the 455 films exhibited in Argentina last year were American or 69 per cent of all films shown.

This compares with 323 American films out of a total of 492 shown in Argentina in 1938; 394 of 555 in 1937, and 366 of 518 in 1936. The greatest increase in the last four years is shown by Argentina domestic product, which rose from 18 films in 1936 to 52 in 1939. Germany, on the other hand, was second to the United States in 1936 with 42 films but only had seven films exhibited in 1939.

The nationality of other films shown in Argentina in 1939 were as follows: France, 47; Great Britain, 17; Italy, 10; Spain, 6; Mexico, 4, and others, 4. This compares with the preceding year as follows: France, 52; Great Britain, 19; Italy, 8; Spain, 11; Mexico, 8, and others, 10.

The above figures must be considered in light of the following additional factors. 1. The number of copies of each film varies considerably; the average number of copies for an American feature is five, but this average is higher for Argentina films and lower for European films. 2. The figures include only the pictures originally shown in Buenos Aires first run houses. Omitted are some 60 or 70 films, including a number of westerns, which are not reviewed by the trade papers there; the additional pictures are mostly American. 3. Newsreels and short subjects, also mostly American, are likewise not included.

A preliminary estimate indicates that approximately 65 feature films are planned by Argentina studios in 1940. This number is divided among the national producers as follows: Argentine Sono Film, 15; Lumiton, 8; E.F.A., 10; Pampa Film, 10; Rio de La Plata, 6; Patria, 2; Mendez Delfino, 2; Nira, 1; Buenos Aires Film, 6; Side, 1, and Atlas, 4.

Opens South African House

The 20th Century theatre, first South African house in which Twentieth Century-Fox has an interest, was opened Friday in Johannesburg. It seats 2,200 and will operate in opposition to the Metro and Schlesinger first-runs in that city. The cost of the entire development, including the theatre, was about $2,000,000. The theatre will be the major outlet in South Africa for Twentieth Century-Fox and United Artists films.

Preferred Claim Ruling

The court of appeals, at Toledo, Ohio, has ruled that a deposit of $9,728, made by the Seitz Theatre Company, Sandusky, Ohio, in the closed Commercial Banking and Trust Company of that city, is a preferred claim and should be paid in full because of a written agreement that it was to be set apart in the trust department.

Closing Des Moines Office

With the resignation of Frank D. Rubel, Des Moines manager, Harold F. Field of Pioneer Theatres is closing the Des Moines office. The Minneapolis headquarters will serve the 17 Iowa houses.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Young Blood

(Part II)

Young producers, art directors, talent heads and others are having their day in Hollywood, as well as editors, writers and directors. Perhaps the most spectacular, without having yet made a film, is a leading native of Kenosha, Wisconsin, 24-year-old Orson Welles, currently under contract at RKO Radio to act, direct and write as well as produce.

Other young producers at RKO include George Stevens, who also directs his pictures, and George Haight, who handled "The Life of Vernon and Irene Castle." At that studio, too, is Julius Evans, who handles talent and casting after having been a stage director here and in London.

Matty Fox Only 28

At Universal, 28-year-old Matty Fox is assistant to the president, a post he has held for the last two years, and there, too, is Jack Otterson, supervising art director.

James Roosevelt has actively entered the production field for himself through the recently formed Globe Productions, releasing through United Artists. Hal Roach, Jr., already has seen action as an associate producer.

MGM has five of its producers under the age of 35, including Joseph Mankiewicz, who joined that studio in 1933 to write, and whose last picture was "Strange Cargo." Milton Bren, after being executive producer with Hal Roach, joined MGM, and last produced "Remember."

The List Grows

After having been a short subjects producer, Jack Cummings, who began to work in films in 1922, when he was 17, went to features. His latest picture is "Broadway Melody of 1940." Also graduated from the ranks of short subjects is Jack Chertok, slated to produce features after having been MGM's short subjects producer. Richard Goldstone, currently co-producer with Mr. Chertok, is to carry on in that department.

At Columbia, Leon Barsha is producing westerns starring Bill Elliott and Charles Starrett, after having been a cutter and a director. Robert Fellows, at Warners, made his debut as an associate producer with "Virginia City." Wolfgang Rheinhardt's latest was "Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet," and William Cagney is now working on "City for Conquest."

William Thomas, of Paramount, was associate producer of "The Farmer's Daughter." At that studio are Keith Grennan, manager, Cliff Lewis, advertising and publicity director, and Roy Fjastad, manager of the music department under Louis Lipstone.

(This is the second of two articles on younger members of the industry. The first appeared in last week's issue.)

CAMERAS TURNING ON NINE PICTURES

This week in Hollywood saw the start of nine films, more than the number put before the cameras since the beginning of February. Six films were finished, three less than last week; 32 were shooting, against the 35 of the week before; 20 were being prepared, two less than in the previous period, and 60 being edited, compared to last week's 64.

Work was started on "The Lone Wolf Meets a Lady" and the third of the Elliott westerns at Columbia, "Pals of the Purple Sage," Monogram; "Anne of Windy Poplars," RKO Radio; "Covered Wagon Days," Republic; "The Young People" and "Million Dollar Diamond," Twentieth Century-Fox; "Ski Patrol," Universal, and "Brother Orchid," Warner Brothers.

Completed were "Edison, the Man," Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer; "Destiny," Paramount; "Grandpa Goes to Town," "Young Buffalo Bill" and "In Old Missouri," Republic, and "Sandy Is a Lady," Universal.

Continuing to lead in the number of pictures currently shooting was MGM, with "Two Girls on Broadway," "Waterloo Bridge," "Pride and Prejudice," "The Mortal Storm," "Twenty Mule Team," "Susan and God," "Andy Hardy Meets a Debutante" and "Boom Town." Before the cameras at Columbia were "Dead Man's Isle"; at Monogram, "Tom Boy"; Paramount, "The Ghost Breakers," "Henry Aldrich No. One" and "North West Mounted Police"; RKO, "Tom Brown's School Days"; Republic, "Women in War"; Hal Roach, "Turnabout"; Edward Small, "South of Pago Pago"; Twentieth Century-Fox, "Lillian Russell," "Maryland" and "Cisco Kid No. Three"; Universal, "If I Had My Way" and "I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby," and Warner Brothers, "Sea Hawk," "All This and Heaven, Too," "Torrid Zone" and "Flight Eight."

Three short subjects were completed; one apiece by MGM, Columbia and RKO. None started or was shooting, but nine were being prepared and 11 edited.

FLASHING OF NEWS EVENTS CALLED MAIN TELEVISION AID TO THEATRES

NBC "Trouble Shooter" Says Medium Will Help Exhibitor with Trailers, Hollywood with Story and Player Demands

by ARTHUR HUNGERFORD

When a new medium for mass communication and entertainment is launched, there is always the feeling among established allied enterprises that they may be adversely affected. We already know, however, that television will be successful only insofar as it not only adds a new service for the home but also strengthens existing entertainment mediums. The television industry already gives promise of becoming a major enterprise, providing thousands of new jobs. It is true that there will be adjustments in living habits as there were in the case of other engineering developments, for example, the telephone, the motion picture, and the radio. As the television medium is developed, its net effect on allied industries will be one of benefit. It will not displace other media. It will build a new enterprise which will draw to some extent on existing enterprises, but will attain an identity quite peculiar to its own characteristics.

Notes Radio-Screen Collaboration

As radio and motion pictures grew to full stature, we saw a growing collaboration between the two media. Many important radio programs today feature talent which either has become or will become promising names for exploitation at the theatre box-office, when movies featuring these stars are released. It is true that radio programs have also made use of the services of great Hollywood stars. This has had a definite promotional value in keeping the star's name before the public between motion picture productions.

With the development of television as a practical home service, providing pictures and sound in the home, many exhibitors feel that the potential threat in television is serious. In order to arrive at a just conclusion it is first necessary to consider the fundamental characteristics, for only insofar as the two mediums are similar in their impact on the individual can they be called seriously competitive.

Television is first and primarily a communication medium. It is a means by which happenings can be communicated by picture and by sound to a widely scattered mass audience. This is television's greatest mission. To serve this function, it is necessary to provide elaborate facilities, including networks of television stations and millions of television receivers in the homes. It is at once obvious that there are not sufficient events of great national interest to justify this tremendous investment in facilities unless other uses could be found for the same facilities. Add to this the complication that television will be a free service to the American home.

Advertising, Education, Entertainment

Among the other uses for a great new television communication system are the possibilities of advertising merchandise. With the double force of sight and sound, it will be many times easier to impress upon a prospective consumer the advantages of purchasing advertised merchandise. It will be in this fashion that television will earn its way. We may expect network television programs featuring famous people like Jack Benny; we may also expect the use of commercial films; we further expect some use of entertainment films in conjunction with minute movies to deliver the commercial message.

Television has a third major service to perform in the educational field. Programs of instruction on a thousand different branches of every day activities will form a large part of our future schedules. Nor is this instructional value limited to any field.

Lastly, but by no means the least important, are the tremendous entertainment possibilities of television, since it is technically possible to produce full-length plays, variety programs, musical programs, and novelties. In addition, it is technically possible to transmit motion picture film practically without limitation, which further increases the scope of the television medium. It is in this category that television may seem to infringe on the status quo in the film industry. It is true that we now broadcast complete movies such as might be seen in the theatres. We are agreed, however, that this is definitely not ideal. When television becomes prosperous, we will use only movies prepared specially for television. Broadly, the use of film on television will assume a position comparable to the place of the electrical transcription in radio. Film will be used where it is desired to take advantage of the most extreme flexibility possible, while permitting the producer to preserve a program for later exhibition on remote television stations.

"Commercials" Most Popular

In addition to the theatrical films now televised, NBC also uses a great many commercial motion pictures. Still other parts of our film schedule are linked in some way with the personal appearance of a narrator who may be a great explorer or an authority in his chosen field. This type of film has proved far more popular with our audiences than other types. Programs succeed best when they are produced with a small audience of four or five in mind. They are directed to entertain the family group, and not an auditorium audience.

There are other essential differences. For example, there is little immediate prospect of a widespread use of color. In the theatre, the color feature is gradually taking its place as standard practice.

From the above analysis of the fundamental characteristics of television, it is apparently not a serious hazard to the motion picture exhibitor. And, on the constructive side, television can do much to help the motion picture exhibitor. Television undoubtedly will be used by the picture companies as a promotional medium to direct attention to motion picture features. This already has been tried successfully. The National Broadcasting Company on two occasions has broadcast trailers advertising feature motion pictures, even to the point of attaching a theatre identification.

Players and Stories

Long program schedules on television will demand fantastic amounts of literary material and likewise a tremendous number of actors and actresses.

In the field of news, television will make its greatest contribution to the motion picture theatre. If the theatre is in a position to help satisfy the insatiable appetite for news, the box-office growth will follow. This will be an accomplished fact through the use of television in the theatre itself. Already several theatres in New York City have installed television receiving sets in their lounges. It is not difficult to imagine the tremendous box-office appeal of a big screen television projection of the running of the Kentucky Derby, at the exact moment during which it occurs. Nor can we be too optimistic about the appeal of a nationally important prizefight, which could be viewed by everyone in the theatre as if they were in a ringside seat at Madison Square Garden. One promoter has intimated privately that he could conceive of a day when heavyweight championship bouts would take place in well lighted small arenas and be viewed by a television audience in hundreds of theatres.

Indirect Benefits

There may be other beneficial effects of an indirect nature. These advantages come from the fact that we do use a considerable amount of motion picture film and that we may continue to do so for some time. It is logical to assume that a large proportion of these pictures will be of a commercial or semi-commercial nature. It is also reasonable that with greater production of motion pictures, unit cost of production may be reached.

Lastly, television can make use of millions of feet of old motion picture film, for which the exhibitor no longer has any interest.

In these ways, television will help the motion picture industry, producer and exhibitor alike. In the logical order of events, the advent of television is merely the metamorphosis of radio from a purely sound medium to a sound and sight medium. As the sound motion picture has almost entirely displaced the silent motion picture, so radio must expect a great adjustment. Yet radio is facing this inevitable adjustment with high courage and is offering to the country and to the whole entertainment industry a new medium whose proportions and ramifications we can only begin to discover at this early stage. We feel that the motion picture industry also has much to gain in the development of a strong television medium. Television invites the cooperation of the film industry, producer and exhibitor alike.

Recognizing the existence of criticisms in some film exhibition quarters of broadcasting's box-office competitive factors and now the growing expressions of fear in exhibition of potential television competition, the National Broadcasting Company in New York this week assigned Arthur Hungerford, its contact man and "trouble shooter" in relations with the film industry, to explain its position both as the largest broadcaster in the U. S. and as the principal telecaster of the day, from this viewpoint: "Television as an Aid to the Exhibitor".

Mr. Hungerford, for NBC, finds that television will not supplant any existing media, that it will help the exhibitor when advance trailers on features are telecast, tying in with specific bookings, will open new talent and story sources, hasten Hollywood's grooming of "starlets", and aid the box office through telecast "flashes" on news and sports events "piped" direct to a theatre audience.

ARMSTRONG PLEADS HIS CASE FOR FREQUENCY MODULATION BEFORE FCC

Intimates at Hearing on Permission to Enter Commercial Field That "Organized" Radio Is Reluctant to Adopt System

by FRANCIS L. BURT in Washington

Frequency-modulation's static-free method of broadcasting, on Monday set out to determine its "place in the sun" at Washington hearings designed by the Government to ascertain if FM stations have reached "a stage of development that is acceptable for rendering regular as distinguished from experimental broadcast service to the public." The hearings were scarcely an hour old before the Federal Communications Commission, when there were signs that FM's orbit would be spotted by the opposition of the "big" radio interests, as expected.

Commercial Sanction Is Question

Actually, the question before the FCC is to determine whether FM will be granted permission to enter into commercial broadcast service. That question hangs on whether the Commission will allocate sufficient bands for the projected service, which will be broadcast only in the ultra-high frequencies.

One of the chief problems appearing to face the FCC in the hearing is the clash of FM broadcasting with television in the demand for the ultra-high frequency allocations. Major Armstrong minced no words in asking for FM assignments in television territory, under the guidance of his counsel, Horace Lonus.

The potential significance of FM was disclosed by MOTION PICTURE HERALD, in two articles, on December 9th and 16th, pages 29 and 37, respectively, in which it was told that "battle lines" were forming in radio over the "revolution" expected in broadcasting from FM, necessitating the eventual "junking" of some 40,000,000 home radio receivers, and all old broadcasting stations.

Moves to Larger Auditorium

Before an audience so large that the sessions had to be transferred from the Interstate Commerce Commission hearing room ordinarily used by the FCC for large gatherings to the Department of Labor auditorium, Major Edwin L. Armstrong, radio inventor, and first "witness," presented a full exposition of his FM system of broadcasting which, he predicted, in the course of a decade will supersede the amplitude modulation now in use. Major Armstrong is professor of electrical engineering at Columbia University.

Inferentially, he developed that "organized" radio interests were reluctant to adopt his system, which he told a MOTION PICTURE HERALD correspondent between sessions can be adapted with equally beneficial results to both the visual and audio transmissions of television stations.

This reluctance was brought out in his testimony. He said that in 1935 a long series of experimental transmissions were made from a frequency-modulation equipped two kilowatt television transmitter installed by Radio Corporation of America in its Empire State Building station, but after those demonstrations RCA expressed no interest in frequency modulation.

Reproduces Sound-Film Record

To demonstrate the difference in reception between frequency and amplitude modulated stations, Mr. Armstrong reproduced for the FCC a sound-film record he had made of reception under adverse conditions, which appeared to bear out his claims that FM reception under such conditions is superior.

The inventor of Frequency Modulation disclosed that radio stations using his system have taken a leaf out of the television book and have been experimenting with radio relays for the linking of stations into chains.

Mr. Armstrong testified before the FCC that real high-fidelity receptions cannot be achieved on the present broadcast band by either FM or AM stations because of the fact that, at the second Hoover conference in the early 'twenties, "eight wise men, of whom I was one" felt that a ten-kilocycle separation would be adequate and that separation became the basis of the present allocation system.

In the ultra-high frequencies above 25,000 kilocycles, however, he said, high-fidelity can be achieved by using a wider band. FM operation does require a wider band than AM transmission, he told the commission, but the sharply limited radius of signals at those frequencies makes it possible to put a considerable number of stations on the same channel, in the case of FM service, because of the ability of receivers to select a signal only slightly stronger than another on the same frequency. With AM operation, he contended, such selection is not possible.

17 Stations in Operation

Mr. Armstrong argued that FM transmission has been proved to have advantages which merit the granting of a specific space in the radio spectrum. Some 17 stations using the system already are in operation and their records fully support the claims made for frequency modulation, he said. There are three manufacturers producing transmitters and ten with licenses to make receivers.

Major Armstrong was on the stand for two full days, a large part of the time under a barrage of questions from members of the commission and its staff.

Under cross-examination, he disclosed that the FM group wants an area in the radio spectrum in the neighborhood of 42,000 kilocycles, which would necessitate the ousting of television from frequencies assigned it in that region. However, he declared, this would work no hardship on television, which is not using the space assigned it and which could be adequately provided for in other frequency bands.

His suggestion that if a substantial part of the spectrum in the area desired could be granted all the problems of FM broadcasting would be solved brought from FCC Chairman James Lawrence Fly a demand that the group submit a definite and "feasible" program of development before the commission takes any action.

Major Armstrong told the commission that the introduction of FM broadcasting would result in a reduction in congestion in the present broadcasting band, but that there was no reason to believe it would put existing broadcasters out of business. "The present broadcasting band will continue to operate just as the old Model T Fords continued to operate until they were worn out or the public found they could get a better automobile," he observed.

During the course of his testimony, the inventor disclosed that the sale of his receiving set patents—the regenerative circuit, the superheterodyne and the super-regenerative circuit—brought him a total of $755,000, every cent of which has been sunk in research on frequency modulation.

He submitted copies of the licenses which are being granted transmitter and receiver manufacturers and broadcasters for use of the frequency modulation system, explaining that the transmitter manufacturers are charged no royalty on sets manufactured but are required to make a flat payment of not more than $25,000, which is waived if the manufacturer agrees to spend the money in research.

Broadcasters are charged a flat sum, dependent on power, for each transmitter, the figure ranging from $300 to $5,000, and the license granted is good for the life of the transmitter.

A number of transmitter manufacturers are negotiating for licenses, he said, but only three have thus far been granted, to General Electric, Western Electric and Radio Engineering Laboratories.

Battle Lines Drawn

Lines for the fight between the FM broadcasters and the television branch of the industry were drawn Tuesday by Paul Porter of the Columbia Broadcasting System, who told the commission that as between the two CBS was more interested in the development of picture radio.

Mr. Porter offered no direct testimony, explaining that his organization had not undertaken research in frequency modulation, and appeared for the purpose of putting Columbia on record. Opposition to the FM proposals will be offered next week by Radio Corporation of America, which is expected to head the resistance to the proposed seizure of television channels.

The hearings were to continue through Thursday afternoon, to be resumed again Monday and will probably continue through most of that week.

RCA EXPANDING TELEVISION PLANS

Last week at a sales meeting of 400 RCA Victor dealers in New York, Thomas F. Joyce, vice-president and advertising director of RCA Manufacturing, announced a program of RCA-NBC television expansion, including a campaign to sell 25,000 television receivers in the New York area. A substantial reduction in the price of sets and extension of NBC television were also announced.

This week the merchandising campaign began with a full page ad in the New York Times and New York Herald-Tribune, in Motion Picture Herald and Motion Picture Daily, and elsewhere, signed by David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America.

It was institutional copy, the only one of its kind planned by the parent company to acquaint the public with the new television service. Future advertising in the campaign, RCA said, would be handled by manufacturing companies and through department stores selling telecasters.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

Cliff Edwards, the voice of Jiminy Cricket in Walt Disney's "Pinocchio," also had a voice in "Gone With the Wind." Engaged by Dave Selznick for "Wind," Edwards felt that a milestone in his histrionic career had arrived. Director Victor Fleming had him prepare with greasepaint, soldier uniform, etc. But as the cameras kept grinding, they would stop at Vivien Leigh and just skim the others on the set. Edwards kept saying his lines.

After the sequence was shot, Edwards directed a question to the director: "I saw the camera going around but it shot only Miss Leigh. What was the idea of having me in makeup and uniform if you didn't want me in the picture?"

"All we wanted was your voice," replied Fleming. "But we thought you'd be more in atmosphere if you were madeup."

Pet aversion of bachelor U. S. Supreme Court Justice James C. McReynolds is tobacco. This antipathy got a motion picture newsreel cameraman a brisk lecture on the Justice's recent 78th birthday, as disclosed by Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen.

The Justice was coming jauntily out of his fashionable 16th Street apartment house when the newsreel man, chewing a cigar, spoke up: "Mr. Justice, would you mind doing that over? My camera was out of focus."

McReynolds complied, then scowled and snapped: "Young man, if you hadn't been chewing on that filthy weed and had been paying attention to your business you would have got your picture the first time."

Maybe Hitler and his Nazis aren't so tough on war restrictions after all. True, they won't lift a finger to help the "outside" picture business, or many another line which is feeling the iron hand, but they have relented on some other things. California's David Weissman reports that dairy products are now manufactured by the Nazis from coal. Oh, for a newsreel picture of Goering milking a coal mine!

The mail these days is arriving with clippings from Southern exhibitors who are chuckling over the "Gone With the Wind" review written by one Jack Carver for his Toombs County Democrat, newspaper down at Lyons, Georgia, where Mr. Carver concluded that if Rhett Butler had joined the Lost Cause in the second reel instead of after intermission, the Confederacy would have won the war. He finds Rhett "strangely reminiscent of Clark Gable," and "a cross between Jessie James and Little Boy Blue."

"Gerald O'Hara was Scarlett's pa," observes Carver. "He was most animal like. Proud as a peacock, he roared like a lion and rode like a dog. After Sherman came he was crazy as a bedbug.

"Scarlett was in love with Ashley Wilkes, who was in love with his cousin Melanie who was in love with Ashley, and so they were married.

"This irritated Scarlett no end and so, in quick succession she married, for spite and cash respectively, a couple of fellers whose names we didn't get. But then, neither did Scarlett for long.

"Our Uncle Lum considered playing Rhett but turned it down when he found out there wasn't anything but mint in the mint juleps.

"During the siege of Atlanta, only three things were running. Belle's place, Prissy's nose, and the laundry that kept Rhett's white suits snow white. You'd have loved Belle. Everybody did.

"Melanie's baby arrived about the same time Sherman did. Both were equally welcome to Scarlett.

"It was, so far as our painstaking research has revealed, the first baby ever born in technicolor.

"Anyway, the South lost the war again in the picture. (What could you expect with a lot of Yankee producers?) and Scarlett married Rhett to get even with him.

"Their married life was just like setting in hell's fire and listening to the heavenly choir.

"Finally, after Melanie died (the doctor's always right) Scarlett realized that she didn't love Ashley but Rhett. Scarlett was as changeable as a baby's underwear.

"However, Rhett had had enough of her foolishness and when she told him, he says, 'Frankly, my dear, I don't give a damn.'

"Neither, by this time, did the audience."

To the office of manager Pat Notaro of the Columbia theatre, Sharon, Pa., stormed an inebriated customer, shouting that the management had pulled a fast one by not showing the last half of "Gone With the Wind." Questioning disclosed that the gent had spent the early part of the evening at the nearby Liberty, watching "Wind," and after having gone out for a couple of quick ones during intermission, by mistake re-entered the Columbia, which was showing "Castle on the Hudson." Try as he could, he explained, he couldn't connect the two plots.

Julian Meade, having written "Adam's Profession, and Its Conquest by Eve," about his own home garden in Danville, Va., set out to see America, paying his way as a lecturer on gardens, and his new book, "Bouquets and Bitters: a Gardener's Medley" (Longmans, $2.75) is the informal chronicle of that adventure.

Hollywood was importantly on Mr. Meade's itinerary, and Myrna Loy was one of the Hollywood stars who was at home when Mr. Meade called. On her library table lay Henry Beston's "Herbs and the Earth," and outside the house, close to the fence which bars less fortunate tourists, is the herb garden, which Miss Loy tends herself. She grows, from seed, dill, tarragon, borage, fennel and saffron, and loves to hoe and weed them; and, she told Mr. Meade, that when people peer through the fence and say: "Hello there, Myrna!" she says "Hello" and goes up the lane out of sight. Mr. Meade, apparently, did not suggest that she might do her hoeing a little further from the fence.

Joan Bennett "looked so fragile and lovely that it was hard to think of her spading up the California sod"; but she earnestly consulted Mr. Meade about how to make a compost-pile. You begin, he told her, with wilted lettuce and faded corsages.

Harold Lloyd has a Dutchman's garden, where scarlet roses clash with pink; and he tells his gardeners not to rake the leaves off his California lawn, so that he may be reminded of autumn in the East.

Bette Davis told him she kept her garden informal, so she could take care of it herself if she had to; she learned about gardening from her Boston grandmother. . . .

H. C. (Doc.) Gantz, of Chicago's motion picture cameramen's Local No. 666, has taken on the somewhat difficult task of identifying some of the many "isms" of the day, as follows:

SOCIALISM—If you have two cows, you give one to your neighbor.

COMMUNISM—If you have two cows, you give them to the Government and the Government then gives you some of the milk if you behave yourself.

FASCISM—If you have two cows, you keep the cows and give the milk to the Government; then the Government sells you some of the milk.

NEW DEALISM—If you have two cows, you are expected to shoot one and milk the other, then pour the milk down the drain, after which the Government may decide to pay you for not producing any milk.

NAZI-ISM—If you have two cows, the Government shoots you and keeps the cows.

CAPITALISM—If you have two cows, you sell one and buy a bull.

A "soprano" was doing her stuff at the Tower theatre in Kansas City the other evening with results that were not so good.

"Maybe she's too close to the microphone," suggested an assistant. "She's too close to the band," suggested another. "She's too close to the theatre," concluded Barney Joffee, house manager.

U.S. LISTS 67,129 THEATRES IN WORLD

As of January 1, 1940, there were approximately 67,129 sound and silent motion picture theatres in 98 countries of the world, compared with 92,816 theatres on Jan. 1, 1939, according to a world market survey prepared by Nathan D. Golden, Chief of the Motion Picture Division of the U. S. Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. In explanation of this large decrease, Mr. Golden points out that in the 1939 compilations nearly 30,000 so-called "theatres" in Russia, which were nothing more than meeting halls for workers where pictures were shown, have been dropped from the classification of motion picture theatres. Only those theatres in Russia which charge an admission have been incorporated.

Theatres in Czechoslovakia, Danzig, Sudetenland and Austria are in Germany's total for 1939.

THREE MORE DISTRIBUTORS ADVANCE 1940-41 SALES CONVENTION PLANS

RKO Sets May 26–29 Tentatively; Republic Will Decide Soon, with Late May or Early June Favored

Hollywood studios' production plans and their distributions affiliates' explorations into new sales factors and procedures for 1940-41 are gaining ground daily. In addition, both divisions are working current season activities rapidly to a close.

Besides those already disclosing 1940 sales convention dates the week brought reports from RKO that its annual sales meeting will be held in New York the last week in May; late May or early June is favored by Republic for its convention, and that Twentieth Century-Fox is planning four European sales conventions this spring and summer, with definite arrangements depending on war developments.

Tentative RKO Date

The RKO convention will be held at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel with tentative dates now set at May 26-29 inclusive, and the meeting is to be national. The company will announce a new season's release schedule of 48 features.

Frederic Ullman, Jr., vice-president and general manager of RKO Pathe News for the last three years, will resign April 1st to become a producer under Lee Marcus at the RKO Hollywood studio.

Frank Donovan, production manager of the newsreel, will be elected vice-president of RKO Pathe News, succeeding Mr. Ullman. Walton C. Ament, news editor for the last two years, will be named general manager and editor.

J. J. Nolan has been elected vice-president in charge of production at the RKO studio by the RKO board of directors. Mr. Nolan started in the film business with the Robertson-Cole company, a predecessor of Radio Pictures, which owned 13 acres in Hollywood, now the site of the studio of the company. He has been at the studio since 1934 and recently was assistant to George Schaefer, president.

Captain Herb MacIntyre of the Ned Depinet Drive forces announced this week that the final two weeks, April 27th to May 10th, of the drive have been designated in tribute to the eight district managers.

The Atlanta exchange, headed by H. M. Lyons, is leading in the seventh week of the drive or the half-way mark in the billings competition among the sales force. Buffalo is in second place, and New York third.

The eastern division, headed by Andy Smith, is leading the western division, headed by Cresson E. Smith, in the second week of the current "Smith Month." The Toronto exchange tops the 38 branches in the United States and Canada for number of film shipments to date. The Canadian district, L. M. Devaney, manager, leads the eight districts of the two countries.

Republic Date Shortly

Republic's sales convention locale and date will be decided soon, James R. Grainger, president, said last week on his return to New York from a coast to coast swing through key cities. Late May or early June is favored.

Mr. Grainger said he was impressed on his trip with general industry conditions, which he said were much improved compared with a year ago, and added, that Republic's sales and billings are much better this season than last.

The 1940-41 program will again consist of 50 features, including 25 dramas and 24 westerns, he said. There will also be four serials.

The company is planning to revise its line-up of westerns for the new season, providing for four series of six each instead of three series of eight each as heretofore. The new group will feature Don Barry, whose first will be "Ghost Valley Raiders." The other series will continue to feature Gene Autry, Roy Rogers and the Three Mesquiteers.

The studio is speeding up production and expects to have the present season's program completed by July 15th. "Dark Command," $800,000 budget film, will be released about April 15th.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Plans 52

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer probably will make 52 features in the 1940-41 season, although no decision has been reached yet, William F. Rodgers said on returning to New York from Coast production conferences. The company is reported dusting off a number of William Haines vehicles of the silent days with a view to fitting them to George Murphy.

20th-Fox Conventions

The four European sales conventions planned by Twentieth Century-Fox are to be held in London, Paris, Stockholm for the Scandinavian countries, and in Budapest or Zagreb for Central and Southeastern Europe. Benjamin F. Miggins, Continental European manager, now in New York, will sail soon to arrange for the Continental meetings. Walter J. Hutchinson, foreign distribution director, plans to attend both the London and Paris meetings.

Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board, and Sidney R. Kent, president, will be the principal speakers at the three-day sales convention which opens in the Drake Hotel in Chicago, April 12th. Herman Wobber, sales manager, will preside. Others at the convention will include Mr. Hutchinson, Spyros Skouras, Truman H. Talley and Charles E. McCarthy.

Robert T. Kane, managing director of the company's production in England, sailed from New York this week to resume production in England. This season's British production quota requirements are virtually completed, according to the company.

Plans for the new quota year are indefinite, but the company plans to make a maximum of eight or nine features in England, four of which are scheduled for American release.

Universal Preparing Program

Universal has only five or six pictures yet to be produced on the current program, and the studio already is preparing for next season's line-up, Matty Fox, vice-president, said in New York last week.

He also said there is no indication that Universal will produce fewer pictures for 1940-41, confirming the statement of Nate Blumberg, president, on the same subject. He said that never in the history of the company were there better pictures finished and in work at Universal City.

Fine Arts Takes Over

Fine Arts Productions, headed by Franklyn Warner, has taken a long lease on the Grand National studio and will re-equip it. The company is making nine pictures for the current season and 26 for 1940-41.

Harry Brandt, head of the Brandt circuit, has acquired the New York franchise for Fine Arts which will be handled through his Times Pictures exchange. Present franchise holders and their territorities include:

Marcell Mekelberg, Boston and New Haven; Lee Goldberg, Cleveland, Cincinnati and Indianapolis; Cleve Adams, Chicago; Jack Adams, Dallas and Oklahoma City; William Flemion, Detroit; Bernard Newman, Denver and Salt Lake City; Herbert Given, Philadelphia; Max Shulgold, Pittsburgh; Bradley Fish, San Francisco; William C. Ritter, Los Angeles; George Gill, Washington, D. C.; Eph Rosen, Minneapolis, and Max Wiesner, Milwaukee.

Monogram Sales Mark

Monogram sales have reached the 6,202 mark, Edward Golden, general sales manager, said in Chicago last week en route to New York from a nation wide tour of the company's exchanges. This 6,202 figure is out of a possibility list of 9,550, he said. He also said that sales were 11 per cent ahead of last year at this time although the selling season, due to the war situation, has been very slow. Indications are that the entire sales for the season would be 30 per cent to 35 per cent ahead of last year, he said.

In New York Mr. Golden said that he found exhibitors everywhere "highly optimistic regarding the outlook for business," adding that "several centers are profiting from war booms in various types of industry, and these gains

Columbia Sales Records

Columbia announced this week that its "Montague Fifteenth Anniversary Campaign" had started well, with national billings up 40 per cent over the quota set. The campaign started February 17th, ends May 10th.

Columbia, also, has set a record in new accounts, with 800 more contracts on its books for 1939-40, than it ever had, it announced.

There will be special "surprise awards" on short subjects and serial sales, as a further inducement in the Montague campaign.

A. Schneider, company treasurer, last week presented a bronze plaque to Mr. Montague, in the New York home offices, in behalf of other company executives, commemorating his 15 years with the company.

United Artists' New Plans

United Artists' new season production plans were completed in Hollywood last week, and arrangements for the company's annual sales meeting were expected to be announced shortly. Harry Gold, vice-president of the company, and Eastern sales manager, so reported on his return to New York last week from the Coast.

Alexander Korda, British producer for the company, was on the coast last week for conferences and for the board meeting.

Among completed UA product are "The Westerner," "Rebecca," "My Son, My Son," "Our Town," and "One Million B. C."

"Rebecca is scheduled to open at the Radio City Music Hall, New York, on March 28th, to be followed by "My Son, My Son."

Murray Silverstone, chief executive of the company, left Hollywood on Tuesday, for New York, after a six-week stay.

The 1940-41 schedule is called by the company "the most ambitious releasing schedule in the 21-year history of United Artists."

Terry Plans Color

Paul Terry, producer of the Terrytoons for Twentieth Century-Fox release, is planning a two-reel cartoon in color, it was announced this week. It would be the first Terry two-reel color cartoon.

William J. Clark, short subjects sales manager for Fox, said last week that Terrytoons theatre contracts have passed the 10,000 figure, and thus have reached an all-time high. It is the series' 11th year.

New Companies Formed

Three more new producing companies, announced in recent days, promise to add to next season's product supply. They are the Samuel Bronston Productions, in Hollywood, capitalized at $1,000,000, in which Edward H. Schwab, brother of the late steel magnate, Charles M. Schwab, is interested, and the details of which were reported in the Motion Picture Herald of March 16th; the Classical Cinema Company, of Hollywood, to produce "Hamlet" and other Shakespeare plays; and a new company formed in New York by Ira H. Simmons, to produce shorts for television, and perhaps theatre, use.

Classical to Make Ten

The second company named, the Classical Cinema Company, is to produce for "educational and general consumption" ten pictures this year, the first, "Hamlet," to cost $40,000. Stock will be privately subscribed. New players will be used.

The last named company is to produce about 26 30-minute shorts for television use, at the Fox Movietone Studios in New York. Ira H. Simmons is general manager. The shorts will star musical luminaries. The releases may be through television, in which case the telecaster or the program sponsor will pay; through educational outlets; through foreign theatres, by distribution of a major's foreign department; and, possibly, if Mr. Simmons sees fit, through domestic theatres. A name for the producing company, "privately backed" was still to be chosen, this week.

CRITIC QUESTIONS "GRAPES OF WRATH"

Posing the question: "What is 'Grapes of Wrath', as public diversion?" Colvin McPherson, motion picture critic of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, in that publication asks whether the Darryl Zanuck production is "the movie of the future or an isolated exception of the rules and taboos of the past".

Declaring that the answer is not at hand as to the film's status as entertainment, Mr. McPherson points to the divergence of opinion within the trade, some holding that John Steinbeck's "drab story" of a family of migratory workers from Oklahoma has no place on the screen, while others are arguing that anything interesting is entertaining and that the picture today "is as interesting as a sock on the jaw".

London Business Held 40% Off

Theatre business in London's West End, the principal theatrical section, is still 40 to 50 per cent off, despite the easing of some of the war restrictions, Charles Raymond, general manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer houses in London for the last seven years, said Monday on his arrival in New York. He plans to remain and will be given a new assignment by Loew's.

Sam Eckman, MGM managing director in England, has added supervision of the London theatres to his duties.

The blackout and stagger system of closing at West End theatres has drastically cut grosses, but theatre business in the provinces is much better, Mr. Raymond said. Under the stagger system, theatres close at 10 minute intervals, beginning at 10:50 p. m., while all theatres must be closed by 11:50 p. m.

One of the restrictions was that no more than 2,000 patrons may be in a theatre after 6 p. m. This directly affected the Empire, Loew's ace house, which seats 3,200, sharply cutting the grosses, and made it necessary for the theatre to curtail the sale of tickets after 4 p. m.

Film No Place for 'Causes': Ramsaye

Motion pictures of "socially conscious," or propaganda content are more likely to follow trends and movements than to start them, Terry Ramsaye, editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, told a Princeton University class studying "Public Opinion," in a lecture last Thursday.

"The makers of motion pictures of what is called 'the industry,'" observed Mr. Ramsaye, "are engaged in a business concerned with getting the customers to buy seats at the boxoffice. They do not profess to be educators, reformers, uplifters or authors of movements. They should not be asked to be any of those things either.

"The many pressures toward a 'socially conscious' screen are from those who have what they think is a 'message' that they would like to have delivered to the audience which the screen theatre has assembled by offering entertainment.

"If anybody wants to study economics, politics and social movements he can go home and read a book. No research is to be done in an opera chair.

"The adoption of themes of 'social purpose,' which we may observe now and then, is for the precise purpose of acquiring a part of the public interest for the amusement boxoffice.

"The motion picture screen can add to the existing moods and movements, abet the hysterias, encourage the dreams, but as it is now constituted it can not start anything—and should not, will not. The big broad audience of the screen is such that it must turn to what it has heard about—exploration is not to be made by the millions."

The Public Opinion course at Princeton is conducted by Dr. Harwood L. Childs of the School of Public and International Affairs at Princeton. He is also managing editor of Public Opinions Quarterly, which has devoted attention to the screen.

Rogers to West

Budd Rogers, vice-president and general manager of Alliance Films Corporation, left for the coast Wednesday accompanied by Maxwell Setton. Rogers and Setton plan a series of conferences with Erich Pommer and Charles Laughton, with whom Mr. Setton was associated in England. En route, Mr. Rogers will make stop-overs at the offices of all Alliance franchise holders to discuss matters relative to the current and future Alliance program.

RKO Ball Held

The RKO annual ball was held at the Grand Ballroom of the Hotel Astor in New York, last Monday. Confined, in the past, to members of the theatre circuit in the field, this affair was attended by home office representatives as well. Two orchestras, Rimic's and Bob Chester's orchestras, furnished the music.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public.

Virginia City

(Warner - F. N.)

Historical Melodrama

Reference to the record reveals that "Dodge City," presented on the site of the story with a trainload of press representatives on hand to disseminate the news of the occasion, proved itself a Box Office Champion for two successive months following release, piling up in due course a national gross reported above the $2,000,000 mark.

It was in this period of widely profitable exhibition that Warners anounced "Virginia City" as a project in the same general field of showmanship and declared it would be "bigger and better."

It is unquestionably a wholehearted fulfilment of that promise, a more expensive picture, presenting a more distinguished cast, and it has been presented on the story site with another and larger trainload of correspondents on hand to notify the nation's readers and theatregoers. All this is exploitation capital progressive showmen will make the most of. (See pages 24 and 25.)

A foreword flashed on the screen informs one that "only the characters are fictional—the story is true." The story, an original screen play by Robert Buckner, deals with the attempt of Confederate sympathizers in Virginia City, Nevada, to smuggle $5,000,000 worth of gold bullion to President Jefferson Davis toward the close of the Civil War. Errol Flynn portrays a Union officer sent to Virginia City on special duty to prevent shipment of the gold, and Randolph Scott plays a Confederate officer assigned to the opposite objective. Miriam Hopkins is the girl both men pay court to, although the paying of court and similar gentle interests take up proportionately little of the generous footage.

Directed, as was "Dodge City," by the experienced Michael Curtiz, the film emphasizes action throughout. Especially notable for the speed, dispatch and magnitude of their filming are a dynamiting of Libby Prison, an attempted holdup of a stagecoach, the rough-and-ready life of Virginia City, the escape, pursuit and siege of the wagon train transporting the bullion, the dynamiting of a mountainside to bury the treasure and, finally, the rescue by Union Cavalry. There is much shooting, more lethal than most, and plenty of fighting of all varieties.

Hal Wallis, executive producer, employed Robert Fellows as associate producer and allotted a manifestly ample budget.

Previewed at Virginia City and Reno, Nevada, amid exploitation exercises that thronged the towns with crowds so vast that four theatres were required to handle them.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

It's a Date

(Universal)

Comedy Drama with Music

For reasons not quite clear, Deanna Durbin pictures draw to their Hollywood previews a more representative cross industry attendance than any other. The capacity turnout for this seventh of the Durbin vehicles jammed lobby and foyer as customary at its conclusion and sent up customer shouts of "best yet." But this time the opinion had been arrived at, with seeming unanimity, somewhere in midpicture and made manifest in steadily mounting bursts of solid laughter and wholesome applause.

Judged on the basis of audience response alone, "It's a Date" would have to be pronounced Miss Durbin's finest film, and if any mere critic held an opposite view, which is improbable, his was an extremely minority vote.

Miss Durbin's support in this offering assays considerably higher grade than any she has had previously. Kay Francis is in top form as her actress mother. Walter Pidgeon gives an outstanding portrayal of the man whose affections mother and daughter cultivate for contrasting reasons. Cecilia Loftus gives a sparkling performance as the servitor devoted to both and there are capital acting jobs by Samuel S. Hinds, Lewis Howard and S. Z. Sakall, a gifted newcomer.

William A. Seiter's direction accounts for a number of polished sequences off the beaten track which a less experienced hand might have dubbed. Norman Krasna's screen play, derived from a story by Jane Hall, Frederick Kohner and Ralph Block, is of the smoothly fluid variety which won him his writing reputation. Art Director Jack Otterson furnished his usual impeccable mounting for the film, which is, of course, a Joe Pasternak production.

Miss Durbin is seen as the talented daughter of a famous but ageing stage star whose producer assigns to the daughter a role cherished by the mother. To spare her mother from disappointment the daughter pretends to give up her stage ambitions to marry a man who, coincidentally, loves the mother instead. After much well documented misunderstanding, some of it amusing and some dramatic, all realize their ambitions.

The scene of the picture is New York, Maine and Hawaii. Harry Owens and his Hawaiian orchestra figure importantly in the musical department and have their own exploitation value. Seven song numbers are used in the picture, Miss Durbin singing Schubert's "Ave Maria" for a brilliant finale.

Forgotten Girls

Melodrama

The female of the species who runs afoul of the law, whether innocently or not, is scarcely forgotten these days. Pictures of women in prison seem as abundant as men prison films now. Here the girl is in prison because of environment and circumstance; of environment because her lazy step-mother makes their home a rendezvous for unsavory characters; of circumstance because the girl defends herself with a skillet against the advances of her relative's betrothed and is charged with murder, though the stepmother finished the job.

The prison of this picture has airy, semi-private rooms with fair appointments and plenty of freedom. The prison, however, is but a minor part of the story. Gangsters "spring" the girl, against her wishes.

The girl is played by Louise Platt and the newspaper man who befriends her by Donald Woods. Supporting players include Wynne Gibson, in the role of the stepmother; Robert Armstrong, weak and braggart friend of the stepmother; Eduardo Ciannelli, a gang leader; Jack LaRue, the slain man, and Barbara Pepper, prison inmate. Phil Rosen directed from a screen play by Joseph Moncure March and F. Hugh Herbert. Frank McDonald wrote the original story.

The romantic element has not been neglected but the film is in the main a melodramatic mixture of murder, prison and gangsterism, of hatred and fear.

Midnight Limited

(Monogram)

Mystery and Romance

A brace of robberies on a crack Montreal train provides the puzzle for audiences to solve with the railroad's ace private detective. The mystery deepens when, despite the close watch of detectives, a second robbery follows the first under the noses of the sleuths. Suspense is created and maintained up to the denouement, and the solving of the mystery follows the abundant clues in an orthodox manner, rather than striking off at a tangent.

John King is the private detective who solves the mystery, sets the stage for the "finger pointing" and then catches his prey the third time around. Marjorie Reynolds plays the girl who was on the train while the first robbery was in process and aids the detective. Other players include George Cleveland, Edward Keane, Pat Flaherty, Monte Collins, Herb Ashley, Stanford Jolley and Buck Woods. Howard Bretherton directed.

There is considerable romance to support the straight mystery. The comedy element so prevalent in mysteries of late is missing.

The solution is solemn, for not only are the thief and his accomplice, a railroad employee, killed in a gun battle but the thief was smuggled aboard the train in a coffin.

Reviewed at the Central theatre, New York. The film for the most part drew little reaction from an afternoon audience composed mostly of men, but one gentleman muttered audibly whenever the developments of mystery gave way to Cupid.—P. C. M., Jr.

The Outsider

"The Outsider", a British-made production starring Mary Maguire and George Sanders, opens at the Little Carnegie theatre in New York Saturday, for its first American exhibition. The picture, which is being distributed in the United States by Alliance Films, was reviewed from London in the Feb. 25, 1939, issue of MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

Double Alibi

(Universal)

Newspaper Mystery

Under the directorial guidance of Philip Rosen, Universal has produced a newspaper melodrama similar in many ways to other current stories of the newsrooms, with the girl reporter shielding a suspected murderer while trying to prove his innocence. Again the city editor has escaped from the bevisored blood-sweating characterization of another screen day.

Based on a novel by Frederick C. Davis and adapted for the screen by Harold Buchman, Roy Chanslor and Charles Grayson, "Double Alibi" is swiftly paced, Wayne Morris and Margaret Lindsay helping to make it so. Supporting these stars are William Gargan, as the city editor, and Roscoe Karns, handling the comedy in the role of staff photographer.

When "Stephen Wayne" (Morris) is suspected of the murder of his estranged wife, a newspaper's health columnist, "Sue Carey" (Miss Lindsay), turns police reporter to help him prove his innocence. "Wayne" poses as a wellknown crime reporter from the Middle West, and with the aid of "Sue" and "Jenkins," the staff photographer, proves that he is innocent and uncovers the murderer.

Others handling supporting roles adequately are James Burke, who here takes a more serious part, Robert Emmett Keane and William Pawley.

Reviewed at the Rialto theatre in New York, where an afternoon audience, comprised mostly of men, followed with interest the development of the story.—GEORGE SPIRES.

Titles of three of the seven scheduled melodramas are "Sons of the Finest," by William Ullman, Jr.; "Wolf Cry," by Jack London; and "Skip Tracer," an original story by Roy Shrock.

O'Brien Ends Tour

George O'Brien, RKO western player, and his wife, arrived in New York this week from a 25,000-mile air tour of Latin America. He started the trip two and a half months ago. Mr. O'Brien conferred with exhibitors and inspected studios in South America. He said he was impressed by the activity at five studios in Buenos Aires, which turn out about 50 pictures a year. He left for the coast Wednesday.

Helprin in Production

Morris Helprin, for the last four years American advertising and publicity representative for the United Artist's British producer, Alexander Korda, with offices in New York, has been made Mr. Korda's assistant in production, the latter announced on Wednesday. Mr. Helprin leaves New York Monday, to work on the final sequences of "The Thief of Bagdad," on the coast.

Action Pictures Needed: Zukor

"Good pictures, pictures with stories, pictures with action rather than talk, 'big' pictures and pictures made with an eye on Latin America"—these are the only things necessary to increase American film company business below the Rio Grande, Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board of Paramount Pictures, observed Monday, on board the S. S. Uruguay as it steamed up New York harbor, carrying Mr. Zukor, John Hicks, Jr., vice-president in charge of foreign sales for Paramount, and Mrs. Hicks, home after a two-and-one-half-month "good-will survey" of the Latin American territory.

Finds "Good Showmanship"

Taxation, censorship, and other legislation were passed off lightly, as burdens to distributors, by Mr. Zukor, who said that despite such measures, South American countries, generally, "have been very good to this industry."

The survey, which began in January, left Mr. Zukor "much impressed" by the "intelligence, the shrewdness, the good showmanship" of Latin Americans—and at the "bigness" of the countries he visited.

Mr. Zukor found the war had had little effect on American business. Competition from foreign product never was considerable, he noted. Foreign pictures, those that still played, were doing "fair," he said. Some French pictures were still playing.

"But the proportion of those pictures has been small. I think that what they have done is to stimulate interest in our pictures," Mr. Zukor declared.

Impressed by Tour

Mr. Zukor surveyed Latin America, and Australia previously, "from choice," he said.

"I am convinced that it was a good move," he remarked; "I think we are doing a great thing, not only for Paramount Pictures, but for all the companies, in covering this territory. We have been in business there for 28 years, and I think it is just good business for an executive to visit the countries he does business with."

Mr. Zukor was impressed in South America by the size and modernity of the theatres—and also, he said, with the "smart buying policy" of the South Americans, who, he noted, gauged their audiences precisely.

Mr. Zukor and Mr. and Mrs. Hicks were in Panama, Peru, Chile, Argentina, Brazil, and other countries. In most, they met high officials: in Argentina, the president; in the vice-president.

Lewis Realigns Paramount Studio Publicity Staff

Cliff Lewis, Paramount studio director of advertising, publicity and exploitation, last week assumed active charge of the publicity department, making Bert Holloway general publicity assistant. George Thomas was transferred from advertising to publicity to handle wire service syndicate and other outlets.

Jean Bosquet, who formerly did this work, was assigned to unit publicity writing. John Del Valle was shifted from special assignments to unit duty. The changes were necessitated by the resignation last week of Terry DeLapp, studio publicity director.

GROSS UP, PROFIT OFF, SAYS SEC; UNIVERSAL TRIPLES ITS NET INCOME

Disney's Cartoons Go "Big Business" as Application for Stock Offering Is Filed; $4,000,000 New Funds

Consolidated net earnings of Universal Pictures Company, Inc., and subsidiaries, before provision for federal income taxes and special amortization adjustment reserves, amounted to $460,631 in the thirteen weeks ended Jan. 27, 1940, the first quarter of the company's current fiscal year, J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board, told stockholders at the annual meeting last Friday in Wilmington. This compares with a net of $157,990 in the corresponding quarter of the preceding fiscal year, which "U" tripled in the final quarter.

Domestic Income Ratio Up

Mr. Cowdin said the ratio of Universal's domestic income to its foreign receipts was rising and that continuation of this trend would make it desirable to adjust its amortization tables for film costs. In anticipation of such a change, he said, the company since the start of the current fiscal year had set aside $5,000 a week in a special amortization reserve. After deduction of such reserves for the period, net earnings for the quarter, before federal income taxes, were $395,631.

Mr. Cowdin said foreign revenues were holding up well, taking into account the war conditions.

Stockholders Reelect

Preferred and common stockholders of Universal Pictures reelected 13 directors to the board.

Common stockholders reelected N. J. Blumberg, Paul G. Brown, Daniel C. Collins, J. Cheever Cowdin, Preston Davie, Ottavio Prochet, C. D. Prutzman, Budd Rogers, Daniel M. Shaeffer, and Willis H. Taylor, Jr.

First preferred stockholders reelected J. Dabney Penick and Samuel I. Posen and second preferred reelected William Freiday.

Universal Corporation

Universal Corporation—the parent holding company of Universal Pictures, Inc., and whose income is from dividends and such from that operating company—for the year ended Oct. 28, 1939 shows a profit of $866,152 after depreciation, amortization, interest, federal and foreign income taxes and other deductions. Including $274,111 equity in profits of subsidiaries operating in foreign territories and after providing $141,152 for cumulative dividends for year on first preferred 8 per cent cumulative stock of Universal Pictures Company, held by the public, there was a profit of $999,110 carried to deficit account.

In the year ended Oct. 29, 1938, the company reported a loss of $827,398 carried to deficit account which included $27,537 equity in profits (net) of subsidiaries operating in foreign territories and was after $141,152 provision for cumulative dividends for year on first preferred 8 per cent cumulative stock of Universal Pictures Company held by public.

Capital stock consists of 525,681 shares of $1 par common outstanding.

Equity in profits (net) of subsidiaries operating in foreign territories is based upon the profits and losses (net) of these subsidiaries for the 52 weeks ended Aug. 26, 1939, or Sept. 23, 1939, or 53 weeks ended Sept. 30, 1939. The operations of the Polish subsidiary are included only for the 44 weeks ended July 29, 1939.

Disney Reports on Operations to SEC

Walt Disney Productions passed from the status of a family enterprise into the realm of big business last week when it filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission notice of intention to raise about $4,000,000 of new capital in the nation's money markets, with a stock offering of 155,000 shares of 6 per cent convertible preferred of $25 par value and 155,000 common shares at $5 par.

The statement cited a number of adverse business factors besides giving the story of the industry's recent successes.

The first of potentially adverse factors noted was that the family enterprise was largely the personal creation of Walter E. Disney, its president and founder.

With this in mind, the statement said, "the company will undertake to insure the life of Mr. Disney for $1,500,000." He is now 38 years old.

The foreign wars were cited as a cause for concern, calling the British Commonwealth a large source of revenue.

The proceeds of the financing will be used to pay promissory notes held by the Bank of America Trust and Savings Association of California. The proceeds of the notes were used for construction of new plant facilities for the company at Burbank.

Remuneration of Officers

The registration statement gave the remuneration of the company's officers for the year ended Sept. 30, 1939, as follows:

Walter E. Disney, president, $108,298; Roy O. Disney, executive vice-president, $54,185; Gunther R. Lessing, vice-president, $14,335; Edward M. Francis, treasurer, $8,099; George E. Morris, secretary, $9,711. This did not include income from shares in the Disney foreign corporations which during the same period produced $25,605 for Walter E. Disney and $17,069 for Roy O. Disney.

The statement disclosed that on Monday the company had entered into an agreement employing Walter E. Disney as executive production manager for seven years at $2,000 a week and certain traveling and other expenses. It added that under date of March 8 the company agreed to pay $1,000 weekly for seven years and traveling expenses to Roy O. Disney as business manager.

The statement reported that the company's gross income from "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" to Dec. 31, 1939, was $4,677,862.97. The general impression given to the trade was that "Snow White" had grossed $8,000,000.

Net income of the enterprise after taxes and expenses was reported $218,575 for the fiscal year 1935, $78,755 for 1936, $140,627 for 1937 and $918,412 for the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1938, when the three former companies were consolidated.

Net income on the same basis for the present company was reported $1,250,130 for the year ended Sept. 30, 1939, and $64,346 for the three months ended Dec. 31, 1939.

According to the statement, all of the outstanding common stock of Walt Disney Production is held by the Disney family, as follows:

Walter E. Disney, 106,500 shares; Lillian B. Disney, 106,500 shares; Roy O. Disney, 71,000 shares; Edna F. Disney, 71,000 shares.

Total Business Volume of Seven Producing and Distributing Companies in 1938 Set $410,000,000 Record

The total volume of business of seven film producing and distributing corporations in 1938 reached a new high at $410,000,000, an increase of $5,000,000 over the preceding year, but net profits dropped sharply, according to the Securities and Exchange Commission at Washington, which only this week made public its group report on the companies for that year.

The profits of the companies, which in 1937 amounted to $33,000,000, or 8.2 per cent of sales, dropped in 1938 to $21,000,000, or 5.1 per cent of sales, it was shown.

In Corporation Survey

The figures on the film companies were included with data on eight other industries in Volume II of the "Survey of American Listed Corporations," a compilation of statistics contained in reports filed with the Commission by corporations whose stocks are registered.

The survey showed that six of the seven corporations filed reports with the Commission for each of the four years ended with 1938, which showed that total assets increased in that period from $496,000,000 to $528,000,000.

The volume of business of those six companies increased from $334,000,000 to $408,000,000, showing an improvement in each year, but the net profit after all charges, which increased from $13,000,000 in 1935 to $27,000,000 in 1936 and $34,000,000 in 1937, dropped to $21,000,000 in 1938, and dividends paid, increasing from $6,000,000 in 1935 to $14,000,000 in 1936 and $22,000,000 in 1937, declined to $13,000,000.

Volume of Business Shown

A break-down of the six-company group for which detailed statistics were secured showed that it consisted of Columbia Pictures, Loew's, Inc., Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox, Universal Pictures and Warner Brothers. Monogram was not included because complete information was not available for past years.

The analysis gave the volume of business of each of the six companies in their 1938 year as follows: Columbia, $19,414,000 against $20,101,000 in 1937; Loew's, $108,892,000 against $107,822,000; Paramount, $100,928,000 against $104,186,000; Twentieth Century-Fox, $58,201,000 against $56,172,000; Universal Pictures, $18,555,000 against $16,396,000, and Warner Brothers, $102,206,000 against $99,864,000.

The total assets of the companies were: Columbia, $18,560,000 against $16,516,000; Loew's, $143,840,000 against $142,560,000; Paramount, $118,224,000 against $120,219,000; Twentieth Century-Fox, $60,703,000 against $60,364,000; Universal Pictures, $12,323,000 against $11,765,000, and Warner Brothers, $174,369,000 against $177,544,000.

All of the six companies except Universal Pictures, which reported a loss of $691,000, showed a profit for 1938, Columbia reporting only $2,000, but the others showing the more substantial amounts of $9,918,000 for Loew's, Inc., $2,866,000 for Paramount, $7,252,000 for 20th Century-Fox and $1,930,000 tor Warners.

Neither Universal nor Warner Brothers paid any dividends during their 1938 year, but Columbia paid $326,000; Loew's, Inc., $6,485,000; Paramount, $1,186,000, and Twentieth Century-Fox, $4,899,000.

Five Newsreels To Cover Dallas Variety Meeting

All five newsreel companies—Movietone, News of the Day, Paramount, Pathe, and Universal—will "cover" the national Variety Club convention, in Dallas, on April 18th, 19th, and 20th, the organization's officials announced this week.

The newsreel coverage was worked out by conferences of R. J. O'Donnell, chief barker of the Dallas Variety Club and chairman of the national unit's executive control committee, and Herman Beiersdorf, newsreel chairman, with officials of the newsreel companies.

National Golf Championship

Chief sporting activity for the convention delegates will be golf, at the Brook Hollow Country Club, with the champion to be crowned and given a trophy at the closing banquet. Variety Club champions from nine or more cities are to tee off on Saturday morning, April 20th, for the national championship.

Among the par shooting champions already registered have been Art Levy, of Pittsburgh; J. J. Culahan, Cincinnati; Al Matreci, St. Louis; John Howard, Detroit; L. W. Cohen, Minneapolis; Frank Clark, Milwaukee; Jack Zern, Dallas; Bill Griffin, Atlanta; and Otto Rohde, Oklahoma City.

There are 29 committees for the convention. That which has the greatest problem, according to Variety Club officials this week, is the transportation committee.

It is expected that 85 per cent of all delegates will arrive in Dallas simultaneously on two "Variety Special" trains from St. Louis and Kansas City. This week, from registrations already received, it was estimated that 425 delegates would come from the following cities, in the following numbers: Pittsburgh, 40; Columbus, 10; Cincinnati, 15; St. Louis, 40; Detroit, 20; Cleveland, 25; Buffalo, five; Kansas City, 55; Indianapolis, 15; Washington, eight; Minneapolis, 20; Philadelphia, 10; Milwaukee, 25; Omaha, 10; Dayton, five; and Baltimore, eight.

Those from Memphis, Atlanta, and Oklahoma City are expected by special automobile caravan.

With the total swelled by various guests, and by executives and others from New York, the total expected by Dallas estimate is 1,000.

The Dallas Variety Tent 17 will accord the train arrivals a "western welcome." The delegates, in part of this welcome, will be taken from station to hotels in "prairie schooners" chuck wagons, and on cow ponies.

The Baker Hotel, at which the official banquet will be held, will have its Crystal Ballroom decorated with flowers and peculiar flora from a dozen states and Mexico, it is said.

There will be a "frontier Frolic" party at the Dallas Atheltic Club. John A. Guthrie's "Real Wild West and Big Indian Congress of Oklahoma Plains" Indians is expected to provide some of the entertainment.

The second annual Humanitarian Award by the national organization will be tendered, this year, to Miss Martha Berry, founder and director of the Berry Schools of Mount Berry, Georgia, which educate and help underprivileged mountain children of the South. The first award was made last year to Father Flanagan, of Boys' Town, Nebraska. Miss Berry is expected to attend the convention.

Field Club Activities

New headquarters for Variety Club Tent Number One were opened in Pittsburgh last Friday night, featured by a prevue party for members only. A private press party was given the day before; and a public reception, on last Saturday.

On Sunday, a cocktail hour was staged.

The Friday night proceedings were broadcast simultaneously, by three radio stations, KDKA, WCAE, and WWSW.

Dr. John H. Harris, of the amusement company bearing his name, in Pittsburgh, and national chief barker for the national organization, left Pittsburgh for California last week, to visit the studios, and meet his wife and son, who have been vacationing there.

The local chief barker, C. J. Latta, left for Florida, over the weekend, to meet his family.

C. C. Kellenberg, assistant chief barker, will head Americanization Day activities, in Pittsburgh, May 1st, it was announced. His program, in present form, features an address by Lewis Johnson, assistant United States Secretary of War, at the Soldiers' and Sailors' Memorial Hall; a visit by local Legionnaires to the Variety-Club sponsored Camp O'Connell; a luncheon honoring Mr. Johnson, at the Variety club rooms; and a banquet.

Commander Harry Kalmine, of the Variety Legion Post, manager of the Warner Brothers' Tri-State Theatres, and a former chief barker for the local Variety tent, has received a national citation from the national American Legion, for services in arranging Variety shows for wounded veterans.

Show at Cleveland

Last Friday, the Variety Club Post of the Cleveland American Legion presented a midnight stage and screen show at the Circle Friday, for money to send underprivileged children to Summer camps. M. A. Goodman, Harry Goldstein, Howard Roth, John Himmelein, and George Kendis were in charge.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Philadelphia Variety Club will present its annual vaudeville and motion picture show on March 1st, evening, at the Fay's Theatre, in that city. The show will last four hours. Samuel Stiefel has provided the theatre. Heading the auxiliary committees are Mrs. Lee Biben, chairman; Mrs. Esther Benn, and Mrs. Cole Charlap, president of the group.

More Personal Star Appearances Would Aid Grosses, Says Owner

Neighborhood and suburban motion picture theatres could show bigger grosses if more talent from Hollywood were available for personal appearances, exhibitor Sam Fleischman, owner of the Roxian, Pittsburgh, maintains, in a statement of results shown at his boxoffice by several recent stage attractions at his suburban house.

Currently presenting "Sons of the Pioneers" on his stage, a singing company headed by songwriter Bob Nolan of Columbia western pictures reputation. Mr. Fleishman claims that "most neighborhoods get a 'big kick' out of stage talent, particularly when the entertainers come in with a previous buildup from film, radio or record appearances." Nolan has made records, he said.

Previously, the Roxian drew $600 for a four-show day featuring 'Smiley' Burnette and three other musicians, against an average of $200 daily gross. The acts usually cost Fleishman $150 a day plus percentage, or a $200 guarantee.

The Roxian, and other theatres around Pittsburgh, have played Ken Maynard, Tom Mix, and Hoot Gibson following the belief that western stars are tops for houses that can't afford heavy money for name radio acts or front-rank film players.

Many theatres within a hundred-mile radius of Pittsburgh also present traveling units sporadically, when they can get a one- or two-day booking.

Most attractions are handled through the William Morris office, Joe Hiller's National Theatrical Exchange, or Sid Marke

Downtown vaudeville is restricted to the Stanley, that usually features a name band and two to four single acts, or a layout of five or six specialties backed by Max Adkins' house orchestra.

The Senator inaugurated a stage and pictures policy in mid-December, but dropped it three weeks later, when it failed to show a profit, because of the added expense outweighing the increased income.

"King of Kings" Showings Held

About 500 showings of the Cecil B. DeMille production "King of Kings" have been held or will be held by Monday under the sponsorship of religious organizations and arrangement of the King of Kings Committee. The prints are released by the Cinema Corporation.

The committee already is laying plans to increase the number of showings next year. The Reverend Dr. Christian F. Reisner of the Broadway, New York City, Temple, is chairman.

The Radio City Music Hall, New York, will be the scene of Easter sunrise services Sunday The services, sponsored by the Greater New York Federation of churches, formerly were held at Columbia University. The program will include a talk by T. Z. Koo, Chinese Christian, and hymns by the Good Shepherd Lutheran Choir of 250 boys. The services will be broadcast by the National Broadcasting Company.

NBC will televise Protestant services Sunday, which will be conducted by Dr. Samuel McCrea Cavert, of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, and Catholic services, also Sunday, conducted by the Rt. Reverend Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen, of the Catholic University of America.

Television's first Easter will also include two religious films and a dramatic production appropriate to the season. The films are "King of Kings" and "Cloistered," a film of convent life. The "Passing of the Third Floor Back" is the stage production.

Easter sunrise services will also be broadcast from the Hollywood Bowl by Mutual and will be telecast by the Don Lee station W6XAO, only television station in the west. Columbia will carry the services from the Forest Lawn Memorial Park in Glendale, Cal.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

From War Itself

Underway at the Denham Studios is the Legeran production, "Old Bill and Son." Location shots were taken on the battle-front in France. The picture, which treats in comedy and drama of the "old sweats" of yesteryear and the "Tommies" of today, is being directed by Ian Dalrymple, who likewise wrote the script. Morland Graham, veteran of the 1914-1918 war, plays Old Bill. John Mills, a modern Londoner, has the part of his son.

Bruce Bainsfather, creator of "Old Bill," world famed cartoon character, is author of the story, and is working with the unit. Georges Perinal, Frenchman, is cameraman.

The cast, a strong one by British box office standards, includes Mary Clare, Rene Ray, Gus McNaughton, Rene Houston, Roland Culver, Ronnie Shiner, and, subject to permit, Janine Darcey Mills has been released temporarily from Army service to play in the film.

Prisoners Actors

British mercantile marine officers, who were prisoners of war on board the German "pocket" battleship Graf Spee while she was being battered into Montevideo by British cruisers are to take part in a new film, "For Freedom," in production at Shepherd's Bush Studios by Gainsborough for General Film Distributors. The film was devised and is being directed by Maurice Elvey and Castleton Knight, producer of Gaumont-British News Reel.

The plot is centered in a newsreel office in London just before Munich. Much exclusive material of the scuttling of the Graf Spee will highspot the film.

Fifteen officers and 300 men of the warships Ajax and Exeter were granted Admiralty permission to appear in the film. General Film Distributors will handle the film in England.

The producer is Edward Black. Dialogue is by Miles Malleson, scenario by Leslie Arliss.

From the Stage

"Gaslight," the screen version of a highly successful stage play, is now well underway at Denham, a British National production with Diana Wynyard and Anton Wallbrock in the leading roles. Thorold Dickenson is directing.

The film has a last century setting, and care has been exercised to see that atmosphere and detail are exact. Action has been speeded and new settings and scenes added. Bernard Knowles is cameraman, with Bridget Boland and A. R. Rawlinson responsible for the screenplay.

Concentration

Having concluded work in the small studio at Highbury, the Charter Films Unit working on "Pastor Hall" screen story based on the life of Pastor Niemoller, have moved over to the Twickenham Studios where an imposing set has been built representing the interior of a Nazi concentration camp.

Meanwhile both the opening and the closing scenes have gone "into the can." One of these represents a harvest festival at Altdorf village church. The other shows Pastor Hall invading a Nazi pulpit and delivering harangue against the Hitler regime. Wilfred Lawson has the title role. The producers are Roy and John Boulting. Grand National will distribute.

HEAR RADIO VERSION BEFORE SCREENING

An interesting venture, which, incidentally, must have helped create "sales acceptance" with the public, was made by the British Broadcasting Corporation on a recent Sunday when it broadcast a radio version of "The Proud Valley," Ealing Studios film reviewed in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for January 27th but not yet publicly shown in London.

The radio version closely followed the film, and not only did members of the cast of the film act over the air, but the musical passages, and Paul Robeson's voice, were played over from the original sound track.

Torture Devices

Genuine medieval torture devices, says Pathe Pictures, are used in its Edgar Wallace thriller now in production at Welwyn under the eye of John Argyle producer. One of these is the Iron Maiden, a grisly torture device loaned Argyle by the British Museum. This is not the least of the more lurid factors in the film, which also includes an incident in which two persons are trapped in a tomb.

The title of this juicy melodrama is "The Door with Seven Locks." Norman Lee is directing Leslie Banks, Lilli Palmer, Romilly Lunge and Gina Malo. The key to the film is the scheming of a doctor to gain possession of a fortune.

In the News

Harry Korris and Tom Gamble, two of the most popular comedians in the North, will be teamed in a new British picture "Somewhere in England," which will be made by two producers, Butchers and Blakeley Productions. Production will be at Walton on Thames.

Preparing for the production boom anticipated in the more optimistic film circles, Sound City has now made two stages available for shooting. Meanwhile the Sound City recording unit is on hire to another studio.

The Rock Studios at Elstree, among the most modern and best equipped in the country, will reopen to activity in the immediate future when British Eagle Productions starts "Gentlemen of Venture," which Paul Stein will direct for RKO-Radio release. Other subjects, including a romantic comedy, are scheduled.

English Rights

Aiming to translate the film into a French equivalent of Britain's "Lion Has Wings," Savoy Film Production has taken up the English rights of the successful French film, "World in Arms." It intends to synchronize the film in English, and graft additional passages showing Britain's efforts towards victory.

"World in Arms" is a propagandist production aiming to depict the strength of the Allied powers, and the efforts of Britain and France to translate it into victory over the Nazis.

Studio Reopens

The Riverside Studios, Hammersmith, the lessee of which is Jack Buchanan, and inactive for some time, has reopened for production. There a newly formed organization, Hammersmith Film Productions, is at work with "Tilly of Bloomsbury," which Leslie Hisott is directing for RKO Radio release. Sydney Howard and Jean Gillie have the leads.

Others in the cast include stage artistes Kathleen Harrison, Athene Seyler and Athole Stewart.

The script is by Nils Holstius, and co-producer with A. Barr Smith is Dr. Kurt Sternberg.

Circumstantial

Whilst the "For Freedom" unit is at work on one stage at Shepherds Bush, a Twentieth Century production, "The Girl in the News," has gone to work on another. Margaret Lockwood stars, with Carol Reed in directorial command. Margaretta Scott, Roger Lievesy and Basil Radford also appear.

The theme of "The Girl in the News" is a girl's ordeal under wrongful accusation and circumstantial evidence. Otto Kanturek is in charge of the cameras, and the scenario is by Frank Launder and Sidney Gilliatt. The Maurice Ostrer—Edward Black team controls production.

For Trinder

Tommy Trinder, a gawky, confident Cockney comedian who has leaped to fame as a radio personality and vaudeville star, has been signed by Michael Balcon to make a Naval comedy, "Sailors Three." Much in demand these days by film producers, Trinder comes to Ealing to bring off what Balcon believes will be a comedy hat trick: Gracie Fields and George Formby, leaders of the MOTION PICTURE HERALD Box Office Poll, were both nursed to Fame by that organization.

"Sailors Three" will have for background a naval depot on land. Walter Forde will direct the film, which is from an original story by Austin Melford, who wrote it with Trinder in mind.

THREE MORE STATES HIT THEATRE CHANCE GAMES

Illegal, Say Officials of Texas, North Carolina, Oklahoma; New York Exhibitor Cleared

Setbacks for chance games were reported in several localities this week. In Texas the state attorney general listed seven games which he termed lotteries. In North Carolina the state attorney general ruled that theatre Bank Night is illegal in that state, and in Oklahoma the attorney general's office, in accordance with its ruling two years ago, termed Bank Night conducted at two Guthrie theatres illegal despite a resolution of cooperation by the city's chamber of commerce.

In New York, however, a special sessions court threw out a second case against an exhibitor on lottery charges. While no written opinion was given, the majority of the court pointed out that its acquittal was based on the fact that the theatre permitted the announcement of numbers to participants in the lobby without requiring the purchase of an admission. The acquitted was Christy Carnavos of the Momart, Brooklyn. Previously, James May, former manager of the Atlantic, Brooklyn, had been acquitted of a lottery charge.

Reconsideration Refused

In Wisconsin, the state supreme court refused to reconsider a recent decision holding Bingo a lottery, on appeal by counsel, for the Bahn Frei Hall in Milwaukee, against which an injunction had been obtained by Charles W. Trampe, head of Film Service, Inc. The injunction restrained continuance of Bingo on the ground that it constitutes a public nuisance.

The seven games ruled illegal by Gerald Mann, attorney general of Texas, included three variations of the numbers game, two kinds of Quiz Night, a device whereby the winner is determined by matching finger prints, and a socalled "suit club" in which an award is made to a person completing a sentence.

In response to queries on the legality of various forms of theatre games in which awards are given to the holders of certain numbers, Harry McMullan, attorney general of North Carolina, said: "The attorney general's office has taken the position that all forms of Bank Night are in violation of the state law.

Says Injunction Would Stand

The Oklahoma attorney general's office put a ban on Bank Night in 1938, but two Guthrie theatres, operated under the same management, have been maintaining a form of Bank Night. The board of directors of the Guthrie chamber of commerce passed a resolution of cooperation and one of its representatives has been conducting the drawing. On an application for a ruling by the county attorney, Stephen Holloway, assistant attorney general of the state, said that the games can be stopped by an injunction as a "common nuisance."

Efforts to legalize Bingo in Lancaster, Pa., also experienced a setback this week when a county jury in a test case decided the game was gambling and convicted Richard Landis, of Rothville, Pa., of maintaining gambling devices. In Dauphin County, Pa., two defendants, on charges involving the operation of Bingo, were fined $150 each and directed to pay costs.

The city council of Alliance, Ohio, has repealed the two-year-old theatre Bank Night ordinance which levied a license fee of $7.50 for each time a theatre operated the game plus 10 per cent of the award money.

Mayor W. J. Locke of Mansfield, Ohio, has instructed Meade K. Bates, police chief, that aisles in the theatre and sidewalks in front of Warner's Ohio, Madison and Majestic, must be kept clear on Bank Nights.

Theatre Raided Second Time

Indianapolis police have raided the Ohio theatre for the second time while a Bank Roll Night was in progress. They arrested George Settos, owner; Orvin Moore, manager, and William H. Douglass, an employee, charging them with operating a lottery and gift enterprise. Mr. Moore and James Kenny, another employee, were acquitted on a similar charge by a municipal court jury following the first raid.

The New Mexico supreme court, while it did not rule on the law's constitutionality, upheld the right of the Revenue Bureau to enforce a 1939 statute prohibiting lotteries.

Chancellor D. M. Russell in the chancery court at Gulfport, Miss., dismissed the suit of Jack Whall, a patron, against the Saenger Theatres, Inc., challenging the legality of Bank Night conducted by the theatre company. Mr. Whall had brought suit to recover $3,000 in admissions which he said had been paid by him and others who assigned him their claims, and sought to have Bank Night stopped by a restraining order on the grounds that it was a public nuisance.

Movie-Title Night was inaugurated in Toronto by the Prince of Wales, Grover and Century theatres, three houses in the B & F circuit, subsidiary of Famous Players Canadian circuit.

Bingo receipts in Cincinnati in January fell below the December figures. Based on playing permits issued by City Manager C. O. Sherrill, the records show that 225,929 players paid a total of $178,727.23 at 202 parties in January. Awards amounted to $42,701, leaving a net profit of $136,026.23 to the sponsoring organizations. December figures showed total attendance of 242,719 at 202 parties with receipts $193,637.57, awards $46,803.50, and net profit $146,834.07.

CALLS THEATRES "GAMBLING HALLS"

"Films are merely a thin camouflage for the conduct of a lot of very elegant little gambling halls" in and around Buffalo, charges Sid Lehman, who presides over United Artists' sales activities in western New York.

"Pictures do not comprise the motion picture business in my territory," Mr. Lehman continued, in remarks reported by Ardis Smith, dramatic critic, in the Buffalo Evening News. "Every night in the week there is some sort of money racket being conducted with the screen plays as a transparent front. Enough dishes are given away to serve the world, even if all were smashed after every meal. Regardless of the merit of screen fare, prices on these nights frequently soar to a dollar top. The entertainment has nothing to do with it. It is all based on the amount you stand a chance to win."

Tax-Bills Lose In Two States

The motion picture industry fared well in legislative actions in two states this week when both houses in Kentucky passed a bill to reduce the state admission tax on admissions of more than $1, and the Mississippi ticket tax, which was sought by the city of Jackson, was killed in committee. In New York the legislature, preparing to adjourn, killed bills inimical to the industry in wholesale manner.

New York House in Action

Among the bills killed in the lower house at Albany, N. Y., were: Bingo legalization measures by Max Turshen and Aaron Goldstein; anti-discrimination measures by Daniel Burrows and Bernard Austin; Irwin Davidson's proposal giving a state of privilege to any person with a ticket of admission to the theatre and restraining ejection; three per cent tax proposal; outdoor advertising survey bills and suggestions for study of the billboard situation by committees; chain store tax, imposing levies on circuit theatres; anti-ASCAP bill favored by owners of many small theatres, the broadcasting industry and restaurant groups, and the Wilson measure to provide licensing charges for the resale of admission tickets by telegraph and telephone companies.

Reported out favorably was Russell Wright's outdoor advertising agency regulation bill.

Reported out in the Senate but killed in Assembly committee was a bill to make a larceny of the unauthorized recording of broadcasts, favored by the American Federation of Musicians, Local 802, National Association of Performing Artists, but disapproved by New York State broadcasters.

Meanwhile, one bill of interest to New York theatres lay before a Senate committee despite unanimous passage by the Assembly several weeks ago. It is the measure to limit the resale of theatre or other tickets of admission to a 75-cent premium above original price, fought for by the League of New York Theatres.

Fireproofing Bill

In a bill introduced this week the general business law would be amended to provide more rigid specifications for fireproofing motion picture projection booths.

The Kentucky measure reducing the admission tax on admissions of more than $1, which is now before Governor Johnson for signature, also exempts dramatic productions and other forms of amusement presented for religious, charitable or educational purposes from the tax.

The Mississippi House ways and means committee killed the Senate-approved bill which would have allowed the city of Jackson to levy additional taxes now invoked by the state.

Special Session Indicated

Governor Lloyd C. Stark of Missouri has indicated that he may call a special session of the legislature to deal with the relief situation in the state. Only $1,000,000 for direct relief remains of the amount appropriated.

Reports that the Pennsylvania special session, which probably will be called following the April 23rd primaries, will consider enactment of new taxes including an amusement levy, have been denied by Governor Arthur H. James and legislative leaders.

Representative James Seccombe of Ohio has introduced a bill in Congress making it a criminal offense to discriminate against Negroes in admittance to theatres or in segregating them from white patrons.

The showing of motion pictures on Sunday has been approved in three Vermont towns, Rutland, Northfield and Winooski.

Belmont, Mass., citizens have voted in favor of Sunday shows by 1,714 to 1,579.

New York Theatres Push Member Drive

Based on successful campaigns in three test cities in Westchester, New York, the Audience Organization Committee of the League of New York Theatres and Actors Equity decided at a meeting this week to go forward with their plans for enrolling 2,500 members. Tentative plans for interesting theatregoers have been consolidated into one which provides that members who deposit $5 may reserve tickets by telephone. Members who do not make the deposit will be permitted to make reservations by telephone also, but will be required to pick up the tickets a fixed number of days before the performance.

The campaigns in Scarsdale, White Plains and Bronxville provided for a general meeting, but this phase was dropped. A high response to a request for mail ballots led the committee to continue with a direct mail campaign. The new organization will be called The Playgoers.

IN COURTS

Infringement Suit Against RKO, NBC

An infringement action seeking an accounting of royalties and profits from a motion picture, radio broadcasts, recordings and sheet music sales of a song, believed to aggregate several million dollars was filed in federal court in Los Angeles last week. The suit was brought by Evelyn Carew of Los Angeles, who charges that her unpublished musical composition, "Chatter Box," was plagiarized by a song of the same name used in the RKO picture, "That's Right, You're Wrong," and by recordings, radio broadcasts and sheet music sales of the same song.

The plaintiff asks an injunction, $100,000 actual damages and an accounting of the profits and royalties from the picture, the radio broadcasts on which it was used, the record and sheet music sales, according to Schwartz & Frohlich, attorneys for a number of the defendants.

Defendants named include RKO Radio Pictures, Kay Kyser, National Broadcasting Company, Mutual Broadcasting System, Columbia Broadcasting System, American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, Gene Buck, Chappell & Company, Decca and Allan Roberts and Jerome Brainin, authors of the song used in the picture.

Harold Lloyd Testifies

Harold Lloyd testified Friday in federal court in New York in his own behalf in the plagiarism suit of Lowell Brentano and William Rapp against Mr. Lloyd and the Harold Lloyd Corporation. Henry Goddard, federal judge, reserved decision after viewing the film "Professor Beware," which plaintiffs claim infringed upon their scenario, "Greek to You."

Disney Decision Reserved

Trial of the plagiarism suit of Thornton W. Allen against RKO Radio Pictures, Walt Disney Products, Ltd., and Irving Berlin, Inc., ended on Friday in federal court in New York. Judge Edward Conger reserved decision. The plaintiff charges that the song, "Some Day My Prince Will come," used in "Snow White," infringed upon the plaintiff's "Old Eli March." Deems Taylor, musical consultant of Columbia Broadcasting System, and Professor Marshall Bartholomew of Yale testified for the defendants.

Dismiss Damage Suit

The damage action brought by Joan Storm against Mae West, Arch Obeler, J. Walter Thompson Agency and the National Broadcasting Company, was dismissed this week by Harry Hollzer, federal judge, in Los Angeles. Miss Storm charged that her play "Love and Applesauce" was infringed in the "Adam and Eve" skit in which Miss West appeared on the Chase and Sanborn radio program.

Reade Files Action

A breach of contract suit for $150,000 damages was filed Friday in New York supreme court by Walter Reade against City Theatres Company. Mr. Reade claims that he was employed in 1934 to manage the defendant's City theatre, New York, at $200 weekly. The complaint charges wrongful discharge of Mr. Reade in October, 1939.

Libel Suit Dropped

A libel suit for $50,000 damages against the National Broadcasting Company and Walter Winchell was dismissed Friday by Samuel Rosenman, New York supreme court justice. The plaintiff, Minnie Smith, claimed to have been libelled in a broadcast in January, 1939.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

CAFE HOSTESS: Preston Foster, Ann Dvorak—A drama that has a murder or two that did just average business. Would suggest skipping if possible as it is just another picture. Running time, 62 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GOOD GIRLS GO TO PARIS: Joan Blondell, Melvyn Douglas, Walter Connolly—Very good light comedy but rather silly in spots. Played February 28.—Joe E. Edwards, Liberty Theatre, Johnston, S. C. Small town patronage.

HIS GIRL FRIDAY: Cary Grant, Rosalind Russell, Ralph Bellamy—Boy, oh, boy, what a honey, and does this gal Russell run away with the show. It's so fast they are afraid to laugh in case they miss something. Gags by the million, three or four at once. It's talky, noisy, but what a tempo this boy Hawks has maintained throughout. Give it your best time and step on it big and it will sure pay dividends. Tell 'em it is one of the best pictures of the year. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 2-4.—Fred Brown, Plymouth and Majestic Theatres, Plymouth, Wis. General patronage.

First National

CASTLE ON THE HUDSON: John Garfield, Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan—Good prison story with dramatic ending. Well liked here. Running time, 80 minutes. Played February 25-26.—M. D. Stewart. Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. General patronage.

CASTLE ON THE HUDSON: John Garfield, Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan—This is a rather poor follow-up of "Each Dawn I Die" and "Invisible Stripes" and business was below average on Sunday and Monday. Although business was off, the picture was fairly well liked.—W. P. McGovern, Ritz Theatre, Loogootee, Ind. Small town and rural patronage.

FIGHTING 69TH, THE: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, George Brent, Jeffrey Lynn, Alan Hale, Dennis Morgan—This is perfect screen entertainment from beginning to end and the biggest grosser I have ever had from Warner Bros Of course, the Catholic angle helped business in this Catholic town. I personally liked this better than "Gone with the Wind.—W. P. McGovern, Ritz Theatre, Loogootee, Ind. Small town and rural patronage.

FIGHTING 69TH: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, George Brent, Jeffrey Lynn, Alan Hale, Dennis Morgan—The kind of an action picture that a showman dreams about. Just long enough to be good. As good a picture as you will want. You who can choose your play days put it on the best days for good results. Running time, 90 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FIGHTING 69TH: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, George Brent, Jeffrey Lynn, Dennis Morgan, Alan Hale—In spite of the fact that they are still fighting the World War so much can be said in favor of this picture, its brilliant production, authentic story, fine acting and moral lesson, combined with the fact that it is so timely, if you give it plenty of publicity it will go over anywhere. Give it your best playing time. It is worth it. Running time, 90 minutes. Played February 22-23.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

FOUR WIVES: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, John Garfield, Eddie Albert, Claude Rains, Jeffrey Lynn, Dick Foran, Frank McHugh, May Robson—Here's a honey even if it was on percentage. Business not exceptional but that was due to the weather, not the picture. This "Four Daughters" gang can just about stand one more picture. While they are swell entertainment, they are like the Hardy series. A little too much alike. Running time, 99 minutes. Played January 24-26.—Fred Brown, Plymouth Theatre, Plymouth, Wis. General patronage.

FOUR WIVES: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, John Garfield, Claude Rains, Eddie Albert, Jeffrey Lynn, Dick Foran, Frank McHugh, May Robson—Splendid picture. Excellent work by every member of the cast. Direction perfect. Music score beautiful. Business fair. Played March 3-5.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

FOUR WIVES: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, John Garfield, Eddie Albert, Claude Rains, Jeffrey Lynn, Dick Foran, Frank McHugh, May Robson—One of the best pictures of the season. Here's hoping Warner Bros. will keep it up. Running time, 99 minutes. Played February 24-25.—W. O. Dickens, Myers Theatre, Nashville, N. C. General patronage.

ON YOUR TOES: Zorina, Eddie Albert, Alan Hale, Gloria Dickson, James Gleason—Entirely out of line for the small town and I might say a big flop at the box office, and about 30 minutes would have been long enough to keep the audience in misery. Running time, 94 minutes. Played November 5-6.—G. J. Abeln, May Theatre, Watkins, Minn. General patronage.

PRIVATE DETECTIVE: Jane Wyman, Dick Foran—Too many crime pictures in circulation. No draw. Good for Alcatraz and that is all. Running time, 55 minutes. Played March 5.—A. T. Wohlent, Main Theatre, Altamont, Ill. Small town patronage.

RETURN OF DR. X, THE: Wayne Morris, Humphrey Bogart, Rosemary Lane, Lya Lys, John Litel—A swell spook and horror yarn. John Litel steals the show. Why doesn't Hollywood give him better parts? This is a picture you can build up but sell it as horror play to the Frankenstein crowd. Green lights out front, display of mysterious shaped test tubes, skeletons and all the old hoke. Picture will satisfy the class of people that will buy it. The ones that won't like it won't buy it anyway. But it's certainly no kid stuff; scares 'em stiff. Running time, 60 minutes. Played February 23-25.—Fred Brown, Plymouth and Majestic Theatres, Plymouth, Wis. General patronage.

RETURN OF DR. X: Wayne Morris, Rosemary Lane, Humphrey Bogart, Lya Lys, John Litel—Will satisfy those who like murder and horror pictures, but our patrons were conspicuous by their absence. Running time, 62 minutes. Played February 28-29.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

RETURN OF DR. X, THE: Humphrey Bogart, Wayne Morris, Rosemary Lane, Lya Lys, John Litel—Played this on a double feature. Second feature a western. Scared all children away. Too much fiction for adults. Should be shown in a shooting gallery with free admission. Running time, 60 minutes. Played March 1-2.—A. T. Wohlent, Main Theatre, Altamont, Ill. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANDY HARDY GETS SPRING FEVER: Mickey Rooney, Ann Rutherford, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—Simply swell, as usual for the Hardy family series. Got a big laugh and extra business although it was third-run here. Running time, 84 minutes. Played March 2-5.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

ANOTHER THIN MAN: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Ruth Hussey, Virginia Grey—Powell and Loy give their usual good performance, which the public has learned to expect from this team. The laughs came thick and fast and the cash customers were still laughing when they came out. Business was better than an average of the past ten weeks for corresponding days of the week, which didn't make yours truly feel bad. Running time, 102 minutes. Played March 3-5.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1940: Eleanor Powell, Fred Astaire, George Murphy—Good picture; fair business. Picture had been milked before I played it. Running time, 100 minutes. Played March 6-7.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1940: Eleanor Powell, Fred Astaire, George Murphy, Frank Morgan—This is a big musical done on an extravagant scale with Eleanor Powell dancing better than ever and Fred Astaire and George Murphy doing a good job of dancing and acting, both. Our patrons were high in their praises of George Murphy, with little to say for Fred Astaire. Eleanor Powell's talents are confined almost entirely to the dance sequences, and the singing and acting are sadly wanting. Frank Morgan is in his usual form and furnishes most of the laughs. The plot of the story is worn, with the leading man (George Murphy) suddenly taking to drink on the opening night of the big show and his partner (Fred Astaire) saving the show by taking his place in the dance numbers. The merit of this picture is wholly in its extravagant settings and its musical and dance numbers. If your patrons like musicals this is all that they could wish. Our business was below average for Thursday and Friday, and we can't blame it on the weather. Those who saw it felt satisfied but too few people saw it for a profitable business. Running time, 100 minutes. Played February 29-March 1.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

EARL OF CHICAGO: Robert Montgomery, Edward Arnold, Reginald Owen, Edmund Gwenn—It is different. Montgomery makes a comeback, according to our fans. Arnold is excellent, and Edmund Gwenn got a big hand. Business normal to good. They'll go out talking about this picture. Running time, 87 minutes. Played March 2-5.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

FAST AND FURIOUS: Ann Sothern, Franchot Tone—Just the kind of picture the people want. Plenty of action and comedy. Played February 14-15.—J. G. Fair, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa. General patronage.

GREAT WALTZ, THE: Miliza Korjus, Luise Rainer, Fernand Gravet—Repeated this on our bargain night to above average business. Book it back three or four times about every six months and make yourself some extra money. The more often you play it the bigger it gets. Running time, 103 minutes. Played February 20.—Fred Brown, Plymouth and Majestic Theatres, Plymouth, Wis. General patronage.

HENRY GOES ARIZONA: Frank Morgan, Virginia Weidler—Good for Saturday. Well liked. Business average. Running time, 70 minutes. Played February 17.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. General patronage.

JOE AND ETHEL TURP CALL ON THE PRESIDENT: Ann Sothern, Lewis Stone, William Gargan, Walter Brennan—Swell entertainment. They love this gal Sothern. She's perfect in these Mazie type roles. Good for any audience and with another picture with names that need support this will satisfy anybody. Hardly strong enough for top spot alone but deserving of a good spot. Don't throw it away. Running time, 70 minutes. Played February 10-12.—Fred Brown, Plymouth and Majestic Theatres, Plymouth, Wis. General patronage.

JUDGE HARDY AND SON: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—My people don't go for these in a big way. Running time, 84 minutes. Played February 15-16.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. General patronage.

JUDGE HARDY AND SON: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—You cannot say too much for these boys' pictures, as it is tops for us. Big business. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 4-6.—J. G. Fair, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa. General patronage.

LADY OF THE TROPICS: Robert Taylor, Hedy Lamarr—We enjoyed some extra business on this picture.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MAN FROM DAKOTA: Wallace Beery, Dolores Del Rio, John Howard—This picture will not come up to the standard set by Wallace Beery and is not as good as "Thunder Afloat." Our receipts fell below the average for his pictures and from an entertaining angle it is rather weak. The story deals with two Yankee prisoners escaping from a Southern prison camp in the Civil War, and it takes you through their flight to reach the Northern lines and safety. Dolores Del Rio, after shooting a Southern officer, is picked up by the fugitives and also a very important map of Northern activities, and the three fugitives are trying to get the information through to General Grant and also save their own necks. There are a few laughs but the picture is slow and leaves much to be desired. Running time, 72 minutes. Played February 25-26.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

NINOTCHKA: Greta Garbo, Melvyn Douglas, Ina Claire—A good picture and did average business. But it is still Garbo. Running time, 110 minutes. Played January 28-30.—J. G. Fair, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa. General patronage.

NINOTCHKA: Greta Garbo, Melvyn Douglas, Ina Claire—Failed on this one. The first to let us down from Metro this year. They liked "The Women" but just coudn't go for this one. Running time, 110 minutes. Played March 10-12.—D. Whittington, Stevenson and Whittington, Rivoli Theatre, Rocbester, N. Y. General patronage.

PYGMALION: Leslie Howard, Wendy Hiller—Here is one of the best pictures that we have ever played, and we play plenty of good ones. Not a kick from anyone, even though some of our customers like pictures with action. If any exhibitor has not yet played this, do so by all means and cash in on it. Running time, 85 minutes. Played February 29-March 1.—A. R. Dakin, Rice Lake Theatre, Bissett, Manitoba, Canada. Mining community patronage.

SECRET OF DR. KILDARE: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day, Helen Gilbert—Swell picture. This series is gaining momentum. Business not too good but no fault of picture. Played February 22-34.—Victor Mantz, New Ogden Theatre, Ogden, Iowa. Small town patronage.

SHOP AROUND THE CORNER: James Stewart, Margaret Sullavan, Frank Morgan—Another good one from MGM that did extra business and all liked it. Running time, 100 minutes. Played February 18-20.—J. G. Fair, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa. General patronage.

SHOP AROUND THE CORNER: James Stewart, Margaret Sullavan, Frank Morgan—Personally thought this just a lot of blah blah. Fair crowd said good picture. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 5-6—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. General patronage.

WIZARD OF OZ, THE: Judy Garland, Frank Morgan, Bert Lahr, Ray Bolger, Jack Haley, Billie Burke, Margaret Hamilton—Far below expectation. We have yet to enjoy fairy tales in our situation.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Monogram

DOWN THE WYOMING TRAIL: Tex Ritter—This star, Ritter, has something people really like. Like Autry, he is tops here. Fine show. Pleased the public very well. More power to you, Tex Ritter. Running time, 70 minutes. Played February 22-23.—B. R. Armel, Stanley Theatre, Stanley, Va. Small town patronage.

GANGSTER'S BOY: Jackie Cooper—Played this Sunday and Monday and did excellent business. Running time, 80 minutes.—G. J. Abeln, May Theatre, Watkins, Minn. General patronage.

IRISH LUCK: Frankie Darro, Dick Purcell—Good for a double bill only. Few good comments. Running time, 58 minutes. Played February 26.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. Very small town and rural patronage.

MAN'S COUNTRY: Jack Randall—I never do much business with Randall, even though his westerns are all OK. Monogram, how about putting Randall in the money class by adding Max Terhune and "Elmer" to cast of all the Randall westerns? I believe they would then do real business. Why not give it a trial? —Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

MUTINY IN THE BIG HOUSE: Barton MacLane, Charles Bickford—Thought this would bolster "Ninotchka" for those who like some action but all the action came in the last 10 minutes. Rental wasn't bad, but not enough of what the title would like you to think. Running time, 82 minutes. Played March 10-12.—D. Whittington, Stevenson and Whittington, Rivoli Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. General patronage.

RIDERS OF THE FRONTIER: Tex Ritter—This is the best of the Tex Ritter westerns and I believe it was the Negro in it that caused my patrons to like it so well. Good business on this one, best I have ever had on an ordinary western. Running time, 58 minutes. Played March 1-2.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. Very small town and rural patronage.

WOLF CALL: Movita, John Carroll—Here's a fine picture and one that deserves a run in almost any theatre. Had good business on this one. Running time, 65 minutes.—G. J. Abeln, May Theatre, Watkins, Minn. General patronage.

Paramount

DISPUTED PASSAGE: Dorothy Lamour, Akim Tamiroff, John Howard—Good picture; fair business. It was too old when I played it. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 3-4.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey. Okla. Small town patronage.

GERONIMO: Preston Foster, Andy Devine, Ellen Drew, William Henry—Give this one your best playing time with a little extra publicity and you will go places. Our patrons became so interested they thought they were right in the picture. Several jumped in the aisles and shouted. Had this picture been produced in color we wouldn't have traded it for any top picture this season. Though played mid week we did better than average business. Running time, 90 minutes. Played February 21-22.—Roy W. Waller, Roy Theatre, New Concord, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

GULLIVER'S TRAVELS: Color Cartoon Feature—Personally did not care for it. Business fair. Running time, 75 minutes. Played February 27-28.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. General patronage.

GULLIVER'S TRAVELS: Color Cartoon Feature—This guy "Gabby" will roll them in the aisles. We thought the picture swell. Backgrounds, sound, everything. The creation "Gabby" should go swell in a follow series of single reelers. Running time, 77 minutes.—Phil Shannon, Life Theatre, Woodsfield, Ohio. Small town patronage.

LAW OF THE PAMPAS: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, Steffi Duna—Best of the Hoppy series. Doubled with "Pride of the Blue Grass" with average business. Played March 1-2.—Victor Mantz, New Ogden Theatre, Ogden, Iowa. Small town patronage.

LAW OF THE PAMPAS: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, Steffi Duna—Very good western. See that El Brendel has been added to cast of future "Cassidys." He should be great asset.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

LIGHT THAT FAILED, THE: Ronald Colman, Walter Huston, Ida Lupino, Muriel Angelus—Fair picture but tempo too slow to please average small town audience. Fair draw. Played February 28-29.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

LLANO KID: Tito Guizar, Gale Sondergaard—Fair entertainment to good Saturday business. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 2.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. General patronage.

OUR LEADING CITIZEN: Bob Burns, Susan Hayward—Paramount pictures just don't get the grosses here. Perhaps it's the return run downtown at the same price scale as the small neighborhood houses and we're only five blocks from downtown and wait 60 days for the picture! Running time, 88 minutes. Played March 8-9.—D. Whittingtou, Stevenson and Whittington, Rivoli Theatre, Rochester, N. Y. General patronage.

OUR NEIGHBORS—THE CARTERS: Fay Bainter, Frank Craven—Played this picture on Merit Night to a very satisfied audience. In fact, many said they thought it a very good picture. And that is "sumpin" nowadays. You can't go wrong as far as satisfying the patrons if you have something to get them in with. Only fault with picture is weakness of cast. Business good. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 1.—W. H. Hoffman, Lamar Theatre, Arthur, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

PAROLE FIXER: William Henry, Virginia Dale, Robert Paige—Just an ordinary picture with nothing particularly to recommend it or not too bad to deserve "panning." Suitable for a double program or for bargain nights. Our business below average in spite of the FBI and the great work they have done and are doing. Just so-so. Running time, 62 minutes. Played February 27-28.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

REMEMBER THE NIGHT: Barbara Stanwyck, Fred MacMurray, Beulah Bondi, Elizabeth Patterson—Good clean comedy, just the kind of entertainment your patrons can follow with ease and enjoy. Though Barbara Stanwyck cries as usual and ends up in jail, which does not leave very good taste, we did average mid-week business. Running time, 94 minutes. Played March 6-7.—Roy W. Waller, Roy Theatre, New Concord, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

REMEMBER THE NIGHT: Fred MacMurray, Barbara Stanwyck, Beulah Bondi, Elizabeth Patterson—This picture starts out good and holds your interest to the very end but leaves you hanging there when it says finis. The coming home angle is great appeal in small towns. Everyone satisfied with picture as far as it went but all agree to its unsatisfactory ending. Business just fair. Running time, 94 minutes.—W. H. Hoffman, Lamar Theatre, Arthur, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

RENEGADE TRAIL: William Boyd, Russell Hayden, George Hayes—The Hopalongs are good, but why the devil Paramount gets more for this one just because the boys sing a couple of songs is beyond me. Running time, 56 minutes. Played March 8-9.—D.

Whittington, Stevenson and Whittington, Rivoli Theatre Rochester, N. Y. General patronage.

THUNDER TRAIL: Charles Bickford, Marsha Hunt, Gilbert Roland—Just another westerner. It did not do us normal business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TIP-OFF GIRLS: Lloyd Nolan, Mary Carlisle—I failed to see this picture but our box office statement was below normal.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WHAT A LIFE: Jackie Cooper, Betty Field—Very satisfactory first of the week show. Running time, 79 minutes. Played February 26-28.—Coombes and Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

Republic

BLUE MONTANA SKIES: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—This is a fine show for all. Smiley is the life of all Autrys, and as long as Smiley plays, Autry will always be tops. Running time, 68 minutes. Played March 1-2.—B. R. Armel, Stanley Theatre, Stanley, Va. Small town patronage.

IN OLD MONTEREY: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, George Hayes, Sarie and Sallie, Hoosier Hot Shots—This is the finest Autry to date. People here are crazy about this guy. Showed this to a full house both nights. Sally and Sarie are fine and the Hoosier Hot Shots are also good. Running time, 73 minutes. Played March 8-9.—B. R. Stanley Theatre, Stanley, Va. Small town patronage.

KANSAS TERRORS, THE: Three Mesquiteers (Robert Livingston, Raymond Hatton, Duncan Renaldo)—Could have been better. Not much liked since Republic made this new cast. What's wrong with Ray Corrigan, "Tucson Smith"? He was the making of the shows. Get wise, Republic, before it's too late. Running time, 58 minutes. Played February 16-17.—B. R. Armel, Stanley Theatre, Stanley, Va. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BOY SLAVES: Anne Shirley, Roger Daniel—Picture not so bad but didn't bring in the people. Running time, 72 minutes.—G. J. Abeln, May Theatre, Watkins, Minn. General patronage.

CAREER: Edward Ellis, Anne Shirley—Picture fairly good but no draw. The small exhibitor did not get anything out of it.—G. J. Abeln, May Theatre, Watkins, Minn. General patronage.

CAREER: Edward Ellis, Anne Shirley—One of the nicest shows we have played. I remarked before on the quality of RKO's lineup for this year. If they only continue like this our worries are over till they try to sell us next year's product. Running time, 80 minutes. Played February 19-21.—Coombes and Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

DAY THE BOOKIES WEPT, THE: Joe Penner, Betty Grable—A good comedy and did a fair business. Running time, 64 minutes.—G. J. Abeln, May Theatre, Watkins, Minn. General patronage.

FIVE CAME BACK: Chester Morris, Wendy Barrie, Lucille Ball—Very good program picture.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

FLYING DEUCES, THE: Laurel and Hardy, Jean Parker—A good comedy and one that will draw the folks in. Running time, 70 minutes. Played November 12-13.—G. J. Abeln, May Theatre, Watkins, Minn. General patronage.

FLYING DEUCES, THE: Laurel and Hardy, Jean Parker—Laurel and Hardy's usual style but good entertainment. They go over here so everyone was satisfied. Running time, 69 minutes. Played February 12-14.—Coombes and Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

MARINES FLY HIGH: Richard Dix, Chester Morris Lucille Ball—Swell entertainment on Saturday. Good business. Running time, 68 minutes. Played March 9.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. General patronage.

SWISS FAMILY ROBINSON: Thomas Mitchell, Edna Best, Freddie Bartholomew, Terry Kilburn, Tim Holt—Good picture to good business. Children especially liked it. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 7-8.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. General patronage.

THAT'S RIGHT, YOU'RE WRONG: Kay Kyser and His Orchestra, Adolphe Menjou, May Robson, Edward Everett Horton, Lucille Ball—Good. Business good. Running time, 80 minutes. Played February 18-19.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. General patronage.

THAT'S RIGHT, YOU'RE WRONG: Kay Kyser and His Orchestra, Adolphe Menjou, May Robson, Edward Everett Horton, Lucille Ball—Here's a picture that has plenty of real entertainment and plenty of comedy. Should please everyone. Played February 26-27.—Joe E. Edwards, Liberty Theatre, Johnston, S. C. Small town patronage.

TWELVE CROWDED HOURS: Richard Dix, Lucille Ball—A good picture but failed at the box office. Running time, 73 minutes.—G. J. Abeln, May Theatre, Watkins, Minn. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BARRICADE: Warner Baxter, Alice Faye, Charles Winninger—Thank God for Charlie Winninger. He holds the show from being absolutely a washout. Running time, 71 minutes. Played February 28-March 1.—Fred Brown, Plymouth and Majestic Theatres, Plymouth, Wis. General patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN AT TREASURE ISLAND: Sidney Toler, Cesar Romero, Pauline Moore—I am about to offer a big reward to anyone who will tell me how to get a crowd on these smaller Fox pictures. Picture fair, to no biz. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 1.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. General patronage.

CHARLIE CHAN IN PANAMA: Sidney Toler, Jean Rogers—Fair picture; fair business. Chan died with Warner Oland. Running time, 66 minutes. Played March 8-9.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

CISCO KID AND THE LADY: Cesar Romero, Marjorie Weaver—Good picture; good business. A high class western played on Sunday and "Horse" Monday. Running time, 75 minutes. Played February 11-12.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. General patronage.

CITY IN DARKNESS: Sidney Toler, Lynn Bari—Chumps if they buy this one. Chan pictures used to be good and the first one with Toler as Chan on Treasure Island wasn't bad, but, boy, oh boy! Get a new Chan, Fox, if you want to continue this series. They're awful. Running time, 72 minutes. Played January 23.—Fred Brown, Plymouth Theatre, Plymouth, Wis. General patronage.

CITY IN DARKNESS: Sidney Toler, Lynn Bari—A very good program picture. Average business. Running time, 74 minutes. Played Januarv 5-6.—J. G. Fair, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa. General patronage.

CITY IN DARKNESS: Sidney Toler, Lynn Bari, Lon Chaney, Jr.—Fair Chan picture. Lon Chaney, Jr., has a small role in this one. I see that Hal Roach is giving Chaney his well deserved chance at bigger roles. RKO, why not reissue serial "Lost Frontier," starring Lon Chaney, Jr.? I sure would like to use it again. Haven't had a good serial in quite some time.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

DAY-TIME WIFE: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Warren William, Binnie Barnes—Oh-la-la, you Linda. What a gal. Beautiful. Story is weak, misses some place, but Linda is worth the price of admission. Running time, 72 minutes. Played February 21-23.—Fred Brown, Plymouth and Majestic Theatres, Plymouth, Wis. General patronage.

DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK: Henry Fonda, Claudette Colbert, Edna May Oliver—A very fine production. Color good. Acting splendid.—Joe E. Edwards, Liberty Theatre, Johnston, S. C. Small town patronage.

DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK: Henry Fonda, Claudette Colbert, Edna May Oliver—This was a remarkable production. Better for men than women as there is some slaughter. Didn't go well. Color beautiful and good story and most of all we did a good business. Running time. 103 minutes. Played January 21-23.—J. G. Fair, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa. General patronage.

DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK: Henry Fonda, Claudette Colbert, Edna May Oliver—Bought a pair of suspenders to keep from losing my pants. Too many Indians killed to satisfy ladies. No draw. Running time, 108 minutes. Played March 3-4.—A. T. Wohlent, Main Theatre, Altamont, Ill. Small town patronage.

ESCAPE, THE: Kane Richmond, Amanda Duff, Henry Armetta—Only average entertainment without a star name in the cast. Henry Armetta is really the best one in it. Business down under normal. Running time, 58 minutes. Played March 6-8.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

EVERYTHING HAPPENS AT NIGHT: Sonja Henie, Ray Milland, Robert Cummings—Fair picture to fair business. Sonja not big drawing card here. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 3-4.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. General patronage.

FRONTIER MARSHAL, THE: Randolph Scott, Cesar Romero, Nancy Kelly, Binnie Barnes—Enjoyed pleasant week end business. As fine a western as you would wish.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GRAPES OF WRATH, THE: Henry Fonda, Jane Darwell, Charley Grapewin, Dorris Bowdon, John Carradine—One of the greatest pictures of all time. Honesty fearlessly on the screen. Every actor and actress gave an excellent performance. Henry Fonda as Tom Joad, Jane Darwell as Ma Joad, John Carradine as Casy, Charley Grapewin as Grampa, Dorris Bowdon as Rosasharn and the entire company excellent in their several parts. Photography fine, theme good, with no language or action that would displease. Action fans should like this as there isn't a slow moment in it. All persons seeing the picture and remarking, said they liked "Grapes of Wrath" as one of the very best pictures that they ever saw, and a return date will be welcomed any "ole" time. Our hat is off to Fox for this bread winner. Running time, 128 minutes. Played March 5.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

HEAVEN WITH A BARBED WIRE FENCE: Jean Rogers, Glenn Ford—A few more like this and I will be for the Neely Bill. Just wasted film. Running time, 60 minutes. Played February 20-21.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. General patronage.

HE MARRIED HIS WIFE: Joel McCrea, Nancy Kelly, Mary Boland—All that can be said about it is that it was a mess.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

HERE I AM A STRANGER: Richard Greene, Bren-

JOHNNY APOLLO

Known to the Ivy League as the best stroke oar in College, but to Mickey Dwyer as the smoothest front man the mob ever had!

20th CENTURY FOX

da Joyce, Richard Dix, Roland Young, Gladys George —The few people that came slept through it. Mighty poor entertainment considering the allocation.—Victor Mantz, New Ogden Theatre, Ogden, Iowa. Small town patronage.

HIGH SCHOOL: Jane Withers, Cliff Edwards, Joe Brown, Jr.—I regret very much that Jane is slipping at the box office as did Shirley Temple. Whether the public is getting tired of the child stars, I don't know, but I believe that they are. Certainly our adult patronage is noticeably absent, except that they bring the children, and there are not enough of those.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

HIGH SCHOOL: Jane Withers, Joe Brown, Jr.—This is a refreshing treat after such a poor picture as "Chicken Wagon Family" and Jane Withers seems quite grownup but still the same romping madcap. We ran this picture on family night and we haven't heard so many good old-fashioned belly laughs in a long time. Ideal for small towns and full of fun and entertainment. Running time, 74 minutes. Played February 20-21.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

HOLLYWOOD CAVALCADE: Don Ameche, Alice Faye, Buster Keaton, Stuart Erwin—The old Keystone Cops and the pie throwing was the best part of this. The rest is just average entertainment. What we need is more slapstick. Make them laugh and they will come back. Running time, 96 minutes. Played March 4-5.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. Very small town and rural patronage.

HONEYMOON'S OVER, THE: Stuart Erwin, Marjorie Weaver, Patric Knowles—Double featured with "Charlie Chan at Treasure Island." Just playing time wasted. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 1.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. General patronage.

LITTLE OLD NEW YORK: Alice Faye, Fred MacMurray, Richard Greene, Brenda Joyce—One of those shows that was built above the picture. Don't go to any extra expense to play this. Fox should give Faye better parts. Running time, 100 minutes.—W. O. Dickens, Myers Theatre, Nashville, N. C. General patronage.

MAN WHO WOULDN'T TALK, THE: Lloyd Nolan, Jean Rogers—Good picture; fair business. Lacks star power. Running time, 74 minutes. Played March 5.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

PACK UP YOUR TROUBLES: Jane Withers, Ritz Brothers—Don't let the adverse critics fool you on this one. It is plenty funny in spots. The best I have had from the Ritz Brothers. Had good draw. Business above average. Running time, 75 minutes. Played February 23-24.—J. N. Wells, Wells Theatre, Kingsland, Ga. Very small town and rural patronage.

RAINS CAME, THE: Myrna Loy, Tyrone Power, George Brent, Brenda Joyce, Maria Ouspenskaya—An excellent production which had enough of everything to please our audience 100 per cent. Maria Ouspenskaya (who, I understand, regards herself as the "Russian Oomph Girl") was regarded as the outstanding performer with George Brent, Myrna Loy and Brenda Joyce following in that order. As for Tyrone Power, well, it was the consensus of opinion here that he was about as poor as Maria was good, coming far from measuring up to his usually fine performances. (Miscast, perhaps?). In addition to the excellent acting of most of the cast, the flood and earthquake scenes add greatly to the picture to make it one of the best for 1939. Running time, 102 minutes. Played March 9.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SECOND FIDDLE: Tyrone Power, Sonja Henie, Rudy Vallee, Edna May Oliver—Late in playing this one. Is a good picture but got cold. Edna May Oliver does a swell job. Rudy Vallee isn't so hard to take for once. Tyrone Power keeps up his good average and there is enough else happening to make you think there is something else besides Sonja Henie's skating in the film. Running time, 82 minutes. Played March 6-8.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Andrea Leeds, Al Jolson—Fox should be proud of this as it's one of the best in years. Running time, 86 minutes.—W. O. Dickens, Myers Theatre, Nashville, N. C. General patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Al Jolson, Andrea Leeds—Stand in the lobby with your chest out. Go after it big, especially in the rural districts. The farmers will eat it up. Running time, 82 minutes. Played February 24-26.—Fred Brown, Plymouth and Majestic Theatres, Plymouth, Wis. General patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Al Jolson, Andrea Leeds—For audience value and a picture that pleased all classes, this comes closer to the mark than any that Fox has come through with all season. The minstrel shots were fine. Jolson in blackface has what it takes. Color fine, also recording.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

20,000 MEN A YEAR: Randolph Scott, Preston Foster, Margaret Lindsay—Failed to make film rental. Just an average program picture allocated out of reason. Played February 28-29.—Victor Mantz, New Ogden Theatre, Ogden, Iowa. Small town patronage.

United Artists

ETERNALLY YOURS: Loretta Young, David Niven, Billie Burke, Hugh Herbert, C. Aubrey Smith—Here is a good comedy and do not waste it. Our audience ate it up. Something different and very refreshing. Good for your best days of the week. Running time, 94 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

ETERNALLY YOURS: Loretta Young, David Niven, Billie Burke, C. Aubrey Smith, Hugh Herbert—This is only average entertainment but it did a surprisingly good midweek business.—W. P. McGovern, Ritz Theatre, Loogootee, Ind. Small town and rural patronage.

OF MICE AND MEN: Burgess Meredith, Lon Chaney, Jr., Betty Field—This was a terrific letdown. Monday business was the worst in years. It is the slowest moving picture I believe I ever played and it ends with you wondering what it was all about. Moral is not got over to audience. Their reaction was pitiful Weather good. Just one of those many pictures. Running time, 106 minutes.—W. H. Hoffman, Lamar Theatre, Arthur, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

REAL GLORY, THE: Gary Cooper, Andrea Leeds, David Niven—Worst Sunday business of all time. Lots of action but too much for the women. Played February 25-27.—Victor Mantz, New Ogden Theatre, Ogden, Iowa. Small town patronage.

TRADE WINDS: Fredric March, Joan Bennett, Ann Sothern, Ralph Bellamy—A very mediocre picture. Poor acting by "La Bennett" and March. Ann Sothern and Ralph Bellamy good in their parts, such as they are. I figure that there is about 7,000 feet waste film in this picture and a double reel could tell the story as well or better. Some fair travel scenes but who wants to see them in a feature. I wouldn't play this again even if United offered me money to do so. Running time, 94 minutes. Played March 7-8. —A. R. Dakin, Rice Lake Theatre, Bissett, Manitoba, Canada. Mining community patronage.

WUTHERING HEIGHTS: Merle Oberon, Laurence Olivier, David Niven, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Flora Robson—Not generally liked. Running time, 100 minutes. Played February 13-14.—M. D. Stewart, Texas Theatre, De Leon, Texas. General patronage.

Universal

CHARLIE McCARTHY, DETECTIVE: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy," "Mortimer Snerd," Robert Cummings, Constance Moore—The McCarthy fans came, and that is okay with me, but the picture, outside the McCarthy sequences, was not so good. It finished up as just another gangster picture, of which, as usual, there have been too many.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

CHARLIE McCARTHY, DETECTIVE: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy," "Mortimer Snerd," Robert Cummings, Constance Moore—140 per cent business on a week end, and did the kids come out, and bring pa and ma along! Looks like Universal is going places now. Running time, 77 minutes. Played February 25-27.—J. G. Fair, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa. General patronage.

DANGER ON WHEELS: Richard Arlen, Andy Devine, Peggy Moran—A good picture for any day and will send them out more than satisfied. Running time, 61 minutes. Played February 28-29.—J. G. Fair, Elite Theatre, Laurens, Iowa. General patronage.

GREEN HELL: Joan Bennett, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Vincent Price, John Howard, Alan Hale, George Sanders, George Bancroft—The title kept most patrons away except those who go for these nerve racking jungle adventure stories. A lot of stars wasted with a badly faked story which ended like most serials, in the thickest of the mystery. Business below normal. Running time, 87 minutes. Played March 4-5.—Roy W. Waller, Roy Theatre, New Concord, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

HAWAIIAN NIGHTS: Johnny Downs, Constance Moore, Mary Carlisle, Matty Melneck and His Orchestra—Here is a dandy program picture. It fairly effervesces with musical fun and excitement. Melneck's orchestra plays some swell tunes. Will please any audience on family night or its equivalent. Audience reaction very good. Played to good business. Running time, 65 minutes. Played February 27.—W. H. Hoffman, Lamar Theatre, Arthur, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

INVISIBLE MAN RETURNS, THE: Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Vincent Price, Nan Grey—A murder mystery plus "Topper" technique. A good demonstration in trick photography. A very fantastic story that gets plenty of laughs from your audience, if any. Not as good as the "Topper" pictures. Poor midweek business. Running time, 81 minutes. Played February 28-29.—Roy W. Waller, Roy Theatre, New Concord, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

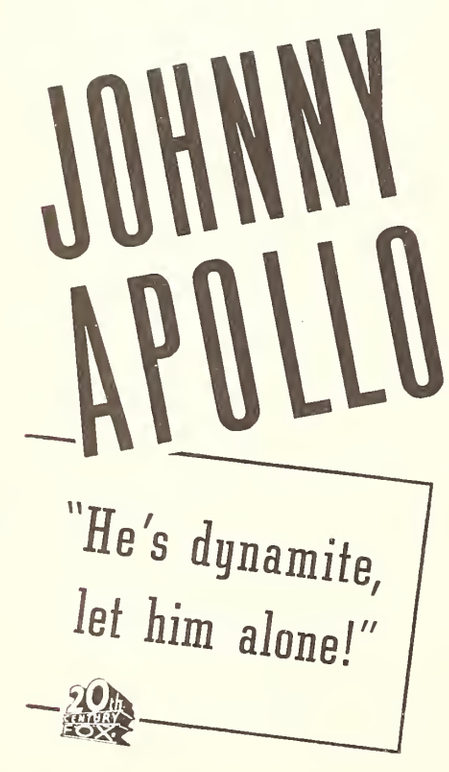
TOWER OF LONDON: Basil Rathbone, Boris Karloff, Nan Grey, Ian Hunter—Very gruesome but well done. Men liked it but ladies didn't care for execution scenes. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 4-6.—Coombes and Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

UNDER-PUP, THE: Gloria Jean, Robert Cummings, Nan Grey, C. Aubrey Smith, Beulah Bondi, Virginia Weidler—Swell show. Gloria Jean nice little singer and nice story and supporting cast. Running time, 88 minutes. Played March 1-3.—Coombes and Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

WHEN TOMORROW COMES: Irene Dunne, Charles Boyer—Good show. Different type of story made a pleasant change. Running time, 91 minutes. Played March 7-9.—Coombes and Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

CHILD IS BORN, A: Geraldine Fitzgerald, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George—A more enjoyable and entertaining picture than I was expecting, and business was slightly above average during midweek.—W. P. McGovern, Ritz Theatre, Loogootee, Ind. Small town and rural patronage.



DEAD END KIDS ON DRESS PARADE: "Dead End Kids," John Litel—We ran this on Saturday and naturally it didn't come up to a western picture, so much in demand by our Saturday patronage. Nevertheless, it is a nice little picture and should do well on a week day run or family night. The "Dead End Kids" are growing up fast but the picture is suited to their age and talents. Running time, 65 minutes. Played February 24.—Mrs. W. A. Wight, Rex Theatre, Konawa, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

DEAD END KIDS ON DRESS PARADE: "Dead End Kids," John Litel—Good, what little there was. Entirely too short. Only average business. Played February 22-23.—Joe E. Edwards, Liberty Theatre, Johnston, S. C. Small town patronage.

HEART OF THE NORTH: Dick Foran, Gloria Dickson, Gale Page—Good action type picture in color. Due to playing so late we had a poor print which was pretty much chopped up. Business was normal and the Friday-Saturday fans told us they liked the picture. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 1-2. —H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

HELL'S KITCHEN: Margaret Lindsay, Ronald Reagan, "Dead End Kids"—Typical "Dead End Kids" performance, which pleased the few patrons who came to see it. I think this feature would have done better on a Friday-Saturday date. We played it on a Wednesday-Thursday date and we can't do any business on these nights, regardless of what picture we have. Running time, 81 minutes. Played March 6-7. —H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

INVISIBLE STRIPES: George Raft, Humphrey Bogart, William Holden, Jane Bryan—Good picture. Well received. Comments good, although it's really just another gangster picture. However, it has a little more moral to it than the most gangster pictures. Rait does a great job with a difficult part. Personally think that picture would have been improved if they had not let Rait have been successful in the bank robbery scenes. However, the public liked it, so who am I to criticize. Running time, 82 minnies. Played February 17-19.—Fred Brown, Plymouth and Majestic Theatres, Plymouth, Wis. General patronage.

JUAREZ: Paul Muni, Bette Davis, Brian Aherne, John Garfield, Claude Rains—Although a good enough show, there was nothing that rated a Paul Muni, Brian Aherne made the show. Would have been better if much shorter. Running time, 117 minutes. Played February 22-24.—Coombes and Hudson, Empress Theatre, Lloydminster, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

NANCY DREW AND THE HIDDEN STAIRCASE: Bonita Granville, Frankie Thomas, John Litel—A good program picture. Good on a double bill. Don't expect it to stand alone. Running time, 60 minutes. Played January 26-28.—Fred Brown, Plymouth Theatre, Plymouth, Wis. General patronage.

PRIDE OF THE BLUE GRASS: Edith Fellows, James McCallion—Doubled with "Law of the Pampas" with average business. Played March 1-2.—Victor Mantz, New Ogden Theatre, Ogden, Iowa. Small town patronage.

PRIVATE LIVES OF ELIZABETH AND ESSEX: Bette Davis, Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland—Why, oh, why, do Warner Bros. have to give such great stars such poor parts to play as they did Davis in this picture. Not worth playing. Running time, 106 minutes.—W. O. Dickens, Myers Theatre, Nashville, N. C. General patronage.

ROARING TWENTIES, THE: James Cagney, Priscilla Lane, Humphrey Bogart, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George—Good picture, although the women are afraid of it. It's got plenty of action and Cagney does a great job. You wouldn't think Priscilla Lane was the same gal that weeps through "Four Wives." Running time, 106 minutes. Played January 27-29.—Fred Brown, Plymouth Theatre, Plymouth, Wis. General patronage.

ROARING TWENTIES, THE: James Cagney, Priscilla Lane, Humphrey Bogart, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George—Just another gangster picture with below average business. The music throughout the feature was all that kept it from being a complete flop.—Victor Mantz, New Ogden Theatre, Ogden, Iowa. Small town patronage.

WINGS OF THE NAVY: George Brent, John Payne, Olivia de Havilland, Frank McHugh—Although old, it still has box office potentialties.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LAND OF ALASKA NELLIE: FitzPatrick Traveltalk—Another very good colored subject which is of interest to every American. Too bad all of the school kiddies can't see these subjects. FARMYARD SYMPHONY: Walt Disney Cartoons—Here is one of the cleverest cartoons we have ever played. SKY FIGHTERS: Adventures of the Newsreel Cameraman—A very interesting educational short subject which shows what our "young airmen" must go through before they finally make the grade. Any audience will appreciate the opportunity of seeing this one, which has some of the most unusual photography it has been our pleasure to see, namely, the shadows which were reflected on the sand as the planes in flight formation flew over numerous sand dunes. The shadows resembled porpoises in a playful mood. Running time, 11 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.
